"IRELAND'S PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHTER AFTER REVOLT," ARNOLD BENNETT WRITES

Famous Author Says But Few of Those In Rebellion Knew What Was Coming Until They Were Involved In Open Treason—Influences In America and Germany Largely Responsible.

By ARNOLD BENNETT.

Author of "Clayhanger," "The Great Adventure," "The Matador of the Fine Towns," "The Regent" and other widely read novels.
Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 25.

IN common with a majority of the Sinn Feiners themselves, I was considerably startled by the Irish rebellion. Just before it occurred I had been studying the everlasting Irish question, and this sanguinary revolt did not seem to agree with the conclusions I had drawn. As soon as the firing was over and men's souls calmed down a little I sought to inform myself as to the realities behind the tragic and tawdry theatrical display. I need not detail my inquiries. It suffices to say that I was fortunate. In no quarter was my desire for information balked. I obtained new facts, but the important result of the inquest in my own mind was a rearrangement of the old facts into their proper perspective.

ARNOLD BENNETT.

The revolutionary movement was not pure Sinn Fein. The problem of Ireland, and in particular the problem of Dublin, with its unsurpassed slums, is not purely a problem of interracial politics. The chief sources of discontent are not political but social. Connolly commanded the late rising, and Connolly was a disciple of Larkin. Larkin has said, and said often, that he would not give a fig for home rule if he could insure a minimum wage of $5 a week for all workers. Therein he showed his sense and a true appreciation of values. Again, there are, or were, in Ireland sundry personalities who for political crimes, including homicide, had suffered severe punishment under British law. They needed revenge. These three types, labor insurgents, unadulterated Sinn Fein and apostle of vengeance, had often quarreled, but finally they coalesced under the stimulus of a common end and made rebellion. Connolly represented the first type, MacNeil the second and Clarke, the old Fenian, the third. The directing element was the labor element, not the Sinn Fein element.

Organization Quite Prussian

IN its constitution the rebel organization was autocratic to the point of Prussianism. Discipline was absolutely rigid. The executive consisted of a very small handful of men who knew everything; the rank and file knew nothing, and their sole privilege was to obey. It is quite clear, from the admissions of deported rebels, that when they fell in on Easter Monday they had no adequate idea of what awaited them. They expected a brief and showy demonstration in force, and no more. They went to their assigned posts, and immediately the leaders began to use their rifles, thus committing the rank and file irrevocably to the adventure. The rank and file could not go back home or even pause for reflection, and the rank and file were very young. They were pathetically young. The mass of those deported are of sophomore age.

Now the autocratic principle is always the principle of secret societies. It is the principle, for example, of the Clan-na-Gael. It is, indeed, essential to secrecy. It works excellently provided the autocrats be wise and the slaves abject. In the Irish case neither condition was fulfilled. The leaders were gullible and rash, and many of the slaves had such objection to Prussian ideals that they seceded before the culminating event.

External Causes of Revolt

THE explanation of the very rapid development of the rebellion is twofold. It lies both in internal causes and in external causes. The main internal causes were as follows:

1. The vigor and success of the recruiting campaign in Ireland, which had aroused jealousy and fear in the counsels of sedition. Ireland's general loyalty to the allies was in part the origin of her misfortune.

2. Mistrust of the Nationalist parliamentary party on account of its enthusiastic official support of the British War Government and of its consent to postpone home rule.

3. Fear of conscription for Ireland—an absurd fear.

4. The influence of the younger priests, and especially of those who spring from the laboring class and are implacable on the subject of labor grievances, very legitimate grievances.

The external causes were the Clan-na-Gael in the United States and support promised through the Clan-na-Gael and through other minor channels by the German Government.

The Clan-na-Gael is an interesting and rather human society, so far as I have ascertained. Its autocrats completely exclude respectability. They will have no truck with that quality. Its funds are drawn partly from members' subscriptions and partly from Germany. All subsidies are paid direct to a small secret executive. Accounts are not furnished to members. That graft on a mighty scale is unknown to the Clan-na-Gael appears to me improbable. Still, subscribers and foreign Governments occasionally demand something for their money, and at such periods the Clan-na-Gael has set about to do something. No doubt it does as little as it can, because its existence depends on the continuance of the Irish problem. It was and is territically opposed to the home rule act, for the reason that home rule would put an end to the Irish problem.

German-Irish Propaganda

THE Clan-na-Gael was delighted and greatly invigorated when the Irish Volunteers were formed in answer to the Ulster Volunteers of Carson, and when the Irish Volunteers split in two unequal parts, the loyal majority following Redmond, the Clan-na-Gael was still more delighted. It nursed the irreconcilable remnant with literature and with arms and generally luxuriated in Irish domestic strife. It openly discussed the project of using the volunteers against Britain, whether home rule became law or not. In the Gaelic American of June 6. 1914, it was suggested that the volunteers should be officered from the Sixty-ninth Regiment of New York.

When the war broke out the grandiose scheme of the German-Irish propaganda was initiated in the United States. American citizens were wont to encounter it viva voce in front of the newspaper offices and in hotels, subways and trolley cars. In spite of the extreme multiplicity of its agents and of the majestic indifference of the British Government to pro-ally American newspapers, the scheme failed, but it cost a lot of money.

In August, 1915, the Clan-na-Gael was obviously hard up and its supporters were obviously discontented. The executive seem to have got an imposing grant from Germany. They collected heartily also from their members. A defense-of-Ireland fund was started and a collecting card sent out. The phraseology of this card, which I have seen, leaves not the slightest doubt as to the object of the fund. The collection was not a success, and much of the German money apparently vanished in graft. What remained was used against the allies.

Irish-American Activity

AFTER the Irish race convention held in New York in March of this year a new appeal was made, in which occur the following words:

"Not only must the organization be made great in numbers, but in material resources. It must be put in a position successfully to grapple with the great problem which it has been called into existence to solve by giving Ireland the help which she so badly needs in this hour of her great danger and of her opportunity."

And there was a noticeable voyaging of certain Irish-Americans between the United States and England, Ireland and Germany. Then came Casement, Easter-tide, and the rising.

The rising failed, but it did to a certain small extent accomplish a diversion of military energy and a disturbance of the warlike concentration which Germany hoped for. Germany bluffed the rebels in a manner characteristically cynical. Even the modern rifles which she promised turned out to be obsolete Russian rifles. The price, in addition to money paid by Germany, for this transient success was a heavy price. It was the complete loss of all Irish sympathy.

With regard to the actual outbreak, it is established that as late as Easter Saturday the component parts of the rebel leadership were actually at variance as to the advisability of a revolt, the pure Sinn Fein element, under MacNeil, arguing from the Casement fiasco and the arms fiasco, was against an immediate insurrection, but the highly truculent and rash labor element under Connolly bore down MacNeil on the Sunday evening and the rebellion was ordained.

The lack of premeditation accounted for the first facile success. It also accounted for the rapidity of the collapse. The state of mind of the leaders was such that they actually tried to obtain guidance in tactics from British officers whom them made prisoners! Perhaps only in Ireland could a thing so richly humorous happen.

The British soldiers had a mixed reception. In one house they would receive cakes and ale, and in the next bullets. The majority of citizens were markedly sympathetic; the minority virulent and treacherous in the extreme. Upon occasion the methods of the soldiers may have been summary, but their behavior was incomparably superior to that of the insurrectionary bands. To say this is not necessarily to accuse the true Sinn Feiners themselves of frightfulness. It must be remembered that the dregs of Dublin were joyously abroad, and that these dregs

"NATIONALIZING THE UNITED STATES"

Written for the Post-Dispatch

By Theodore Roosevelt

"Altogether Too Many of Our Citizens Have Their Minds Centered on Europe—They Seemed to Be Absorbed in Asking, 'What Will Happen to Germany, to Austria, to England or to Russia?' Let Them Quit Trying to Shape Our Politics to Meet Interests of Foreign Nations."

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
Former President of the United States.
(Written Expressly for the Post-Dispatch.)
(Copyright, 1916, by Theodore Roosevelt)

"AFTER the war Europe will be the new land and America the old land," was the remark with which a statesman, returning from a year's travel in the belligerent countries, foretold the future.

In European countries the development of a whole generation has been crowded by the stress of war into two short years. Great waves of popular emotion have unified and solidified the peoples of the warring countries. The fellowship of common danger and of the struggles shoulder to shoulder in the common work has carried them to new forms of national organization.

Some of the governments abroad have already learned and the others are rapidly learning to mobilize the energies of their entire population to a single task. The financial power of the banking structure in each country has worked hand in hand with the Government, exactly as the Government has worked with the bankers. Big business has been organized and encouraged by the Government so that it has become a new source of national power. Labor and the public have learned to work in closer co-operation with their business men, and the business men of each country, in proportion as that country has been successful, have conditioned their work on a spirit of frank accommodation to the needs of the public and of labor. In short, necessity has taught the nations to discover latent sources of power.

The progress that has been made will carry over into peace and will tell in the organization for the work of peace. The people—the business men, the farmers, the wage workers—of the United States must be able to match themselvs against the nations abroad, when they shall have been strengthened and solidified by their adherence to their various national ideals.

More than ever it is true today that a really great national life is possible to us only if we strive, not merely as individual men, but using our collective strength as citizens of a mighty nation, building and transmitting to our children a social structure wherein we have used and profited by the accumulated forces of the past.

"Patriotism—Unconditioned by the Hyhen—Must Be Real"

THE big things of the modern world we can accomplish only if we clasp the hands of our fellow men and work together with them for great social ends. Our patriotism—unconditioned by the hyphen—must be real. Our loyalty to our country must be shown in the event of war. It must also be shown in the far longer times of peace. It must unite us by the closest bonds of human fellowship in co-operation for the education of our children, so that we, and the generations that come after us, may be ready for the struggle for mastery over the forces of nature, and for the development of the highest human powers. Through union, in an integrated and socialized nation, we can best win our food and shelter, we can combat disease and train our children for the finer things of life. We do not strive merely for mechanized human activity. Our ideal of democracy is socialized energy. We wish to conserve our human resources. We wish to conserve our natural resources.

If we are wise we will keep the water power of the country in the possession of the people of the country as a whole. If we are wise we will realize what soil conservation means and will make it the business of the whole public to see that the fertility of the soil is not impaired. In a really remarkable pamphlet by Vladimir Simkovitch it is shown that a chief factor, probably the chief factor, in the fall of Rome, and then of the Roman Empire, was soil improvement and exhaustion.

Is the United States a nation knitted together by a great national ideal, with conscious knowledge of the things for which it wishes to stand? Are its citizens integrated into an efficient body by proper organization in business corporations, not only in private life, but through their city, State or national Government? Does the present organization of our public life bring the fit man into his place, and does it subordinate the personal, local and provincial interests to the public purpose? Has the American national idea so gripped the hearts and lives of all our citizens that differences of section, of race, of creed or of previous nationality melt away before the common American citizenship? Is the flag of the United States today a symbol of such unity? Until we can answer these questions in the affirmative, we cannot claim to be a genuinely efficient nation.

Third Great Crisis in Our History Confronts Us

AMERICANISM—to us the vitally important issue of our day—means a reaffirmation of our purpose to be a great nation in the world. The third great crisis in the history of our people confronts us. Originally, in 1776, our forefathers were divided into 13 colonies, each of which had its separate traditions, its peculiar viewpoint; in some cases, its separate language and racial stock. The economic interests in some colonies differed so strongly that even after the federation tariff walls were raised by one colony against the other. Washington, and the group of men who rallied around him, realized that these 13 American colonies had interests in common that were greater than the sum of all the other separate interests. They believed that each group of colonists should sever its ties with the motherland in Europe and become a part of the new American nation. They believed that there existed on this continent the basis for a new nation that would be separate and distinct from all the nations of the old world. They, and the other patriots of the Revolution, staked their lives and their fortunes on this ideal, and with their success a new nation, the United States of America, was born.

Even then the separatist tendencies could not be wholly overcome and the mutual distrust of the colonies, which crystallized into the doctrine of States' rights, was so strong that the powers of the National Government could be developed only gradually and in the face of absolute necessity. Nation-wide transportation, the railroad, the telegraph and telephone, the necessity of developing national industry along national lines and under national supervision, were able only gradually to force a better organization of our national Government. Even today the structure of our Government lags a generation behind the economic and social development that has taken place.

National unity was the question around which the second great crisis in our history turned. Lincoln placed the union, in point of importance, even above the question of slavery. He, with the countless thousands who fought and died under his leadership, established for the second time the ideal that the United States of America was a nation one and indivisible; that no local, sectional or racial interests may ever be permitted to endanger our existence as an undivided nation.

"Our Unity of Action and Purpose Is Endangered"

THE full conclusions of Lincoln's life have not yet been drawn. The idea of economic expansion, the preoccupation of our people with the opening up and conquest of our vast western country, created problems that absorbed the people's attention, to the exclusion of the needed work of the complete nationalizing of the United States. The European war has brought to the surface our differences. It has emphasized the existence of old racial ties. The unity of action and purpose of our people is endangered. Our citizens have tended to divide into racial and sectional groups, revived Old World racial feelings, and business interests, and have led sections of our people into championship of or antagonism to various European powers. It seemed for a time as if our national ideal was not strong enough to subordinate these jarring factors. Altogether too many of our citizens have their minds centered in Europe. They seem to be chiefly absorbed in asking, "What will happen to Germany, to Austria, to Russia or to England?" Let them quit trying to shape our politics to meet the interests of foreign nations. Let them devote their energies and thought to the building of a stronger and better America. America faces grave problems. She needs resolute and unified action on the part of all her citizens. She cannot get it until they act only as Americans—not as Americans mixed with something else.

Our prime duty, infinitely our most important duty, is the duty of preparedness. Unless we prepare in advance we cannot, when the crisis comes, be true to ourselves. If we cannot be true to ourselves it is absolutely certain that we shall be false to everyone else. If we are not able to safeguard our national honor and interest, we shall make ourselves an object of scorn and derision if we try to stand up for the rights of others. We have been sinking into the position of the China of the Occident; and we will do well to remember that China—pacifist China—has not only been helpless to keep its own territory from spoliation and its own people from subjugation, but has also been helpless to exert even the minutest degree of influence on behalf of right dealing among other nations.

The preparedness movement will result in a better organization of our Government for all purposes. The effort to organize adequately along the lines of the preparedness movement will give us a Government more efficient in performing the functions of peace. The perfection of the system of universal social insurance against accident, sickness and old age which Germany possesses was rendered possible chiefly because of the discipline, the sense of order and the power of co-operation that were established through universal military training.

Urges Minister Von Jagow

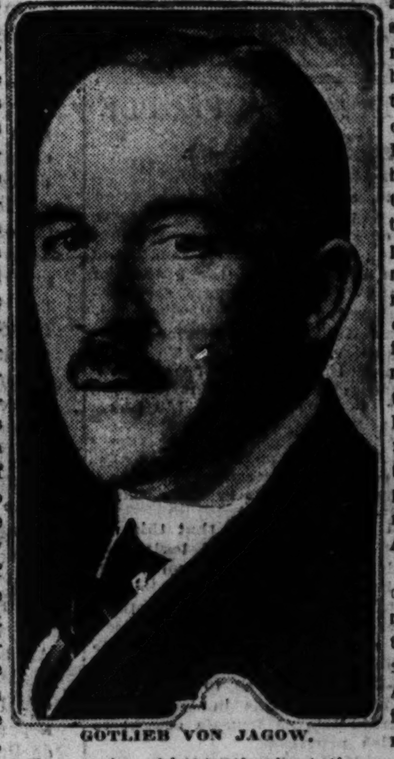
In Frank Interview, German Secretary of Foreign Affairs Declares His Country Has Not Had a Square Deal Before the Bar of Public Opinion in This Country.

THE following interview with Gotlieb von Jagow, the German Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who does not disguise his impatience with the United States, was obtained in Berlin on April 10 by Franz Hugo Krebs. It has been reported lately in connection with the Cabinet changes in Germany that Von Jagow may resign his post. The interview was sent out of Berlin by three different routes, but the only copy that reached this country was the one Mr. Krebs brought home with him.

By Franz Hugo Krebs
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, April 12, 1916.

DAY before yesterday I spent a little more than an hour with Gottlieb von Jagow, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of the German Empire. Herr von Jagow is a member of the Prussian Cabinet; he was graduated from the University of Berlin, and the beginning of his official career was in the civil service. Afterward he began his diplomatic career in Rome, and then held several other diplomatic posts. The last diplomatic position he held, before being appointed to his present office in 1913, was that of Ambassador to Italy. In the army Von Jagow holds the rank of Major in the Hussar Regiment No. 3 at Rathenow, the same regiment to which belongs the Duke of Brunswick, husband of the Emperor's only daughter.



GOTLIEB VON JAGOW.

I did not look forward to meeting Secretary von Jagow with any great degree of pleasure. This was due to a misunderstanding on my part, as it turned out, as I thought he was the Von Jagow who, as President of the Berlin police, had, a few years ago, "rough housed" the Socialists and broken up their meetings.

Secretary von Jagow is about 50 years of age, and looks it; he is not merely a gentleman, but he has a very gentle manner rare enough in our country, but decidedly rarer here than it is with us. He is about 5 feet 5 inches in height, but he has a quiet charm that is far more commanding than height. He has steel blue eyes that flash with determination or twinkle with humor, in fact, express more fully than the tone of his voice his feeling about the particular matter under discussion. His cheeks show scars, indicating that he belonged to a fighting corps when he was in the university, and I learned from his Aid de Camp, Baron von Pittwitz, that at Bonn he belonged to the Corps Borussia, of which the Emperor and Crown Prince are both members.

Newspapers Disappoint Him

AFTER we had shaken hands Secretary von Jagow began to speak in a low, even tone, and there was little need for me to ask any questions; it was evident that he had his mind very full of America and was prepared to express himself. Leaning back in his chair, he said:

"You came here last year bringing with you a letter signed by an American who had had great experience in connection with newspaper work. In the letter it was represented that Americans would favor the reopening of direct cable communication between Germany and the United States. The Imperial Government, in February, 1915, communicated a proposal to the United States through Ambassador Gerard regarding the reopening of the cable; the United States submitted it to Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador at Washington, and, as far as I know, the British Government has not even replied to your Government.

"Now, we never had more than a faint hope that the British would be willing to have the cable reopened and so give American newspaper representatives in Germany an opportunity to send out their news without its being subjected to delay or change by the British censor, but we did think that the proposition of the Imperial Government would have received more editorial support in the American newspapers, and that it would have aroused more interest than it apparently did among the masses of the American people.

"Every American newspaper representative tells us how anxious the American public is to get the news, the real truth about the war, and yet when the Imperial Government offered to let American newspaper men use the cable in the event of its being reopened, and also to allow the news sent to the American press to go out uncensored, as long as it was not prejudicial to the German military plan of campaign, it hardly made a ripple among your news-loving people.

"You also remember, Mr. Krebs, that the Imperial Government offered to pay the entire cost of repairing the cable and putting it into commission, and was willing that President Wilson should appoint censors at the American end of the cable in order to supervise all messages transmitted. Now?" the secretary added, "what have you to say about this?"

Minister Turns Interviewer

SECRETARY VON JAGOW looked me right in the eyes and there was a lull for ten or fifteen seconds in what had been a decidedly one-sided conversation. I had come to the Foreign Office expecting to interview Secretary von Jagow, and being put on the witness stand and cross-examined, as it were, was not an entirely enjoyable change in my program. Finally I said, speaking (for me) very slowly, so that Secretary von Jagow would understand every word:

"As to the response of the United States, it was all that could be expected; nothing could have given our Government the necessary power to oblige Great Britain to accede to the proposition of the Imperial Government but an aroused and active sentiment in the United States, among the masses of the people, in favor of reopening direct cable communication between the two countries.

"If your Excellency recalls in full the suggestion made to your Government regarding the reopening of the cable, it was represented that the masses of the people in the United States would be interested in it for what we call 'human interest' and news reasons. The Imperial

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Poultney Bigelow on Casement.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I would like to take exception to an assertion made by Poultney Bigelow in his comment prefixed to a series of letters by Sir Roger Casement. This Poultney Bigelow, besides mentioned as an American, is introduced as the author of "The History of the German Struggle for Liberty, 1806-1848;" "Prussian Memories," "The Borderland of Czar and Kaiser," "The German Emperor, and His Neighbors," etc., etc., etc. To quote:

> "Casement commenced his career of madness through a too strenuous study of Irish mythology masquerading under the name of history. Little by little he became a victim of that species of auto-intoxication which culminates in the orator who delights a St. Patrick's day banquet by frothing at the mouth as he portrays an imaginary paradise converted into a howling wilderness by the cruelty of Saxon domination."

Most fair-minded men will agree that this assertion is broad enough to admit of legitimate difference of opinion and lots of it, and I will hazard the guess he will find none to acknowledge him as the infallible interpreter of history. Many no doubt were astonished when they read the following (It might be termed by puerile writers an "inaccuracy.")—to quote again: "Casement's latter-day dream was to forbid the use of English words or wares in Ireland, to Hibernize the Emerald Isle as Prussia sought to Germanize her Polish provinces."

Then what of the efforts of the Gaelic League, whose sole purpose for being is to disinter the ancient Irish language and give it decent burial alongside the other dead languages in the halls of learning? Imagine, Mr. Editor, the gentle Sir Roger browbeating or in other ways forcing upon an unwilling people a language other than their own.

This from a friend, too. A fine American this, who would cast aspersions upon any peoples, be they near or far, who have never perhaps as much as harmed a hair of his head.

Deliver us from such friends!

Who Owned This Family Album?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

About 1001 I bought for unpaid storage a number or articles in an auction house in New York City, among which was a photograph album lettered on the outside, "E. Elizabeth Moss."

These photographs, 114 in number, represent several generations, a large number of which seem to have been taken all over the United States and Europe, and to be of a period of 40 or 50 years ago.

The family, from the portraits, would appear to be an old English family, who, perhaps, formerly lived in Yorkshire. These photographs throughout represent a highly intelligent people and I feel that the loss to whoever these photographs belong is absolutely irreparable and I cannot destroy these valuable family records without first making every attempt in my power to put them in the hands of those to whom they belong.

In New York City I took the directory and wrote to every family of "Moss" living in the city, and none claimed the album or knew anything about it.

Moving from New York City to my present address, this album was packed away, and just now comes to light again.

Perhaps your paper may feel regarding this as I do, in which case, will feel disposed to publish this letter or such part of it as you deem proper, with the request to other papers to copy, in the hope of finding the owner of this, to me, most sacred family record.

Elihu Root.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

All reports from the East indicate a marked preference for Elihu Root for the presidency. There are a good many quiet, thinking, conservative people in the Central West who believe he is the best man on the political horizon. His views, as expressed in the public prints, have been conspicuous for good, solid, common sense. He is a man of business and of full mental development; one who uses his brains and observes the pulse of "the people." He is not one to be carried away by a wave of impulse, and would, in the writer's estimation, most ably represent the commonwealth as a whole. Next to Bryan I favor Elihu Root for the greatest office within the gift (?) of the people.

W. M. BARNUM.

AMERICAN PREPAREDNESS.

The movement for universal compulsory military training and service, as the only adequate and democratic mode of national defense against aggression, is making progress.

President Wilson told the delegation from the American Union Against Militarism that his mind was open on the subject, and that compulsory military training was not against American tradition. In his own words: "To use the phrase of a friend of mine: 'My mind is to let on the subject.' I will say merely that that was not contrary to American tradition."

Proving that his mind is open, he conferred last week with Senator Chamberlain and Representative Hay, chairmen of the committees on military affairs in the two branches of Congress. While no public utterance was made on the subject, it is known that Senator Chamberlain came from the conference with a determination to press the passage of his bill making military training for the army and navy and military service of the Government obligatory on all able-bodied citizens. The bill is a combination of the Swiss and Australian systems, and if passed and put into effect would assure a vast reserve of well-trained officers, citizen soldiers and sailors, subject to call at the country's need.

On the subject of obligatory training and service the President, as a thorough student of American history, knew whereof he spoke when he said it was "not contrary to American tradition." The utterances of all the great Presidents bear out his statement.

Washington, with his bitter experience of the undependability of an untrained state militia under short term enlistments, urged Congress repeatedly to provide for the military training and obligatory service of citizens. He said again and again that "no militia would ever acquire the habits necessary to resist a regular force."

He urged upon Congress and the nation the desirability of preparing for war in time of peace. On Jan. 8, 1790, he said:

> To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace. A free people ought not only to be armed but disciplined; to which end an uniform and well digested plan is requisite.

Again on Dec. 3, 1793, he said to Congress:

> I cannot recommend to your notice measures for the fulfillment of our duties to the rest of the world without again pressing upon you the necessity of placing ourselves in a condition of complete defense and of exacting from them the fulfillment of their duties toward us. The United States ought not to indulge a persuasion that, contrary to the order of human events, they will forever keep at a distance those painful appeals to arms with which the history of every other nation abounds. There is a right due to the United States among nations which will be withheld if not absolutely lost by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to secure peace, one of the most powerful instruments of our rising prosperity, it must be known that we are at all times ready for war.

Summing up his arguments in a special message to Congress soon after his inauguration, Washington said:

> Every state possesses not only the right of personal service from its members, but the right to regulate the service on principles of equality for the general defense. All being bound, none can complain of injustice on being obliged to perform his equal proportion. Therefore, it ought to be a permanent rule that those who in youth decline or refuse to subject themselves to the course of military education established by the laws should be considered as unworthy of public trust or public honors and be excluded therefrom accordingly.

Subsequently, Washington prepared a bill providing for the training of the youth of the land, beginning at the age of 18 or 19 years, with 30 days' training the first year and for subsequent years to 21, 10 days training each year, and requiring all citizens to have a certificate of training "as an indispensable qualification for exercising any of the rights of a free citizen."

Jefferson perceived and urged the vital connection between the rights and duties of citizenship and the personal obligation of citizens to defend the country. In his letter to Thomas Copper, in 1814, he wrote:

> The Greeks and Romans had no standing armies, yet they defended themselves. The Greeks by their laws and the Romans by the spirit of their people, took care to put into the hands of their rulers no such engine of oppression as a standing army. Their system was to make every man a soldier and pledge him to repair to the standard of his country whenever that was reared. This made them invincible, and the same remedy will make us so.

Previous to that he had written to Monroe:

> Every citizen should be a soldier. This was the case with the Greeks and Romans and must be that of every free state.

As early as 1790 he wrote Monroe: "Whatever enables us to go to war secures our peace."

Lincoln, with grievous experience of the unreliability of untrained volunteers and of the delays caused by lack of preparation in time of peace, and by lack of sufficient volunteers when called for, found it necessary to resort to conscription in order to crush the Confederacy. He stood on the universal obligation which citizens owe to the country, and justified compulsory service as the logical method of enforcing this obligation. On the subject of conscription he wrote, Aug. 15, 1864:

> The principle of the draft, which simply is involuntary or enforced service, is not new. It has been practiced in all ages of the world. It was well known to the framers of our Constitution as one of the modes of raising armies at the time they placed in that instrument the provision that "The Congress shall have power to raise and support armies." It had been used just before in establishing our independence, and it was also used under the Constitution in 1812. Wherein is the peculiar hardship now? Shall we shrink from the necessary means to maintain our free government which our grandfathers employed to establish it and our own fathers have already employed once to maintain it? Are we degenerate? Has the manhood of our race run out?

Grant, McKinley and other Presidents who had been in war and who faced war, urged adequate preparation for defense in time of peace. These great Americans, who understood democracy and were thoroughly imbued with American principles, recognized that a trained citizen soldiery, organized and equipped for national defense, is not militarism. All of them were against militarism. All of them were in favor of the dominance of civil Government over the military. All of them recognized that training the citizen and making him the arm of defense against foreign aggression was the very opposite of militarism. It places the strength of the nation in the hands of the citizens of the nation, of the men who are doing the work of the nation and who would not only oppose militaristic schemes, but would be slow to approve of war; who would not approve of its sacrifices except to defend the liberties, institutions, lives and property of the American people

The obligation of military service, of being prepared to give efficient service, is as clear as the obligation to pay taxes for the support of the Government in peace and the maintenance of armies and navies in war.

The reasons for the adoption of universal compulsory military training and service may thus be summed up:

> It is in accord with American principles and traditions. It is nonmilitaristic. It is democratic. It is economical. It equally distributes the burdens of national defense. It is adequate, efficient, necessary. It removes the necessity of large standing professional armies which make for militarism.

President Wilson might wisely change his open mind into a favorable mind. With his great influence, backed by the strong sentiment among many members of Congress and a potent and growing public opinion, he and the present Democratic Congress have the opportunity to do a great service for the American people.

"DOUBTING THOMASVILLE."

We have just made the discovery that Doubting Thomasville, Mo., is the locus and situs of the great interrogation point that has made this commonwealth famous all over the world as the Show Me State. Thence radiates the wise skepticism and sophisticated incredulity with which shams must reckon, the penetration before which fraud must quail.

Doubting Thomasville establishes its claim to universal distinction as the only town on the map that has never bought a gold brick, bet on a fake foot race, gone crazy over a boom, entertained a hippodrome evangelist or been operated on for appendicitis. It takes no stock in goosebones, divining rods, groundhogs, weather prophets, mining prospectors or railway folders, and stump speakers avoid it on campaign tours. Doubting Thomasville had the distinction, we are reliably informed, of voting against Bryan's 16 to 1 proposition in 1896, and it failed of a single vote for the Bull Moose in 1912. Doubting Thomasville does no business with catalogue houses, and its editor cut out the patent insides of his paper. Doubting Thomasville didn't believe in Dr. Cook, and it never pays C. O. D. for anything without opening the package.

But its principal distinction consists in the fact that the luminous editor of the esteemed Salem Sun, of Salem, Arkansas, the Hon. John Hall himself, originally hailed from there—and we can't help wondering whether he is the living explanation of Thomasville's skepticism or was its skepticism the reason for his leaving?

MILITIA AS A "SECOND LINE."

Eight thousand New York City militia mobilized in 90 minutes, employing motor vehicles, and formed to repel a landing at Sheepshead Bay. But the landing was only "theoretical"

What would have been the speed of the mobilization had the militiamen been summoned to repel an actual landing, to ward off a real, instead of an assumed invasion? How many would have failed to heed the call? Of the much smaller force of Texas militia mobilized for Federal service on the border, 116 men declined to obey the order. In one company 14 insubordinate men were delinquent to the call of duty.

Dependence on the national guard as a force auxiliary to the regular army is vastly increased by the new military bill.

Is efficiency in the national guard of the future represented by New York readiness to respond to sham battle maneuvers or by Texas reluctance to respond to the demand of serious need?

"FROM THE MOUTHS OF BABES."

With a view to further and foster youthful patriotism, the German children have been given an opportunity of expressing themselves; and the German papers have published of these expressions all that the censor permitted.

Besides the stereotyped "Deutschland Ueber Alles" sentiment, some curious questions and sentiments have found expression.

Nearly every tot asked the question "When will this terrible war come to an end?" Another asks, "Why does not God punish England for having invaded Germany?" "Why does not our army force England to give back the food she has stolen from us?" "Why do we not drive the English out of Belgium, and free the Belgian people?" "Why does Germany allow the English to load German soldiers into their cannons?" "Why do we no more hear of Hindenburg?" "Why does our victorious army not take Paris, and end the war?" "Why does the Government feed millions of Russians and English, and let us starve?"

A very general inquiry is "When will papa come home from the war?" and "Why must mother work so hard all day?"

Rosa Hiltgen of Kassel, a 9-year-old girl, has been awarded the prize for the best sentiment expressed. It is:

> May the blood of the field and the tears of the home crystallize into a mighty ruby and diamond; and may these precious stones shine upon the altar of the Fatherland forever.

The most curious suggestion by a child is probably the following by Hilda Wuers of Munich:

> Why does not a U-boat get underneath of England and blow up the whole island with all its savage people?

OUR BATTLE-MEMORIED HOSTS.

By F. Frederick Bliss.

TODAY our drums with muffled beat enrank again the men
Who half a century ago strode forth from war's fierce din.

See how they bend and, tottering, fail to strike the old-time tread
That brought them victors from the fields where left they millions dead!

Millions! their sacrifice and ours, whose memories today
We conjure heart and soul to find the fittest word to say.

Look o'er our land by Heaven blessed with breadth for empire meant
And note the burial spots where lie those princes battle bent.

Where find you hamlet where no crypt has grave and flag and MAN
To challenge you and memory start of days when dark floods ran

With blood to sweep a purpose high to thronement as the stars—
Fixed as the purposes of God, the battled at by wars?

Where gather not as gather we o'er all Columbia's world
Our myriad-hosted celebrants of an event that whirled

A wrong to sepulture so deep that ages ne'er may find
Its bones or blackened memory to fling to ruthless wind?

Ah, age, before the years shall whirl that doom thee back to dust,
Join once again the grateful throng that do what mortals must.

If memories unsmirched they'd bear to bournes where silent lie
Our hero-host whose deathless deeds we swear shall never die.

Come, fathers, mothers! Ah, how quick you fill enmillioned lines
That march to graves by land and sea that heave neath sighing pines!

Come, youth! Your step is quick toward times, declared by battle's boom,
That all that hearts can give 'twill take to save from hellward doom.

Your culture, doom-times culturized, must stock a nation-mart
Whence powers that be may draw the might of blended head and heart.

Swift be your feet to answer calls from frighted earth and heavens,
Remembering your hearts are yeast which lump immortal leavens.

Let babes alimp on mothers' breasts—thence drawing now the suck
That makes for something more than chance or all the imps of luck—

Let babes awake from breastful joys—anticipate the years
When they must front fate's fiery times and quench a nation's fears.

So, marching all, both age and youth, a nation grateful moves
Toward marbled sepultures and toward our grave-o'er-weeping groves.

Awept, achanted and aprayed, the day moves solemn out
With nothing left to hot regret and nothing left to doubt.

Come on, fond years, ablaze or sheened, we front you, hid in him
Whose purposes we watch unfold from out the enmantling dim!

PEACE.

IT seems that everybody in Europe is for peace on his own terms. The Kaiser is for peace if the allies will acknowledge themselves licked and take in the settlement what is popularly known as the loser's end. The British are for peace if the Kaiser will own himself walloped and agree to give up his navy to get his colonies back. The French are for peace on terms to be announced when the Germans are put out of business. The Russians are for peace when they get Constantinople. The Austrians are for peace when their borders are cleared and the last foe has skidoodled. The Italians are for peace when they get what they want. The Turks are perhaps the sincerest of all the nations involved in their desire for peace. They want it as soon as the last dog of a Christian has been put to death. The other warring countries want peace on terms all the way from complete surrender to acknowledgment of defeat.

The uniform reasonableness of these expectations impress us. It looks as if everybody were tired of fighting, and that all somebody like Mr. Wilson or Col. House would have to do would be to get around among the combatants and sort of get them together. Some of the more peacefully disposed leaders like Von Bethmann-Hollweg and Ed Grey might lend a hand. These people desire peace very much. They see now that they were wrong in starting the war, are happy to agree that their enemies were not at fault, and will sign anything. It is a matter of days.

GREETING.

Hail! God of perspiration,
Patron saint of laundry men,
And despair of all the fat men in the town,
Whose their slaves fanned Kings of old.
You have many millionfold
Who wave their palm leaf fans at your least frown!

"Mr. Hughes has evidently decided to run for President."

"What makes you think so?"

"He has trimmed his whiskers."

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

BEAUTY CULTURE.

HERSCHIEL.—We do not advise bleaching. Where the hair is genuinely bleached with peroxide the doll-like flaxen tint is only pretty for a short time, and after that one must pay the eternal price of vigilance for the light hair and come to the point at last when it has no more life or beauty than hay. Peroxide must be kept well corked and in a dark, cool place, and the wash is prepared by pouring a requisite quantity of the liquid into warm rain water or water softened with borax. A one-fortieth strength solution, which is strong enough to give a handsome sheen to dark hair, is made with two tablespoonfuls of the peroxide and two pints and a half of water. When this wash is prepared it must not be allowed to stand any time, as peroxide decomposes quickly when exposed to the air, and especially when in dilute solutions. As with dyes, the hair must first be washed and dried before it is put on, and then the entire head may be rinsed in water containing the bleach or it can be applied with a toothbrush in the usual way.

ONE WHO IS FAT.—Dr. Gaertner, noted Vienna physician, says: "The same diet will make one man slim and another fat. It is not what one swallows but what he digests that counts. Sweat baths reduce the weight but cause no loss in flesh—only the elimination of water in the body. Eight hours of walking will remove only four ounces of fat. Bread eating is the commonest cause of obesity. Water is not fattening; neither has it any food value." One writer says: "A diet of milk and milk only will surely reduce one from three to five pounds a week, and, according to this authority, several quarts should be taken during the day as often as once in an hour or two. This does not take away strength as well as flesh. Broths, free from all fat, whey and the white of eggs are also good, but care should be taken not to allow oneself to get to the point of feeling faint. Drink plenty of cold water and hot water at least twice a day. Directly after rising and just before retiring are the best times to drink hot water. A teaspoonful of lemon juice can be added to the water. Two noted German professors gave it as their opinion that if people would eat plenty of chalk they would have not only more energy and happiness, but considerably increased brain power.

CARD FORTUNE-TELLING.

F. Z.—Let the one whose fortune is to be told shuffle the cards well and laying the pack on the table, cut them twice. (You now have three small packs before you.) Take the first cut and place the first nine cards in it in a row (three in a row), then the second, cut the same way, placing the nine cards over the other (former) nine. Now take the third cut and do the same. You should have a diagram before you like this and three cards on each of the numbers, making in all just 27 cards. Lay the big pack down and take up the first pile of the cards and read them. Take up the other three and so on. After this, which is called the past, is read, let the wisher make another (or the same) wish, and shuffle and cut as before. Read these the same way, and this reading is called the present. When you have read their past, present and future, you let them shuffle and lay the pack on the table, but don't cut them. Scatter all the cards and let the wisher make a wish and pick up 21 cards (without looking at them, of course). Now, you take the 21 cards from the wisher and placing them face upward, lay them out, five cards side by side, and the sixth card is thrown to one side. Now, take the 16 cards left in your hand and place one on each of the five cards until you have four cards in each pile (making 20 in all). Read these as before and it is all told. Meaning of cards is as follows: Hearts (these cards are good and are called love cards). The ace is to your home, the deuce is a dear friend, the tray is a strange shake hands, four-spot is marriage, five-spot is a present, six-spot is good friends, seven-spot is good hearts toward you, eight-spot is good friends (the same), nine-spot is your wish, 10-spot is best love card. The picture cards are men and women of a medium complexion, brown hair, blue eyes. Diamonds (these cards are good, dealing mostly in money matters). Ace means wedding ring or piece of jewelry, deuce means small bit of money, tray means talking with a friend, four-spot means strange table, five-spot means a pleasant surprise, six-spot means an invitation, seven-spot means a lot of money, eight-spot means a light wearable, nine-spot means lots of work and prosperity, 10-spot means a journey. These face cards are blond complexions. Clubs (these cards are good and tell of journeys). Ace means a letter, deuce means within day or two, tray means small body of water, four-spot means a ride, five-spot means a parcel, six-spot means crowd of people, 10-spot means across water, four-spot means a ride, five-spot means a parcel, six-spot means water, seven-spot means a distance, eight-spot means water, nine-spot means crowd of people, 10-spot means across deep water. These face cards are of medium but rather dark complexions. Spades (these cards are troublesome). Ace, under the uniform; deuce, trouble; tray, words of argument; four-spot, a sick bed; five-spot, a surprise (unpleasant); six-spot, confusion and talking; seven-spot, a removal; eight-spot, walking with a friend; nine-spot, a sad disappointment; 10-spot, a serious sickness. These face cards are brunettes, very dark. In reading cards always read them connectedly, the same as a story, for example: "There is a pleasant surprise coming to your home from a distance, but within a day or two some dear friend of yours is going to be sick." When the two of spades comes directly before the four of spades it indicates a birth. When it is directly after the four-spot in means a death. When the two-spot is beside a face card it means the face card is a widow or widower; when the two-spot is between money cards (diamonds) it means trouble about money, and if it be trouble love cards (hearts) it means trouble over love affairs.

FIGHTING RHEUMATISM.

PREPAREDNESS.—A writer on rheumatism says: No two persons can be treated in the same way for rheumatism aside from the general cleaning out of the whole body. This must be done in all cases, and in the majority is all that is needed. The faulty action of the liver is frequently the cause of the poisons remaining in the system. Here again a course of daily use of sodium phosphate will usually do the trick. The sodium phosphate should be taken night and morning upon an empty stomach. About a heaping tablespoonful in a glass of warm water is what you need. Notice your eyes, see if they are not yellow. If so, you may depend upon it that the liver is at the bottom of your rheumatism. But back of this is some indiscretion of eating or drinking. If you can get up a good sweating by heat and heavy blankets at night it will aid you in getting out the poisons. But be certain to wash off in the morning the dried sweat on your body. To do this use a sponge and tepid water. Do not try to bring about a good sweat by exercise if there is pain or swelling in any part of your body. By exercising you only drive the deposits somewhere else—into some deeper and dangerous region. Remember, I say sweat, not perspiration. If you have a chronic case of rheumatism you may require a trip to one of the natural hot springs like those at Hot Springs, Ark., or the famous springs in Europe. Rheumatism may be cured by the radio-activity of certain hot springs, but not all hot springs are valuable for rheumatism. Another medical writer says: A high protein diet is not the only cause of rheumatism. Much depends upon the efficiency of the eliminating organs and the mental state. Certain it is that poisonous waste unduly retained in the system is the cause, and the waste from excess of protein and especially of meat, is the most difficult to eliminate. I should advise anyone suffering from rheumatism or in whom the rheumatic tendency is hereditary to reduce the protein element in the food to the lowest working proportion—not more than 10 per cent—and to eliminate meat altogether, since it is not necessary to the highest physical and mental efficiency. (Bacteria in tonsils and elsewhere are said to cause rheumatism.)

German Chancellor on Peace Proposals

PEACE ON WAR MAP BASIS.

Philadelphia Ledger: The neutral Powers and the allies would probably be disposed to take seriously the conditions which the German Chancellor, Von Bethmann-Hollweg, lays down as the factors in permanent peace if the Chancellor had not overlaid all the possible agreements with the impossible condition for the allies that the war map of today shall be the determining issue in the "practical discussion" of the war that the German statesman advocates. No wonder, in view of this, that Premier Briand of France, without having seen the interview obtained in Berlin by the New York World correspondent, following up President Poincare's utterances of last week, has just said flatly that the allies are for peace, but only after a decisive victory and "without intrigue." This view of the French, moreover, repeats the statement of Sir Edward Grey, made 10 days ago, to which, indeed, the long explanation of the German position by the Chancellor is really a reply. Nothing could be more emphatic than Grey's repudiation of peace on the terms of the "war map of today," to use the Bethmann-Hollweg phrase.

So far as the general attitude of all who speak for the combatants goes, they are equally agreed that what is wanted is not a patched-up peace but a lasting peace.

The allies cannot and will not let Germany make over the map of Europe on the lines of her present holdings in the Balkans and on the eastern and western fronts, and no one knows this better than the German Chancellor himself.

A WIDE AND DEEP GULF.

New York Tribune: The Englishman and the Frenchman do not think of this as a war against a nation, against another people. For them both it is a war against a doctrine, which, if it should prevail, would destroy all they love or care for, a doctrine which, so far as it has prevailed, has written its works in shame and sorrow and ruin. Such being the case, the Frenchman and the Briton are not now prepared to compromise with the nation which preached and practiced the doctrine, when it has drawn the last possible profit out of the application and would now lay aside the doctrine for the moment and take advantage of the conventions of the civilization it sought to destroy.

Americans will make a profound mistake if they do not recognize that a gulf has opened between Teutonic Europe and the Latin and Anglo-Saxon factions. One of the most eminent of British Colonial statesmen said only the other day that a century would pass before the gulf could be closed. It is a break that is as complete spiritually as the break between the world of the barbarian and the Greek. It is a break that goes down to the very foundation of all that means anything to the nations that are fighting Germany.

THE MOVEMENT FOR MEDIATION.

Detroit Free Press: Premier Briand's statement that peace in Europe must not result from diplomatic intrigue but must come only through a decisive allied victory may be considered an accurate reflection of the present position of the entente nations. It serves also as a general notice to the United States and other neutral Governcents that offer of mediation will not be received with great favor at this time.

While it is obviously impossible to forecast future developments in the European struggle even along broad lines, the program of the allies seems to involve nothing less than a complete victory over Germany which will enable them to dictate terms without the assistance of intermediaries. As long as this sentiment persists it will be useless for Mr. Wilson or anyone else to tender good offices, and it is scarcely conceivable that anyone possessed of mental penetration beyond that of Mr. Bryan can imagine interference will serve a good end or be considered anything but meddling in London, Paris or Petrograd.

Under the circumstances agitation for mediation must be viewed with relation to its domestic rather than its international significance. It is to be looked upon as propaganda for home consumption, as a pre-election device, not as a serious effort toward peace.

VERDUN AS A GETTYSBURG.

Philadelphia Ledger: The battle for the possession of Verdun begun by the Germans three months ago was compared to Gettysburg early in the campaign. In view of the remarkable defense that the French have put up and the apparent change of tactics by which they are assuming the offensive, the comparison may turn out to be more reasonable than seemed to be the case at first, and the "high tide" of the German invasion in France may stop at the Meuse. While this terrific battle seems to justify the confidence of the French, the Austrian drive in Italy is not a very hopeful sign for the Italians after just one year of war, and even the picturesque arrival of a small detachment of Russian cavalry at the English headquarters on the Tigris determines very little as to the immediate larger operations in Asia Minor. Nor does the explanation of the English failures to hold their own in the extreme west in France, where they have again given way, satisfy; for a strategy that is always delaying the inevitable stroke does not carry very far or make for that conviction as to the final results that is half the campaign. Even if Verdun should prove the exact analogue of Gettysburg, that would not mean the early end of the war, and it looks, therefore, as if the summer is to be given over to a series of oscillating deadlocks without any great change of line anywhere east or west, and with no decisive victory for anyone within the possibilities, though with conditions steadily favoring the allies on the whole when all the campaigns are taken into account.

NO PEACE.

New York Globe: In his latest interview Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Chancellor, practically withdraws the informal peace proposals that the German Government recently put forward. Apparently convinced that there is no chance of getting peace negotiations under way, the Chancellor becomes sternly minatory once again and announces that the opponents of Germany must face the facts "as every war map shows them to be."

The Chancellor also feels called upon to discuss once more the responsibility for the beginning of the war and revives the assertion, not heard for some time, that Great Britain brought on the war by failing to address "an earnest word to Russia." But then, as if realizing the impossibility of securing acceptance of this explanation, the Chancellor speaks of the "amazing and masterly manner" with which the outside world has been deceived.

The outlook for peace is dark. There is no sign of an offensive movement by the allies strong enough to be decisive in a military way. Part of Fort Douaumont has been recaptured by the French, and this may be taken to mark the end of the German offensive at Verdun. Russia has joined hands with the British in Mesopotamia, but there is yet no definite evidence of the collapse of Turkey. Nevertheless, though Germany is now reckoned as on the defensive, it is still a matter of grave doubt whether she can be pushed back. As the allies will not make peace on the basis of the war map, the struggle is to go on, seemingly, through another winter.

The Approaching National Conventions

HUGHES MAY HAVE HIS REVENGE.

Chicago Journal: If Justice Hughes gets the Republican nomination, it will be one of the sweetest pieces of unsought revenge ever known. He ought to have been nominated in 1908. An overwhelming majority of the Republican party wanted him for its candidate and the country unquestionably would have elected him. But the adroit despot who then ruled the party from his throne in the White House forbade.

"Tell the convention they can take Taft or they'll get ME!" he shouted; and the convention, rightly choosing the lesser of the two evils, took Taft. This year it looks as though the convention would pick Hughes as the one man who could undo the harm wrought by the Roosevelt domination.

"Time at last sets all things even," declared Mazeppa, and Charles Evans Hughes may have occasion to confirm the verdict.

AN OPEN FIGHT.

Washington Post: Of course, it is possible that the "favorite sons," acting with the leaders of the Republican party, might turn to any one of the "dark horse" candidates, including Knox of Pennsplvania, Harding of Ohio, and Root of New York. A curious situation is presented in that neither of the two leading candidates, Roosevelt and Hughes, will have any real primary strength in the convention. They will figure only after the avowed candidates, who have delegates pledged to them, are eliminated. Even at this point there might be a deadlock between Hughes and Roosevelt, in which case some "dark horse" candidate might suddenly be pushed over the line. It is still an open fight.

A HINT TO ROOSEVELT.

New York Herald: There is one way in which Justice Hughes can be disposed of as a candidate. Those who know him well and who have studied his attitude in matters of this kind are positive that he would not accept a nomination that came as a result of a bitter controversy with Mr. Roosevelt or any of the other candidates. If the Republican party sincerely wants him it is to be assumed that his sense of duty would impel him to accept.

If Mr. Roosevelt wants to clear the way he can dispose of Justice Hughes immediately by declaring that if Justice Hughes is the nominee of the Republican convention he (Mr. Roosevelt) will accept a nomination on a third ticket.

Why say more? That is the way to clear the situation if Mr. Roosevelt and the Progressive party are unalterably opposed to the nomination of Justice Hughes. Justice Hughes is neither favoring his own selection nor opposing that of anybody else. He probably would prefer to have Mr. Roosevelt nominated.

HIS HAT IS IN THE RING.

Philadelphia Inquirer: The hat of Theodore Roosevelt now reposes gracefully in the Republican ring. Informed by former Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer and a group of prominent Republicans, most of whom had supported Taft four years ago, that they intended to do all in their power to bring about his nomination at Chicago, Roosevelt expressed himself pleased with their action and accepted it. Thus is all pretense cast aside. The Colonel by his own words becomes a candidate, not crawling in through a window of the Republican convention, but boldly entering at the front door and asking the support of the delegates.

Since the Oregon primaries recorded a thirty-thousand-or-so majority for Hughes, the stock of the Sphinx-like candidate of the Supreme Court has risen. We call him a candidate because, although he has refused to enter the lists and has kept his name out of the primaries wherever he could, as has Roosevelt, he has never declared that he would not accept a nomination. In owl-like silence he retires within the ample folds of his judicial robes and bides the future. He declines to be "smoked out." The great world moves on. Most of Europe is in arms. Public problems are of the utmost gravity. But from Justice Hughes comes no word upon any topic whatever.

Today the names of Roosevelt and of Hughes are the ones mostly in men's mouths. Between the two there is a vast difference. Roosevelt breathes an Americanism that cannot be mistaken and that cannot be belittled. Hughes has no more opinion upon Americanism so far as the public is aware than has a clam. What are his views concerning the present questions and the future policies of the United States? No one knows. That is not the sort of attitude that can possibly appeal to the Progressives who have followed Roosevelt as their leader, and the Progressives vote is needful if Wilson is to be beaten.

There are nearly two score candidates for the Republican nomination. Where the lightning is going to strike we cannot tell. No one can. But one thing is certain—the platform upon which the selected candidate must be placed must be a thoroughly American platform of the Roosevelt kind, and the candidate himself, whoever he may be, must be able to stand squarely upon it, or the Republican party need not anticipate success in November.

ROOSEVELT'S STRENGTH.

New York Globe: The Republican delegation at Chicago, particularly Gov. Whitman and Chairman Tanner, should submerge prejudices and devote itself to a candid consideration of the Republican situation. Woodrow Wilson is a formidable candidate. It is difficult to see how Justice Hughes, in so many ways like the President in temperament and political views, will be able to make headway against the tendency not to swap horses when crossing a stream, and as to Mr. Root, it is plain that the part he took in forcing the renomination of Mr. Taft precludes his election. But the Roosevelt candidacy would be aggressive from the start and would rally to it active and virile elements. The administration plainly fears Col. Roosevelt and apparently fears no one else.

A SIGNIFICANT FACT.

Chicago Herald: There can be no question at this time that a vast majority of Americans, probably nine-tenths of them, are thinking of no one except Wilson, Roosevelt, Hughes and Root as really possible presidential candidates.

Both by reason of their personal character, their records and their pre-eminence these men stand out as the leading figures in the campaign for the nomination. They tower like the mountain over the plain above the great mass of "favorite sons" who will be accorded the courtesy of a first vote.

But while such an overwhelming majority of Americans are thinking of these men after this fashion, there appear to be a few gentlemen who have constituted themselves into a committee claiming to represent German-Americans and that they can "deliver" the German-American vote who are thinking of anybody but these men. They are scurrying around trying to find some more or less obscure "favorite son" who will be satisfactory.

One would think that even the members of such a committee would finally awake to the fact that when nearly all America is thinking of certain leading men and they are thinking of anybody but these men it must be concluded that they are substantially out of touch with the general sentiment of the nation and therefore doomed to failure in the attempt to carry out their little plans.

The Navy Bill Arouses Criticism

NOT A BIG ENOUGH NAVY.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Since the army is to be small, it is all the more important that that first line of defense, the navy, should be equal to all emergencies. The House Committee on Naval Affairs, which has been laboring throughout the session, has brought forth a program at last, but it is shaped like a mouse. The "little" navy men have dominated it. They could not, of course, wholly block naval construction, but they have accomplished what they could in that direction.

If their bill goes through, there will be five much-needed battle cruisers, to be sure, but no battleships, whereas there should be two at least. Only three fleet and 17 coast defense submarines are provided, a ridiculous number. There are only 10 destroyers. Air craft expenditures are limited to $2,000,000.

This is a babyish performance. As an added insult to intelligence, every vestige of a general plan for development is swept aside and the President is instructed to call a conference of world Powers after the war is over and suggest disarmament, or at least a curtailment of naval forces. This rider to the bill was adopted as a salve to the injured feelings of the "little" navy men. It does not belong in a preparedness measure, but as a separate piece of legislation. Again, the increase of men for the navy is fixed at about 16,000, whereas 25,000 are needed as soon as they can be enlisted.

NAVY INCREASE TORPEDOED.

New York Evening Sun: When the House of Representatives refused to give the country an adequate army the hope still remained that it would provide a navy sufficient to safeguard us against attack. This hope has vanished with the report of the House Committee on Naval Affairs. The committee grants the expenditure of the tremendous naval allowance of $240,000,000—$90,000,000 more than the total of last year's bill—but the bill is vitally defective in that it fails to specify the construction of our new ships according to any plan which will ultimately give us a well balanced navy.

The fundamental error of the House committee lies, according to the Navy General Board experts, in refusing to authorize the construction of any ships whatever of the superdreadnought class, the backbone of any fleet. The General Board urged that we should build six superdreadnoughts and 10 battle cruisers within a brief period; Secretary Daniels even consented to 10 superdreadnoughts and six battle cruisers within five years; the House committee allows only five battle cruisers. It is incidental that the submarine and aviation arms are similarly neglected.

BATTLESHIPS NOT YET OBSOLETE.

Philadelphia Ledger: In the opinion of the naval experts of the Government "the battleship is still the principal reliance of navies." This conclusion of theirs is based not only on the history of the past, but, in particular, upon the lessons of the great war. Yet the majority of the House Naval Affairs Committee, setting aside the judgment of its technical advisers, has eliminated battleships altogether from its program and would provision only for battle cruisers, a type of vessel highly important, but by no means a substitute for the principal fighting units of the navy. The committee also sets aside the five-year building program of the Secretary of the Navy, a proceeding which may or may not redound to the advantage of the nation. For the experiment of binding succeeding Congresses to a definite program of legislation has been tried before and has failed, and will fail again unless the opinion of the country is so definitely in support of the program that the majority in Congress will not dare to disregard it.

Roosevelt's Election Would Mean War

Philadelphia Record (Ind.): Theodore Roosevelt means war. Every one who aids in his nomination, or, if he should be nominated, shall aid in his election, will be working to get this country into war with Mexico and Germany. Mr. Roosevelt himself, and every one of his shouters, is attacking President Wilson because he has not engaged this country in war on both sides of the ocean.

There is no mistaking the fact. A lot of men called on Mr. Roosevelt on Monday and offered him the Republican nomination, and we presume they also offered him the election, and they might as well have offered him the earth with a fence around it. A member of this precious company of fire-eaters was Prof. Bingham of Yale, who said:

"When I was in Peru as a reprenestative of the National Geographic Society I found much that didn't please me. I found that the claim to American citizenship won no respect. We were even accused of stealing gold there, and our statement that we were members of the National Geographic Society apparently was no claim to consideration. They didn't have a very high opinion of Americans there."

The report of the interview says: "The Colonel clapped his hands vigorously" and said:

"Good for you! I can't tell you how much it pleases me to hear you talk like that. And it is proof of what I was told by Edmund Heller. He was in Peru, and he said that they believed there we were afraid to fight for our rights, or with Germany or Mexico, and that there is no respect for an American citizen."

The members of the National Geographic Society are not treated with sufficient respect in Peru because it is believed there that we are afraid to fight Germany and Mexico. Of course, there is only one remedy for this state of things. To secure proper respect in Peru for members of the National Geographic Society we have got to prove that we are not afraid to fight Germany and Mexico, and we cannot possibly prove that except by getting into war with them.

The demand for war with Germany and Mexico is absolutely all there is behind the Roosevent candidacy. We have been keeping the peace; therefore we must have a different President. Peruvians do not pay sufficient homage to members of the National Geographic Society, because they believe Americans are afraid to fight Germany and Mexico. If Mr. Roosevelt were President and did not land us in two wars at once he would be no better than Mr. Wilson. If the Peruvians treat members of the National Geographic Society with scant respect because they think we are afraid to fight, the only remedy is to go to war, and teach the Peruvians that they had better give the sidewalk to members of the National Geographic Society. If Mr. Roosevelt is not pledged to involve this country in war with Germany and Mexico, then he is seeking the Republican nomination under false pretenses.

STAR & GARTER HOME

Wedding of Miss Elizabeth Overton to Lewis D. Dozier to Take Place at "Athlone" June 8—Bridge Party at Home of Mrs. Dwight Filley Davis Tomorrow for Benefit of "Star and Garter" Home Will Be a Very Fashionable Affair With Many Prominent Patronesses—Saturday Last of Garden Teas at the "Arches."

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

ATHLONE, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pope O'Fallon, about 20 miles out on the Manchester road is an ideal place for a summer wedding and it is there Mrs. O'Fallon's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Overton, will be married to Lewis D. Dozier June 8.

The name Athlone itself is of interesting origin. When the first O'Fallon, Col. John J. O'Fallon, came over from Ireland and built his home here he named it Athlone for the town whence he came.

The first Athlone stood in what is now O'Fallon Park and the name was changed by the city.

The next Athlone was built in Virginia, on the Shenandoah River, by Mrs. William Fitzhugh Randolph, who was Miss Rose O'Fallon, granddaughter of the owner of Athlone I.

This Athlone on the Manchester road is known in the O'Fallon family as Athlone III as yachts are named.

The wedding taking place there will be like one rarely seen now except in the East where people keep open their country estates from spring until the snow flies, and where it has long been the custom to have weddings in the country instead of in town.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Fallon will move out to Athlone Wednesday, but they will not close their town house at 5221 Washington boulevard until after the wedding, as a number of relatives are expected to come from Memphis for the occasion. The ceremony will be at 4:30 o'clock and the guests will motor out, as that is the only means of getting there. Afterward there will be a dance.

Miss Matilda Overton, who made her debut last autumn, and was one of the belles of the winter, will be maid of honor for her sister.

The bridemaids will be Miss Eleanor Dozier, the bridegroom's sister, Ellanore Scott, Nancy Scott and Miss Estelle Ewing, who arrived from Memphis yesterday.

Andrew Johnson W. Johnson will be Mr. Dozier's best man, and the groomsmen will be Russell E. Gardner Jr., Robert A. Bagnell, John J. O'Fallon II, Thomas F. Francis, Stuart G. Stickney and Charles Cushing of Chicago.

Little Miss Laura Goodbar and Master J. B. Goodbar Jr., the bride's cousin from Memphis, and Master Thurston Pettus, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus will be in the wedding part as flower girl and pages.

The Rev. Dr. John A. Rice of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church will read the marriage service.

Among the out-of-town guests will be Mrs. O'Fallon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Goodbar, her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Goodbar and William M. Goodbar, another brother, all of Memphis, Mrs. O'Fallon's former home.

Miss Overton is the daughter of the late John Overton III of Memphis. She has been one of the most popular girls in the social set since her debut three seasons ago.

She has been a member of the "Imperial" and is regarded very pretty and one of the best dancers in her set.

Between now and the time of the wedding there will be a number of entertainments for the bridal party.

Last evening Mrs. William Bagnell had a table at the Country Club weekly dinner dance in honor of Miss Overton. Today Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Francis will be the hosts at a luncheon at the Kinloch Club.

Friday evening Russell E. Gardner Jr. will give a dinner dance in honor of the bridal party. Saturday James H. Berg will have a table at the Country Club dinner dance in their honor, and the following Monday evening Miss Dozier will give a small dinner dance at the Country Club for them.

MRS. DWIGHT FILLEY DAVIS' home at 16 Portland place will be used tomorrow afternoon for the bridge party which will be given for the benefit of "The Star and Garter Home," to be built in England for disabled soldiers.

Lady Peek, who was Miss Edwine Thornburgh of St. Louis, and whose husband, Sir Wilfrid Peek, is in Mesopotamia, has inspired the affair.

Lady Peek at the beginning of the war turned her home, Rousdon House, in Devonshire, England, into a convalescent home for soldiers, and since has been at the head of it and its nurses and invalids. She is now on a visit to her mother, Mrs. William C. Stribling, for a rest, and change of scene advised on account of her health. Her small son, Francis Henry Grenville Peek, it with his grandmother, the Honorable Lady Peek, in England.

The bridge party tomorrow will begin at 2:30 o'clock and, the weather permitting, the tables will be arranged on the terrace of the house overlooking the garden at the back, which runs all the way through to Westmoreland place, really facing it, although the entrance is on Portland place.

It will be a very fashionable affair and already many tables have been made up by women accustomed to playing together. Tickets may be purchased at the door, however, and it is hoped that many more will avail themselves of the opportunity of going without having made a reservation previously. Arrangements may be made by telephone to Lady Peek at her mother's residence.

The patronesses are Mmes. William Bagnell, J. D. Lascom, William Dee Becker, David R. Calhoun, L. Ray Carter, George Castleman, Daniel K. Catlin, C. C. Collins, Frank P. Crunden, Dwight F. Davis, John T. Davis, Joseph Dickson, John D. Filley, John Fowler, David R. Francis, Edward F. Goltra, Frank V. Hammar, Joseph M. Holliday, John Holliday, James P. Jamieson, Jackson Johnson, Breckinridge Jones, R. McK. Jones, Harold M. Kauffman, Goodman King, Albert B. Lambert, J. D. Wooster Lambert, P. C. Maffitt, George D. Markham, J. Lawrence Mauran, Samuel McCluney, J. L. D. Morrison, I. W. Morton, Harvey G. Mudd, Charles P. Pettus, Clay A. Pierce, Clarkson Potter, Joseph Pulitzer Jr., Henry C. Scott, William H. Scudder, Alfred L. Shapleigh, William A. Shoemaker, Edwin H. Steedman, William C. Stribling, J. Sidney Walker, Harry B. Wallace, Edward J. Walsh Jr., Julius S. Walsh Jr., Allen T. West, Charles Wiggins, Orion J. Willis, Nannie Wright and Miss Mary Lionberger.

Send your Palm Beach suit to the cleanest Laundry. Lindell 1695, Del. 1144.

TOMORROW evening the premiere of Mrs. Frederick R. Hattersley's play, "Kitty Comes In," at the Park Theater, will be one of the interesting events of the week.

Mrs. Hattersley, who was Miss Lilia Chopin, daughter of the late Mrs. Kate Chopin, the noted author, has written several things that have attracted favorable comment. Her gift has been inherited from her talented mother.

Adding to the interest of the play which won the prize of $100 given by the theater management, will be the first professional appearance of Miss Minnie Potter.

Miss Potter as the "Campus Mouser" in the musical comedy by that name was so clever that everyone who saw her in that and in "Love in a Toyshop" and roles she played in the Players and the Dramatic Club plays are justified in believing their prophecies will be fulfilled on the professional stage.

She is the daughter of Mrs. William B. Potter, her mother was Miss Agnes Kennett Farrar, and she is a member of that "holy of holies" in society, "The Imperial."

The audience tomorrow evening will be one of the most brilliant seen since mid-winter.

NEXT Saturday, the last of a series of Saturday garden teas will be given at "The Arches," on the Berry road, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Kauffman's place. As each one has been more successful than the preceding one the last should be something of such unusual merit as to be more than worth seeing. It will be a Greek Pageant, and if there is one thing more than another full of beautiful possibilities it is a Greek theme of any kind.

There will be a pantomime with dances and such under the direction of Rosalind Mahler Pufeles, who is clever at pantomime, and about 40 young matrons and maids will take part.

The soloists will be Misses Margaret Gale, Emily Milliken, Dorothy Pufeles, Gloria Geisinger, Gladys Stevenson, Melba Hoener, Katherine Arnold, Edith Whittemore, Howard Wilhelmj and Willard Bartlett.

The others taking part will be Misses Frances Orrick, Catherine Ed-

TIME is drawing near for the big Siegfried performance to be given on Robison Field, National League Ball Park, whose grandstand and bleachers have witnessed and heard many sights and sounds but never yet a grand opera where the hero kills a dragon, and not an umpire.

A stage will be built in the diamond with the orchestra about at the home plate, and between will be added seats for the audience.

With the stage in the diamond it will take voices accustomed to singing in the Harvard Stadium and the Yale bowl to put it over the home plate.

The bleachers will not be used, the grandstand and the extra seats being thought sufficient seating capacity.

It will be a most interesting event musically and socially. The box subscription and seat reservations are most promising, and altogether it is beginning to look as though the production June 13 will be a tremendous success.

August will have a garden party on the 12th, an excursion on the 25th and on Sept. 10 the annual regatta will be held.

TODAY'S BEAUTY TALK

You can make a delightful shampoo with very little effort and for a very trifling cost, if you get from your druggist a package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and rub briskly. This creates an abundance of thick, white lather that thoroughly dissolves and removes the dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly, with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.—ADV.

AD MEN TO PLAY BALL GAME FOR TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY

Debutantes to Sell Pop Corn and Peanuts at Summer Fete July 22.

The advertising men of St. Louis and Chicago have been enlisted in the campaign against tuberculosis in this community and will assist the St. Louis Tuberculosis Society in its work this year. J. Ferd Oberwinder, vice president of the St. Louis Advertising Club, has organized a ball team which will play a team from the Chicago Advertising Club on July 22 for the benefit of the tuberculosis organization.

The board of directors recently decided to make the event a big one and to add several features, calling it the Charity Baseball Game and Summer Fete. Permanent organization will be perfected next Wednesday. Debutantes will sell popcorn, peanuts and chewing gum on the grounds.

The Tuberculosis Society is in need of funds to operate its Night and Day Camp at 9500 South Broadway, where self-sustaining working girls and women who are run down rest for three months; also to help pay for the children in the two open-air schools who cannot afford to buy their own meals. Last year this society, according to Charles P. Pettus, treasurer, spent nearly $5000 in open-air school work and more than $6000 in the night and day camp work

An entertainment will be given on Tuesday afternoon at the Night and Day Camp from 3 to 5 o'clock. A program of music and athletic events is scheduled. A spider-web party is one of the principal features. Mrs. B. F. Bush, chairman of the Camp Committee, will be hostess.

WAR ADVANCED FOOD PRICES IN ENGLAND 49 PER CENT

LONDON, May 27.—Official figures which show that since the war began there has been an average increase of 49 per cent in the prices of foodstuffs in England suggests the failure of the economy movement, designed to impress upon the nation the obligation of being thrifty in the consumption of food, so as to curtail imports and keep down prices.

The purchasing power of a pound ($5) is now but a trifle more than $2.50. Compared with both a year ago and two years ago, there are large increases in the imports of grain and flour, meat and dutiable articles of food.

DREYFUS' SON IS HONORED

Salary Increases Voted.

Increases from $2400 to $3000 a year in the salary of secretary to the Mullanphy Board, and from $1500 to $1800 to the assistant secretary, were voted Friday by the Board of Aldermen, 16 to 12. Alderman Rudolph led a fight on the measure, contending that the salaries were high enough.

BE CAREFUL IN USING SOAP ON YOUR HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in; about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—ADV.

ATELIER FITTED UP FOR FRENCH ARTIST IN GERMAN PRISON CAMP

Parisian Scultor Completes Piece of Work Which Captors Regard as His Masterpiece.

BERLIN, May 27.—The authorities of the prison camp at Griesheim, near Darmstadt, have had a small but complete atelier fitted up for Leo Gall, the Parisian sculptor. The French artist's first work consisted of medallion portraits of the officers of the camp. Additional material was then furnished him, and he has just completed a piece of work which many persons regard the best thing he has ever done. It is a monument for French prisoners who have died in Darmstadt.

The shaft, to be erected in the Darmstadt Cemetery, shows a dying French soldier lying on a flight of marble stairs, his gaze fixed on relief portraits of parents, brothers and sisters on the face of a marble wall which runs along the top of the stairs. From the wall rises a statue personifying France. The names of the dead are carved on the ends of the wall.

"Give Germany Fair Play." Is Request Minister von Jagow Government, as a matter of fact, made a proposition which also suggested that 'such private and business messages as the American Embassy in Berlin might deem it proper to transmit' should be sent over the cable; this digression from the news and 'human interest' side of the question undoubtedly had much to do with lessening public interest in the proposition."

I did not have a chance to continue any further, for Herr von Jagow said:

"What is this 'human interest' that all you American newspaper men or writers talk about? What does it mean? When our Zeppelins attack London, which is a fortified city defended with cannon, full of soldiers and prepared as far as it can be to resist attack by land or air, the American papers teem with the most vitriolic articles about the 'Huns.' When the airmen of the allies attack absolutely unprotected German towns and villages without one cannon or one soldier in them and kill old men, women and children, your papers are either silent or else they give a carefully expurgated account, without bitter criticism therein, and, much more significant, the letters which appear in the American newspapers, signed by readers of the papers, exhibit (in the main) only horror at our legitimate aerial warfare and none at the entirely unjustifiable conduct of our opponents.

"Starving the Children."

"Also by prohibiting absolutely the importation of fodder necessary to enable our cows to furnish milk of a good quality, Great Britain is warring on the little children of Germany, and when philanthropic people in the United States, who wish to help the children, desire to ship milk for their use, Great Britain interposes its sea veto. Our children are fully as dear to us as the children of Americans are to them. What do the press and the people of the United States really think of a warfare directed against little children?

"Further, what do Americans think of the British practically forcing the Dutch steamers going to and coming from America to make Falmouth a 'port of call' and then claiming the right to rifle the first-class mail on the ground that a British port is made a 'port of call'?

"Also, what do Americans think of the British absolutely violating all international postal laws and seizing the first-class mails on neutral steamers bound from one neutral port to another, which do not make a British port a 'port of call'? I dare say, Mr. Krebs, that you find it rather inconvenient not to be able to receive your letters from the United States in due course!"

No need to quote my remarks, but Herr von Jagow's eyes twinkled as thought it rather amused him-that even an American's patience could be practically exhausted by illegal interference with letters from home.

Secretary von Jagow looked at me now as if he wanted me to contribute my verbal mite to the occasion, and I said:

"Broadly speaking, the sympathy of probably 75 per cent of the American people at the beginning of the war was enlisted on behalf of the allies for reasons that can be readily understood by one familiar with conditions in America; however, the American people are the fairest and squarest sporting proposition on earth, and if Germany will only patiently wait the time will come when the people of the United States will do Germany and the Germans full justice. Your excellency could hardly expect to have the fairest jury decide in your favor were it furnished largely with ex parte evidence."

We Want Simple Justice.

Herr von Jagow gave a faint smile and said: "Well, it looks as though we would have to wait, and so I suppose we had better try to be resigned in the meantime, but a one-sided mental justice is hard for us to understand and much harder for us to patiently bear." Then he added:

"I am sorry that I cannot give you more time, but I am extremely busy."

We shook hands and I turned to go. When I was half way to the door, he called to me:

"One word more, Mr. Krebs!" I walked back to the desk and he said, a most kindly tone in his voice: "We are not unmindful of our good friends in the United States, millions of whom are not of German descent, neither are we ungrateful for the fair play publicity accorded Germany by certain papers in America, which, however, are unfortunately exceptions to the prevailing tone of your press. All Germany wants is fair play. Let the American papers give the people all the news; let Americans pass judgment with all facts in their possession, that is all Germany asks, but please try to accord us what you must surely admit we deserve, and that is simple justice."

A wave of his hand, the interview was over, and I was glad that it was. I had had about all I wanted to think over in connection with one interview. In most of the interviews I have had with big people here, either last year or this, it has been "hands across the sea," "blood ties," "business relations," and as close an approach to the conventional British attitude toward us as an extremely direct and blunt people could well bring themselves to. Herr von Jagow had spoken from his heart without reserve.

Now if I can find someone going across who will be kind enough to try and clever and lucky enough to succeed in getting it by the British searchers at Falmouth or Kirkwall, then it will be up to the greatest and fairest of all umpires, the American people, for "judgment."

South Side Day Nursery.

Ireland's Prospects Are Better Since Outbreak, He Says

were considerable. They reveled in riot and were not overcareful of their own lives.

As for the responsibility of the British Government, it is gradually being ascertained. Broadly, it was neither more nor less than the historic responsibility inherited from hundreds of years of Anglo-Saxon unimaginativenes. One may say that Birrell, like other Secretaries for Ireland, paid in his person for England's atrocious vagaries in the eighteenth century and the first three-quarters of the nineteenth century.

Causes of Irish Problem.

But the Irish problem is not primarily the result of bad Government; it is the result of incompatibility of temperament between two races whom geography has inseparably bound together. Evidence before the Royal Commission shows that the Government could not squelch the Irish Volunteers because they could not squelch Carson's Volunteers without bloodshed, so one may go back and back into time. Ulster is such and the rest of Ireland is such that Home Rule could not have been put into practice without bloodshed. The British Government was bound to hope against hope that bloodshed might be avoided. The immediate Governmental mistake was in overestimating the common sense of the rebel organization. If it had learned the lesson of history it would have had more soldiers in Dublin, and bloodshed would have been not avoided but probably postponed until after the war.

The execution of the rebel leaders aroused adverse comment. One cannot foresee the verdict of history, but it is certain that much less than 1 per cent of the rebels have been shot, and I think an assaulted Government has rarely shown greater magnanimity in a more dangerous crisis. Mankind will progress and the time will come when cold-blooded homicide will be as repugnant to the majority as it is now to the minority, and will cease to form a part of the machinery of justice; but at present the structure of social order is ultimately based on cold-blooded homicide.

If ever there was a rebellion in which the leaders led and the rank and file were kept in ignorance, the Easter rising in Ireland was that rebellion. It was not a popular rising—it was artificial, it was fostered from without. The responsible leaders were autocrats. They knew just what they were risking and that their success might signify the saving of Germany from defeat. By no means all the leaders were Irish patriots, and even the alleged pacifists among them wanted armed rebellion. Thus the late Sheehy Skeffington, whose pacifism strangely had been accepted as axiomatic by all the British newspapers, speaking at the centenary banquet of the John Mitchel Club, appealed at great length for money to buy arms with which to fight the British Government when the time came. He is dead; I greatly regret the manner of his death, but a pacifist he was not.

The executions are now over. The political prospects of Ireland are brighter. Good may come out of evil. Racial temperaments, however, will remain, and geography will not alter. The arguments both for and against any kind of home rule are tremendous, and therefore the millenium is probably not at hand.

CREATOR OF MUTT AND JEFF COMING WITH THE FRIARS

Bud Fisher Will Have Part in Program of Frolics at Olympic Saturday.

Bud Fisher, creator of Mutt and Jeff, the cartoon comedians seen daily in the Post-Dispatch, will make his first public appearance in St. Louis next Saturday afternoon and night, in the Friars' Frolic at the Olympic Theater. With Rube Goldberg, a widely known comic artist, and Bert Levy, a vaudeville cartoonist, he will appear in the minstrel first part of the Frolic. Later in the program the three will put on an act, the exact nature of which has not been made known. It has been rehearsed in private, and even George M. Cohan, abbot of the Friars, is said not to know what it is all about.

Fisher will march in the Friars' parade from Union Station to the Olympic Saturday morning. Those who look for a replica of the long-nosed Mutt, or the short and silk-hatted Jeff, will be likely to overlook Fisher, who is youthful and clean-cut in appearance.

Cohan is director of the entertainment, and the cast of 60 will include Louis Mann, Frank Tinney, William Collier, Andrew Mack, James J. Corbett, George Beban, Jerry J. Cohan, Will Rogers, Hap Ward, George Sidney, Lew Dockstader, George Primrose, Neil O'Brien, Albert Spalding, Nat Wills, Laddie Cliff, Irving Berlin, Julius Tannen, Fred Niblo and Max Figman.

Gov. Major will meet the Friars on their arrival, and Mayor Kiel will welcome them to the city and join in their parade. The seat sale for the matinee and night show will open tomorrow morning at the Olympic box office.

MISSOURI TO SHOW SHE IS IN FRONT RANK IN LITERATURE

Writers' Guild Bulletin Will Tell Who State's Authors Are and of Their Work.

Missouri authors will be shown as the equal, in quantity and quality of their output, of those of Indiana or any other state, in the first bulletin of the Missouri Writers' Guild, which the guild's president, Lee Shippey of Higginsville, is preparing to issue.

Shippey is asking that Missouri novelists, playwrights, short story and feature writers and poets notify him of recent books and magazine articles of theirs which have been published or accepted for publication. He now has enough matter in hand to indicate that he can claim a front rank for Missourians in literary work.

It is planned to issue monthly bulletins hereafter, telling of the work Missourians are doing in literature. The first bulletin will list, as Missouri authors, Mark Twain, Eugene Field, Winston Churchill, Augustus Thomas, Rupert Hughes, Rose O'Neill, Fannie Hurst, Harold Bell Wright, John Breckinridge Ellis, Edna Kenton and Homer Croy. William H. Hamby, retiring president of the guild, is a short story writer, and Shippey, the new president, has written short stories and verses, four of his poems having been printed in New York weeklies in the past year.

Any Missourian who is the author of a book published on a royalty basis, or three or more stories or articles in publications of national circulation, is eligible to active membership in the guild, and any Missourian who aspires to write can be an associate member.

What attracts these summer visitors is a big, impressive city with its myriad interests, so situated on the shores of Lake Michigan that its summer climate is one of the most delightful in the world.

Refreshing lake breezes so temper summer heat that few days are uncomfortable. These breezes put vigor in the atmosphere, giving an additional zest to sight-seeing and summer recreations.

This same blue lake gives Chicago all the attractions of a seaside city. Bathing beaches (public and private), 25-mile shore line, beaches where hundreds of thousands of bathers disport themselves every pleasant day, while the waters are dotted with white sails, energetic launches and jaunty canoes.

Most of this lake shore is paralleled by spacious boulevards, so that these aquatic activities combine with throngs of promenaders and a procession of automobiles in one inspiring, summer-long carnival.

Most of Chicago's theatres are open all summer, offering the choice of the leading theatrical attractions. Summer amusement parks provide a world of interest in themselves. There is splendid golf and tennis, both in the beautiful parks and at country clubs.

Endless miles of boulevards, extending through parks and residence sections, make a motoring paradise. These connect with excellent roads which permit long country tours.

Four famous Chicago hotels, illustrated in this advertisement, make a specialty of entertaining summer visitors. Each offers unsurpassed accommodations; delightful social life; each is located in Chicago's celebrated South Side Hotel Center, in the city's most exclusive residence district; near neighbors to the lake and south side parks; only 12 minutes from the loop, by fast Illinois Central express train service.

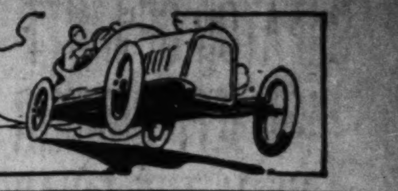
AUTOMOBILE NEWS



TRANSMISSION IS NECESSARY EVIL FOR GASOLINE CAR

Unlike Steam or Electric Car Gear Reduction Is Required for Internal Combustion Motor Vehicle.

By WILLIAM H. STEWART JR., President Stewart Automobile School

Unlike steam and electric vehicles, the gasoline engine must have a transmission or gear reduction between the motor and rear axle. The reason for this is that the gasoline engine is operated by a series of explosions that take place in the cylinder. In brief, the power furnished cannot be considered, so to speak, as continuous. For this reason when the motor is required to work at slow speed it is difficult to make it operate smoothly. When an automobile is running over a smooth, level pavement the driving wheels may be connected direct to the engine. In other words, little additional power is required, after the car is once started, to keep it in motion.

To start the car, however, an excess of power must be applied. Likewise on rough roads and in climbing hills more power is consumed. While the gas motor may be throttled down to pull at very slow engine speed after the load is once in motion, nevertheless it is a difficult matter for an engine to lift this load over a hill at slow engine speed. The maximum power is developed when the motor turns over fast. When the load begins to slow down the engine speed the pulling power of the motor begins to fall at a very rapid rate. If it were not possible to shift to lower gears of the transmission the motor would stall. For this reason the transmission is used to apply the power of the motor to the rear axle through gear reduction. By so doing the motor obtains greater leverage to lift the load.

There are several types of transmissions used to effect speed changes. In this article only the sliding gear type will be discussed, and a brief explanation offered as to its working.

At the center of the chart is shown complete transmission assembly together with clutch. In a previous article the object of the clutch was discussed together with its working principle. This member must be disengaged from the fly wheel before any attempt is made to change the position of the gears. The clutch release is accomplished by pressing the left pedal forward with the foot, which throws out the yoke "A," and pulls clutch "C" back from the fly wheel. When this is done the clutch will stop rotating, while the engine continues its cycle.

The transmission proper consists of two sets of gears mounted on shafts, one above the other, as shown in the chart. The gears vary in size according to the speed designed. The average transmission has three speed forward and reverse. Those forward being low, intermediate and high. Some operators term these speeds first, second and direct.

Countershaft "S" has four gears, "E," "F," "G," "H," which are fixed to the shaft. The main spline shaft 'N" is so constructed that the two gears 'K" and 'L" can be moved backward or forward by means of the shifting yokes "O."

The main shaft is divided at a point between "K" and "J" so that the lower speeds are obtained by driving through "J" and "E" whenever low speed gears may be in mesh, gears "J" and "E" being constantly in mesh.

Four sketches are shown, illustrating the position of the gears, first, second, third and reverse. It should be noted that the gears "J" and "E" are in constant mesh whatever speed is selected. In the sketch showing first speed the gear lever "R" has been moved to the position selecting low or first speed. This brings the main shaft first speed sliding gear "L" in mesh with the countershaft first speed gear "G." In this manner the engine power is transmitted from "J" to "E" and from "G" to "L" and through 'M" to the rear axle.

Assuming that gear "J" is half the size of "E," it then will have to make two revolutions to effect one of "E." Likewise if gear "G" is half the size of gear "L," it will have to make two revolutions to effect one of "L." It will be seen from this that if the motor should be turning over 1200 revolutions, shaft "M" would be turning only 300 revolutions. In this manner the motor obtains a greater leverage to drive the car up hill.

The second speed is obtained in similar manner, except that gears "F" and "K" approximate each other in size, so that gear reduction is not so low. For example, with gear "J" revolving 1200 R. P. M. shaft "M" would be turning about 600 R. P. M.

The third or direct speed is obtained by coupling the two gears "J" and "K" together by means of a dog clutch or internal gear. In this manner the power is transmitted direct from the crank shaft to "M" without any gear reduction. This is termed "direct drive."

In order to obtain a reverse direction of shaft "M" to that of gear "J" it is necessary to drive through a reverse idle gear, such as is shown at "I." With this position of the gears the power is transmitted from "J" to "E" and from "H" to "I" to "L." The reverse idler "I" being in constant mesh with "H." By transmitting the power through the reverse idler a reverse direction is obtained to shaft 'M."

Both upper and lower shafts are suspended on bearings and designed to operate with as little friction as possible. Likewise the teeth of the gears are designed to enable easy meshing. However judgment must be exercised, in shifting. That is to say, one must judge the proper time when to shift gears to avoid clashing or injury.

This subject of shifting gears will be treated in the next article.

SPEEDWAY DRIVERS ARE READY FOR BIG RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 27.—Only the elimination trials stand between the drivers and the big speedway race here May 30. Every one of them feels confident that they will be able to qualify, which requires a speed of 80 miles an hour for at least two and one-half miles, or one circuit. Two days are set aside for these elimination trials, which are held under the auspices of the American Automobile Association. This permits Sunday and Monday as days of rest for the drivers, or for an opportunity for eleventh-hour work on their speed sprinters.

To do a speed of 80 miles an hour a car must go around the track in 1:52:50. The majority of entrants this year can better the 90-mile mark. Johnny Aitken, in his blue Peugot, has been reeling off laps at the rate of 1:37, which is better than 92 miles an hour. Charlie Merz, his teammate, has done a lap in 136, or better than 93 miles an hour. Louis Chevrolet says that he can break the track record, held by Boillot. Chevrolet has three Frontenac cars. Art Johnson, in his Crawford, drove from Hagerstown, Md., overland, a distance of 840 miles, in his race car.

American Automobile Association officials, F. A. Croselmire, representative of the Contest Board, and Richard Kennerdell, chairman of the Contest Board, are in Indianapolis and have completed their rules for the big classic. Among their findings are the following. No relief driver can be permitted to qualify for more than one car. Immediately before and immediately after the qualifying trials, cars must be taken to the Technical Committee, who will take a sample of the fuel for analysis. Each car will be entitled to three trials in the elimination contest. The order of starting the race shall be determined by these trials, car making the fastest time shall be assigned the pole in the first row, and so on.

RI CHARD IS NEWEST CAR

Francois RiChard, an old French motor car engineer, has launched an automobile to be known as the RiChard. As far back at 1900 M. RiChard was awarded a gold medal at the Paris Exposition for a two-cylinder engine. At the St. Louis Exposition in 1904 he received gold medals for gasoline and kerosene carburetors. He also built an eight-cylinder, 260-horsepower engine and personally superintended every step. He also built a one-cylinder car with 5¼-inch bore and 10-inch stroke, which attained 82 miles an hour speed and made 42 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

The new car is built with an idea of giving more comfort to the passengers. The engine will have 4-inch bore and 5 15-16 stroke and 448-inch piston displacement. It will have electric starter, generator and other modern equipment.

THIS CAR OPERATES ON KEROSENE OR GASOLINE

The new Crow Elkhart "30," a leader in the class of automobiles selling under $1000, will be sold and distributed by the Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co., 3319 Locust street, in St. Louis and surrounding territory, it is announced.

The Elkhart Thirty is made by the Crow Motor Car Co of Elkhart, Ind., in both the five-passenger touring car and the three-passenger Clover Leaf roadster, with wire wheels. The body is strictly streamline and the design is such as is found only in automobiles of the best class. Crow Elkhart bodies are designed by one of the best body builders in the country, the real Paul Poiret of the industry.

The Elkhart is a large, roomy, five passenger car, with plenty of leg room for five persons. The motor is a four-cylinder, 30-horsepower, "L" head type, 3½x5 inches.

The most remarkable single development in the car is its ability to operate on either gasoline or a mixture of 50 per cent kerosene and gasoline, without any readjusting of any kind to the motor parts. Mr. John H. Phillips, distributor for the car, claims that this feature is an important evolution in motor building, bound to offer great possibilities to both builder and owner.

The Elkhart is equipped with electric starter and lights and the standard body colors are green body and wheels, with black chassis and fenders and all black.

The Clover Leaf roadsters come with wire wheels and are in all colors of the rainbow. The price of the five-passenger touring car is $750 and the Clover Leaf roadster is $820, delivered in St. Louis.

A letter from an official of the Studebaker Corporation to the Post-Dispatch firmly denies that there is anything to the report of a merger of the Studebaker Corporation with several other companies. It is stated that no officers or directors are a party to the proposed merger, and the suggestion is made that it is wholly visionary.

HUDSON IN NEW HOME

The Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co. began moving into its new quarters at Leonard avenue and Locust street on Saturday at noon. The company expects to be completely installed by Monday noon, but its service station will be in operation Monday morning early. The service department will be at the main entrance on Leonard avenue. The offices and salesrooms will face on Locust street in the new building which is of very handsome design with an interior equipment and arrangement which is unusual.

Take Your Cue From New York

Happen along Broadway any day and watch the fashionable and wealthy drive by in their National Highway cars. These New York buyers are known to be the most discriminating kind, constantly searching for the acme of perfection in motor car style, construction and finish.

Among those for whom price is no factor, the popularity of the "National Highway" was never greater. It has the "class" the New Yorker favors, it has the smartness, the snap, the ginger, the go, the punch!

New York is the best market in the world for better grade cars. Only two other cars of the National "Highway" Twelve price (or better) have sold as many cars this year, as the sales of National cars—and both of these other cars were of the Multiple Cylinder construction (V Type Motor) like the National Twelve.

In fact, of all the better grade cars (over $1700) sold this year more than 70 per cent. have been of the Multiple Cylinder Type.

You can step into the National Salesrooms right here in your city and see the very cars that have taken New York by storm. You will see more than bodies of surpassing grace and excellence of finish; you will see the pattern by which other cars will be made next year. The National's fifteen years of successful experience is reflected in the mechanical structure of these "Highway" Twelve Cylinder cars at $1990.

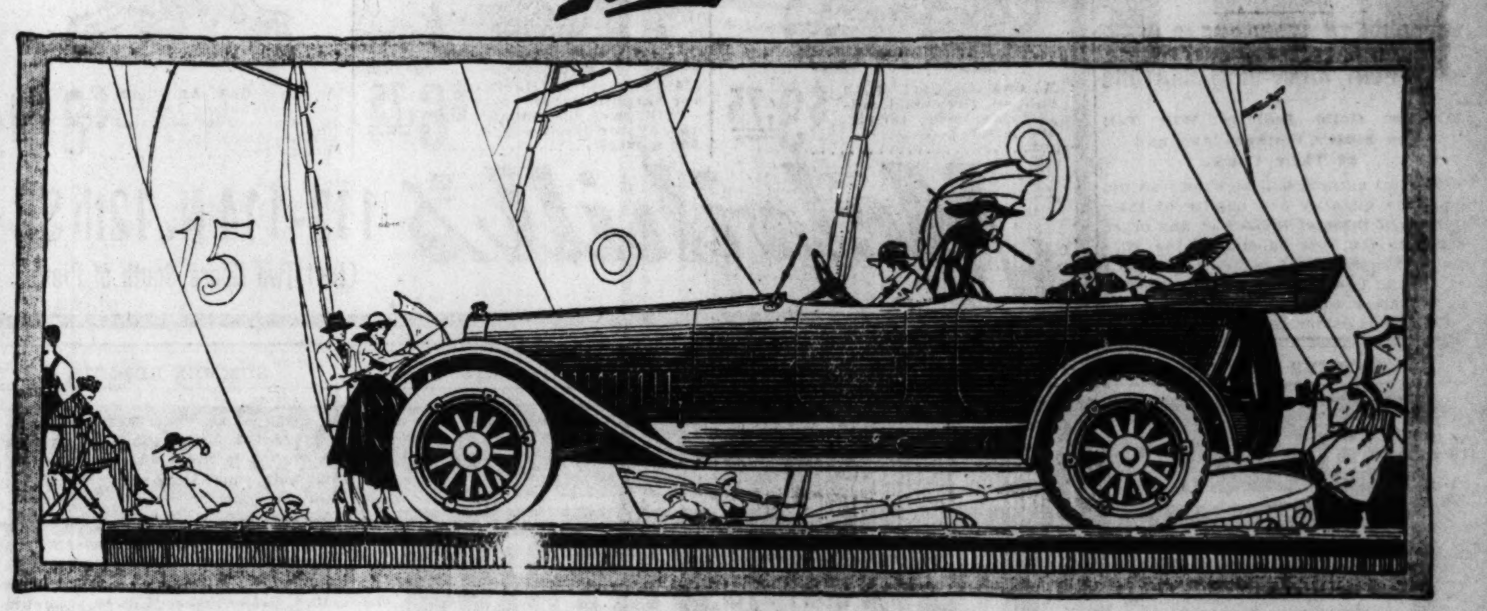
$1325 F. O. B. Racine
127-inch Wheelbase
48 Horsepower—26 Extra Features



Let Us Show You

1—The Latest Model Out
2—The Most Complete Car
3—The 219,000-Mile Car
4—The 26 Extra Features

The Mid-Year Mitchell—the 17th model built by John W. Bate—will appeal to the man who believes in efficiency. It is the finest example of scientific car building to be found among high grade cars.

It would be a vast mistake to decide on a fine car before knowing this Mid-Year Mitchell.

Other cars in this class have their friends, of course. Each has certain claims. But the New Mitchell typifies a big thing in car building. It is, we believe, the biggest thing to consider. That is, engineering and factory efficiency as applied by John W. Bate.

And we can prove to you—at this showroom—that many noted engineers consider that Mitchell is the car that must dominate.

See the New Ideas

We have an exceptional model to tempt you here just now. It embodies 73 new conceptions. It has 26 extra features, unique to the Mitchell—each something you will want.

It combines in one car all the best ideas brought out in 257 New York Show models. And the touring car design is the one that was voted the handsomest of the year.

We have all of these interesting things to attract you. No other one car has more than a few of them. But you will learn here facts of far greater importance.

What Cars Must Be

This concern is 82 years old. It is 13 years old as a motor car builder. It is too old and too wise to aim at transient success.

We have built slowly but soundly. Years ago we brought John W. Bate, the efficiency engineer, to this factory. And we gave him free rein. Under his direction we have invested $5,000,000 in the model automobile plant.

He has reduced factory costs about half in six years. In the Mitchell of today he gives 20 per cent better value than the nearest rival car, we believe. This is shown in the car, in its price, in our extras.

700 Improvements

In the car itself Mr. Bate and his experts have devised over 700 improvements. He has almost rid it of castings, heavy and brittle. There are 440 parts in the Mitchell which are drop forged or steel stamped.

Part by part he has made the Mitchell as fine as it can be, as stanch, as light, as enduring.

We know of one Mitchell car—a Bate design—which has run 218,734 miles. We know of six Mitchell cars which have averaged 164,372 miles each—over 30 years of ordinary service. The records of Motordom show no comparable service.

We say that cars of the future—cars that live—must follow these lines of efficiency.

Bring the Ladies

The beauty of this car will amaze them. They'll delight in the novel conveniences. By a ride they will get a new idea of comfort, due to Bate cantilever springs.

Men or women, laymen or experts, will find in this Mitchell some scores of appeals which other cars don't offer. For your own sake come and see them.

PAIGE TRIUMPHS IN FRISCO HILL CLIMB

"Since the days of the first automobile hill climbing has been one of the most popular and impressive ways of demonstrating a car's power and stamina," says Henry Krohn, sales manager of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. "It certainly is inspiring to see a motor car mount a steep grade and roll triumphantly over a lofty crest.

"In San Francisco just now one of the best advertised spots in town is Duncan Hill. The hill had long been regarded as an extremely difficult grade for a car to negotiate. A certain motor car dealer, however, advertised confidently that at an hour named he would drive his car up and over the hill and he invited the public to be present and see him turn the trick.

"The public came in large numbers and they watched the over-ambitious dealer try to drive up the hill. Four times he tried and four times he failed.

"One of our Paige salesmen in San Francisco determined to take advantage of the situation. Taking a "Six-46" out of stock he drove to the hill one evening and tried it out. The Paige mounted to the crest without trouble.

"Thereupon, a large sign was prepared and wrapped around the body of the Paige. It announced that this car would climb Duncan hill every day for 10 days as often as anyone cared to ride up and the load was limited only to the capacity of the car—seven people. And so climbing Duncan hill in a Paige became the popular outdoor sport for 10 days, hundreds of people taking advantage of the offer."

ST. LOUISAN INVENTS NEW INNER TUBE

Edward Sterns, president of the Efficiency Oil Corporation of St. Louis, and the inventor of the Sterns automobile inner tube, announced this week that definite plans have been made assuring St. Louis' entry into this new line of industry.

Sterns is a St. Louisan and is well-known in local automobile circles, having been identified with this industry in many years. He is the inventor of numerous products manufactured by the Efficiency Oil Corporation.

Thre years ago Sterns turned his efforts to designing and making an automobile tube which would be absolutely puncture-proof, and yesterday a number of St. Louisans interested in the automobile industry and to newspaper representatives he demonstrated at the Automobile Row branch of the Efficiency Oil Corporation, 3213 Locust street, a pneumatic tube which he claims will revolutionize the present day methods of tube manufacture.

The Sterns tube is in appearance like other inner tubes, but is constructed of a patented black rubber material which is positive proof aganst punctures and blow-outs and is to be sold to motorists under a factory guarantee of 20,000 miles at a price slightly higher than that charged for other tubes.

The construction of these tubes makes them unusually resilient and they are intended for either pleasure car or light truck usage. They require 40 per cent less air inflation and there is but a slight difference in their weight and the weight of other good quality tubes.

In demonstrating his product Sterns subjected it to several severe tests, one of which consisted of driving nails entirely through the tube and removing them without the loss of air, proving beyond doubt its puncture-proof qualities.

Sterns also stated that recently an endurance test was conducted in which one of these tubes was run on a rear wheel of a 1500-pound truck, which covered a distance greater than 48,000 miles and he claimed that when removed the tube was still in good condition. During this test only three casings were used, bearing out a claim made by Sterns of added casing life through the use of his tube.

The Sterns Tire and Tube Co. is the name of the concern which will produce these tubes and it is the intention of officials to begin operations as soon as possible. They expect to have their product ready for sale in St. Louis within 90 days and early in the fall work will be started on the erection of a large factory upon the 10-acre tract adjoining the Efficiency Oil Corporation plant, near Suburban Gardens, in St. Louis County.

MUTUAL MOTORS ANNOUNCE FOR 1917

"Now, ready for delivery, our 1917 line—the Marion-Handley Six Pre-eminent, in two sizes," is the announcement of the Mutual Motors Co. of Jackson, Mich., for whom the Edison Automobile Co. is local representative. "The new car is a beauty in every sense of the word," said Mr. Ottoby yesterday. "The six-forty weighing under 2700 pounds, with a 120-inch wheelbase and four-inch tires, makes an ideal family car with its roomy, seven-passenger seating capacity. The six-sixty has a wheelbase of 125 inches, 4½-inch tires and power enough under its handsome hood to carry the car anywhere under almost any condition. For the car owner who wants power in abundance this car will make a mighty appeal.

"Both cars are upholstered in real, long grain, bright finish leather, overcurled hair and double springs. Both have the specially designed and double reinforced frames which eliminate side sway. Both have all standard equipment, including Westinghouse electrical system and Stewart-Warner vacuum feed system. The six-forty is finished in a deep, rich wine color with gold striping. ACCESSORY JOBBERS TO MEET IN ST. LOUIS NEXT

The automobile interests of St. Louis seem to think that they have accomplished a big thing in inducing the National Association of Automobile Accessory Jobbers to hold its fall 1916 meeting in St. Louis next October. This organization is one of the strongest in the automobile business and covers the entire country. It has about 275 active members, all jobbers, and it has an associate membership of manufacturers. Its main purpose, laid out definitely, is to systematize and correct the many abuses which are prevalent in the handling and sale of motor car accessories. The association has just completed its quarterly meeting at Hot Springs, Va. Several St. Louisans attended that meeting, including John F. Shuford of the Phoenix Auto Supply Co., L. E. Allmon of the Missouri Auto Specialty Co., and L. C. Blake of the Curtis & Co. Mfg. Co. These St. Louisans vigorously worked for St. Louis as the next meeting place, and managed to land the plum.

Vacuum System

More Miles Per Gallon

Put a Stewart Vacuum System on your car and it will give you power and mileage from that 10% to 20% of your gas you are now wasting.

The old pressure system requires tiresome hand pumping every time you start your car; constant inspection of pump, pipe lines, air gauge, and tank in futile attempts to keep air leaks out.

Even more serious now-a-days with gas prices soaring up is its forced pressure of gas through the carburetor causing a wastage of from 10% to 20%.

The gravity system is archaic. Every time that your carburetor is higher than your gas tank your engine goes dead.

With a Stewart Vacuum System on your car you are always sure of an even, positive flow of gasoline to your carburetor under all conditions.

Over 60% of all automobile manufacturers use the Stewart Vacuum System.

If you are going to drive your present car this season bring it up to date by installing a Stewart Vacuum System.

It can be put on any car now in use. Price only $10 complete.

In buying a new car get the convenience, pleasure, safety and low upkeep cost obtainable only in cars equipped with Stewart Products. Insist on a Stewart Speedometer, Stewart Tire Pump, Stewart Warning Signal and Stewart Vacuum System. They will cost you nothing extra.

It is a beautifully constructed motor car with the finest and most attractive of the season's bodies.

Most flexible and easily handled, full of life and go, richly upholstered in genuine leather, economical in operation and free from any hint of experimentation or untried theory, the Chandler is deservedly the most popular medium priced car in the whole American market this year.

TURNS MOTOR CAR INTO TRAVELING HOME

H. S. French of Muskegon, Mich., has just reached his home, after a trip from Miami, Fla. Mr. French and his family made the long journey in a leisurely fashion in a Dodge Bros. motor car. The important part of the story is the clever way in which Mr. French used his car as a home for the tourists and not only enjoyed the open but did away with the expense of stopping at hotels.

Before starting on the trip a cooking outfit and table utensils of aluminum was purchased, and a suit case arranged for carrying this equipment in the easiest manner. The back of the front seat of the car was hinged and a large canvas cover for the car was purchased.

During the trip the party cooked most of its meals in the open and practically every night was spent in the car. By letting down the hinged back of the front seat a comfortable bed was secured and the canvas cover, which reached the ground all around the car, protected the party from the elements.

One good policy of motor pleasure insurance is to have the valves ground and reseated for each 2000 or 2500 miles of travel.

EMPIRE ESTABLISHES COAST TO COAST RECORD

When Bobby Hammond driving an Empire from San Francisco landed in New York at 1:59 p. m. May 23, he established a new trans-continental record of 6 days 10 hours and 58 minutes, clipping 25 hours from the best previous time for a tour from Coast to Coast.

Hammond left San Francisco at 12:01 a. m. Wednesday, May 17, carrying a United States mail sack containing greetings from Mayor Rolfe of San Francisco to Mayor Mitchell at New York. Practically without stop he drove to Ogden, Utah, in 36 hours; thence the route was via Cheyenne, Omaha, Clinton, Ft Wayne, Canton, Pittsburg and Philadelphia to New York. The direct mileage on this route is 3485 miles or about 80 miles further than the Southern route. This gives an average speed of about 22.50 miles per hour. It is the course of the Lincoln Highway and the record, therefore, stands also for this transcontinental road. Outside of Hammond's run from Frisco to Ogden, the fourth day's run was the most sensational when without companion he drove from Omaha, Neb., to Elkhart, Ind., over 600 miles in about 17 hours.

The record driver and car was enthusiastically greeted upon his arrival. Representing the city government, Traffic Officer Pat MacDonald, stationed at Forty-second street and Broadway, champion weight thrower, signaled Hammond's checking book on the completion of the tour. Big Pat stopped traffic as the crowd gathered, then the tourists drove to the city hall, violated all precedents by bumping the curb and driving across the Esplanade to the very door.

Hammond and Wasson carried their mail sack to the Mayor's office, where in the absence of the executive, Secretary Martin broke the seal and emptied the sack. Only once on the long trip did Hammond run foul of the authorities. This was nearly the end of his trip in Jersey City when he was arrested for speeding but was released on cash bail; but for this delay and an accident near Pittsburg, he probably would have taken other hours off the record.

The Empirt driven on the record-breaking tour was a regular Empire chassis fitted with speedster type body and extra tanks for gasoline, oil and water.

OUR TRUCKS IN FRANCE

Reports speak highly of the service given by American-built motor trucks on the firing line of the great war. Comparisons of actual performance show the European carriers are generally outclassed when the tests and needs call for unusual service.

The real reason dates back to the fundamental difference in the construction of foreign and American motor vehicles. European motor trucks are designed and built to negotiate perfect roads. Little road clearance and power was needed when the war broke out and roads were good, but now the famous European highways are destroyed. Great ruts, mud holes and almost impassible barriers appear where smooth macadam, packed by years of easy travel, existed before. Here is where the power, great clearance, strength and durability of American trucks turned failure into success.

Built originally to surmount any condition of service, American trucks, and Velie trucks, in particular, have received the greatest praise. Word from Havre, France, a few days ago states that a boat arived with a fleet of 40 Velie trucks. These were uncrated and assembled immediately, loaded to capacity with perishable goods and emergensy supplies and started for Paris. Heretofore many hundreds of Velie trucks along with others have been sent direct from Havre to Paris empty, but with the new order of things Paris is fed by motor trucks kept continually carrying needed supplies from the docks to the city and munitions from the city to the front.

WATSON IN ST. LOUIS

Don Watson, general sales manager of the Haynes Automobile Co., visited with their St. Louis distributers, the Newell Motor Car Co., 3003 Locust street, Wednesday, and was the dinner guest Wednesday evening of Ernest B. Foote, sales manager, and E. I. Danaher, secretary of the Newell concern.

Watson says the winter sales of the Haynes car has been exceptionally heavy. He cited as one incident that a Western distributer secured 100 Haynes light sixes on Jan. 1, and had disposed of everyone of them in 30 days' time.

"I could cite many similar instances of large distribution during the winter months," said Mr. Watson, "and this goes to show that the automobile is not to be considered a summer item any more. It is used all the year round and the new cars are a source of great comfort in winter, as well as in summer."

The production of the Haynes factory, according to Mr. Watson, showed an increase of 53 per cent this year, from Jan. 1 to May 1, over the same period of last year, and they expect to increase their output at least 50 per cent more between now and July 1.

Martin V. Kelley Co. to Open a New York Branch.

An important development in the advertising business will be the opening June 1 of a branch of the Martin V. Kelley Co. of Toledo at 171 Madison avenue, New York City. In taking this step the Kelley company, which is conservatively estimated to rank among the foremost agencies in the United States in volume of business handled, has acquired by purchase the business of Bromfield & Field, Incorporated, of New York. This will add to the Kelley business several large advertising accounts, including those of the Fisk Rubber Co. of Chicopee Falls, Mass.; the Ajax Rubber Co., Trenton, N. J.; the Mercer Automobile Co., the Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Co. and P. Centemeri & Co.

The Kelley company was already handling the advertising of the Willys-Overland Co., the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation, Champion Spark Plug Co., Milburn Wagon Co., Electric Auto-Light Co. and many others.

Martin V. Kelley, head of the company, has been a leading figure in advertising business for many years.

OUTPUT BEHIND DEMAND

Despite the fact that the Thomas B. Jeffery Co. is bringing into play all its tremendous manufacturing facilities in turning out just double its planned output of the Jeffery six, every day sees the supply of this striking car falling farther and farther behind the demand.

"In view of this situation," says L. H. Bill, general manager of the company, "it would not do for us to advertise the six to any but a limited extent. Dealers everywhere are constantly begging us to send them fresh shipments.

"The Jeffery six has exceeded our fondest expectations, though of course we knew we had a wonderful car to offer before it was introduced at the New York and Chicago shows. Perhaps no other car of its class has ever been sold without extensive advertising. The Jeffery six made its debut at the New York and Chicago shows virtually unheralded and since then has required little, if any, propagation."

Use your horn. It puts the obligation on the other fellow.

Why You Should Own a Maxwell

Comfort	First, because it is a comfortable riding car. Plenty of room for five people; deep, soft cushions; springs made of the best spring steel, scientifically heat-treated, accurately suspended and balanced. You will always be comfortable in a Maxwell.
Appearance	Second, because the Maxwell is a trim, smart, good-looking car. Many makers of heavy, high priced cars, as you know, have copied the general lines, the shape of the body and hood of the Maxwell. This is more of a compliment than an infringement.
Service	Third, because the Maxwell, being a product of thirteen years evolution, is so designed and manufactured that it gives unfailing, consistent and and satisfying service to thousands of owners. Maxwell cars are made of the best materials that money and brains can buy—and they are made right. You can get out of any car only what is put into it.
Low First-Cost	Fourth, because you get everything in a Maxwell that you can get in any car and you get it for less money. The answer to this is that the Maxwell is a light car and it is built in enormous quantities. The Maxwell Co. is one of the three largest producers of high grade motor cars in the world.
Low After-Cost	Fifth, because the Maxwell will give you more miles per dollar than any car built. We say this without hesitation or doubt. It is our honest belief and we are willing to prove it by Maxwell owners, by comparison with any other car or by any other way you suggest or prefer. The Maxwell will please you. We know it will. Let us arrange for a demonstration and we'll take the responsibility of satisfying you completely.

MEN AND MATERIAL ARE CRYING NEED OF MAKER

F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., spent the greater part of the week in the East, and part of the time at the Buick factory at Flint for the purpose of rearranging shipping schedules so as to move forward the orders that are delayed by reason of the demand occasioned by the spring rush, which has opened in all sections of the country.

"I found that all the factories in the automobile centers were very busy," said Mr. Vesper, "and that while the freight car situation had eased up a trifle, at least over some of the roads, other difficulties such as a shortage of certain materials and occasional shortage of labor, were making things rather uncomfortable for the manufacturer. Never before in the history of the industry has the spring opened with such a tremendous volume of business for the manufacturer, and they are absolutely swamped with orders; in fact, one of the factories that I called on stated that if they did not receive another order, they had enough on their books to take every car they could manufcture up to Nov. 1, and I know that quite a lot of other factories are in the same fix.

"In Detroit there is a shortage of labor of certain kinds in the automobile industry, and apparently a big labor shortage for ordinary labor, for I noticed in driving over the city at quite a number of points where the street car company was repairing tracks, they had big signs posted on the work, 'Men wanted,' and in the warehouse district I noticed quite a number of signs on different warehouses to the same effect."

OLLIER CALLS GOOD ROAD BIG AID TO BUSINESS

To some people good roads mean simply an advantage for the motorist's benefit, enabling him to get from place to place comfortably, safely and on time, says L. T. Ollier, vice president and director of sales for the Studebaker Corporation. Good roads add much to the pleasures of touring, and that the better roads the more fun people get out driving their cars.

Yet good roads mean more than an opportunity to get out on tours from the health-giving and pleasure standpoints. Good roads are closely bound up with progress and prosperity.

We can all remember how only a few years ago city people paid little attention to good roads and how farmers were even opposed to the expenditure of funds for the betterment of highways.

Good roads an dthe automobile have taken people out into the country. They have banished forever the isolation of farm life. They have increased health and prolonged life. They have enabled people to dig in and put better efforts into their work as a result of the relaxation and broadening out experiences of the week-end trip into the country.

Good roads and the automobile have business. By means of good roads an outlet to the congestion in cities has been afforded. New towns have sprung up. Automobiles have followed or preceded good roads, as the case may be, with the result that dreary expanses have been transformed into thriving communities. Farm values have been increased. The monotony of farm life has disappeared.

Business concerns, because of good roads, now deliver goods by motor trucks out into the country to points where in the past they would not have dreamed of handling in any way except by railroad. The result is that they now make deliveries the same day, whereas it formerly required all the way from three days to a week by freight.

In city and country alike it is appreciated that business follows the route of the best roads. Actual experiences, often unfortunate ones, will more and more stimulate sections of the country which may have lagged behind to spend the necessary money and by building better roads bring back the thriving activity that went elsewhere.

LOW GASOLINE RECORD.

The high cost of gasoline has no terrors for the man who owns a Pullman. The Ideal Motor Sales Co., 1312 South Grand avenue, St. Louis, representative of the famous Pullman car, has just received an interesting account of the gruelling test made by G. C. Eichelberger of Pittsburg and his associates, who drove nine Pullmans from York, Pa., to the smoky city, a distance of 220 miles, averaging 19.02 miles per gallon of gasoline, a remarkable record for brand-new cars.

Here's Eichelberger's own story of how his Pullmans defied the Alleghenies and put to rout the gasoline bugaboo:

"Leaving the factory with nine cars at 4 o'clock p. m., we drove to Gettysburg, went over the battlefield, and then to Chambersburg. Stopping there over night we left Sunday morning, driving through to Pittsburg, covering approximately 170 miles without a particle of trouble to any car.

"We crossed six mountains on the trip and anyone who knows the road will tell you that the balance of it is hard on gasoline, but all our cars came through with good averages, the cloverleaf roadster making 19.02 miles pergallon and the touring cars from 17 to 18."

LIKE V TYPE MOTOR.

"Cars with V-type motors now have a big lead in this year's race for sales," said George M. Dickson, managing director of the factory building National 12-cylinder cars. "Of all the large and better grade cars sold this year, more than 70 per cent are of the multiple cylinder type. Although this statement is very conclusive, it does not detract from the successful operation and sales of the smaller and lower priced cars. It does mean, however, that among the larger and better grade cars the V-type of motor now dominates.

"The public's cordial reception of the 12-cylinder car establishes a precedent in motor car history," declares Dickson. "It is the first important change introduced in the history of the industry that has been so rapidly adopted, without argument or doubt. Even the innovation of such meritorious features as the self-starter and electric lights required a lot of 'explaining' and salesmanship to get the public to accept these advantages. That the public have absolutely accepted without argument the 12 as another great advancement is a rare compliment to the first two concerns that have introduced 12-cylinder cars this season."

CLIMBED HARD HILL.

Ohio's worst hill has been conquered at last. Motor cars of all makes have tried for years to go over on high gear. Fifteen other cars tried it this time—unsuccessfully. It was a Westcott Six-42 that smoothed its steep grades and straightened out its tortuous turns. The contest took place a few days ago on Horseshoe Bend hill, near Ludlow Falls, about eighteen miles northeast of Dayton. The Westcott is declared to be the only car of more than 120-inch wheelbase that ever has negotiated the hill on high gear.

The Westcott was piloted by G. F. Deady of the Atlas Garage & Sales Co., Westcott distributor for the Dayton territory. Deady is an expert mechanic and knows the car he was driving, but the car itself is a regular stock Model Six-42 five-passenger touring car. The accomplishment is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that among the unsuccessful contestants were four, six, eight and twelve cylinder cars, some of which sell for more than twice the price of the Westcott. One or two of them succeeded in getting a little more than half way up the steep grade. The test was conducted before about 150 motor car enthusiasts from Dayton, Troy, Piqua and other Ohio cities.

MAXWELL COMPANY GIVES BOOM TO NEWCASTLE

Within the last five years Newcastle, Ind., has graduated from a little town to a prosperous city and the transformation has been due chiefly to the influence of the Maxwell Motor Co. When the big automobile organization located one of its mammoth factories in this place less than 10 years ago, the population was close to 5000. Now it is in the neighborhood of 15,000. The town has become congested. Transportation and housing problems are engaging the attention of the city officials.

The situation became so acute that the officials of the Newcastle plant of the Maxwell Company offered to co-operate with the city planners in effecting a remedy and plan has been evolved that will not only take care of all the residents of Newcastle, but also provide for many others who are being attracted to the place by its industrial activity.

More building is going on in Newcastle this spring than ever before in the history of the town. This also is due directly to the iniative of the officials of the Maxwell Company at Newcastle.

At the suggestion of the Maxwell officials a corporation known as the Greater Newcastle Company was formed and capitalized at $100,000. A tract of land, 75 acres, adjacent to the Maxwell plant, was purchased and divided into lots. The city was induced to buy 10 acres of this ground for park purposes. The remaining 65 acres were divided into 250 lots. None of these lots are less than 50 feet wide and 132 feet deep.

The building of attractive five-room houses of the bungalow type is now progressing rapidly. Streets, alleys and sewers are being built.

DAILY SAVING 75 CENTS.

The average motor truck owner will save, during 1916, about $225 on every one of his motor trucks that is equipped with electric starting and lighting apparatus, according to H. C. Hart, truck sales manager of the Thomas B. Jeffery Co. Three year's study of motor truck operation in the city of Chicago disclosed the fact that the average machine covers about sixty miles a day in about five hours of actual running time. During the remaining five hours of each working day, the motor is kept running from one to three hours while the truck is standing still.

At the pravailing price of gasoline this means a loss of about 75 cents a day for the time the truck is not doing any useful work. Figuring 300 working days to a year, this loss amounts to $225, or the interest on a capitalization of $3750 at 6 per cent.

The new light Jeffery truck models are furnished with electric starting and lighting apparatus as standard equipment, and even the famous Jeffery Quad can be fitted with the Jeffery-Bijur two-unit starting and lighting system at the nominal cost of $100 extra, although this equipment is not considered quite as necessary on a heavy duty motor truck, where, under average conditions, longer runs are made.

SIMPLE AS A CANOE.

The birch canoe of the Northern Indian, long regarded as the acme of simplicity as regards motive power, would be no more simple, according to motor experts, than the new Marmon 34 motor, even if the canoe were capable of a speed of 55 miles an hour for an indefinite run. The aluminum built motor, introduced in the new Marmon, has only three gears in its entire mechanism. The water pump is directly connected to the crankshaft, and the reduction of parts in the motor is in keeping with the design of the entire car. The simple motor than can maintain for hours a burst of racing speed and yet be managed with the ease of a yacht is generally conceded to be a high water mark in motor construction.

FEDERAL ROAD AID UP TO CONFEREES

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20.—Federal roads legislation in the present Congress now rests with the conferees of the Senate and the House of Representatives, with indications that an agreement is practically assured.

The Senate has just passed the Bankhead bill, named after the chairman on the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, while the House previously had accepted the Shackleford bill of its Committee on Roads.

Both measures had their basis in a draft prepared by the American Association of State Highway Officials which had the endorsement of the American Automobile Association and other organizations interested in highways improvement.

With Federal good roads legislation disposed of, and the Senate and House measures in the hands of the conferees, the American Automobile Association will now devote itself in an effort to secure the passage of the Adamson bill before the conclusion of the present Congress.

Nearly three million users of automobiles have an interest in the Adamson open-door policy, which briefly gives the self-propelled vehicle the same interstate rights as are now possessed by horse-drawn wagons and carriages; in fact, it would make country-wide the present New York State reciprocity. New York offers to the motorcar owners of other states reciprocity for whatever period that state will give to a New York State owner, which means one day or the entire 365 days of the year.

LET YOUR CAR ALONE.

"If you would have the most enjoyment out of your car don't be a tinker," said James E. Newell, local Dort distributer. "There are certain things every man should know about his car, and attend to himself religiously; but there are other things that should be left to the experienced mechanic and the less the owner has to do with these th happier he is going to be.

"The owner who is continually experimenting with his car usually has his hands full of trouble. There are some men who are naturally of a mechanical turn of mind, and these men keenly enjoy working about their cars. They are capable and they do not get themselves into trouble. But the average owner who attempts fine adjustments, experiments, rear axle, motor bearings, valve tappets, etc., usually wishes he had let his car alone before he is through.

Stopping, and therefore starting, the car frequently on the starter discharges the battery rapidly. Your car in motion generates current for the battery when it is moving at a speed of 18 to 20 miles an hour. Give the car a good run to the country and back, and your battery will have a lot of "pep." Thus, a pleasant drive may save you some supposedly repair costs.

HOW I INCREASED MY WEIGHT

Thin People Tell How They Put On New Flesh By Harmless Home Method

"Young Hermans," the clever Chicago boxer (photo above), writes to say: "I dropped in weight to 138 pounds which caused my manager mucn alarm. He suggested Sargol. I had not finished my second box when I found I had increased to 149 pounds. It is good, solid, healthy flesh put on by your wonderful Sargol." "When I began taking Sargol I weighed 123 pounds. The day I took the last I weighed 135 pounds. I was awful thin, my face was pale, my cheeks sunk in, but now my face is fat and round," states a gentleman from New Orleans. "I weighed 121 pounds when I commenced to take Sargol and now I weigh 155. If you would have seen me before I took it you would not believe I was the same person," declares Mrs. Maggie Neater in reporting her 34-pound gain in weight.

Sargol succeeds because it seems to make the food work and stick. With perfect assimilation the nourishing, strengthening, flesh-making materials in the food instead of passing from the body as waste stay in the body to build flesh, fat and muscular tissue upon your skin and bones. The testimony of hundreds of men and women, old and young, is the best answer as to whether Sargol has built flesh. It isn't a question of how these people looked or felt or what their friends said or thought. They just began to take Sargol and began to get fat and wrote to tell us about it. To better introduce the merits of Sargol in this vicinity we want to send to every thin man and woman reader of this paper who wants to increase weight, a 50-cent package of Sargol free. Either Sargol will increase your weight or it won't and the only way you can know is to try it. Weigh yourself and measure yourself before you begin and after you finish let the scales tell the story. No drastic diet, flesh creams, massages, oils or emulsions but a simple, harmless home treatment that can be taken privately. By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FAYETTE, Mo., May 27.—The Board of Curators of Central College will meet here June 5 and inquire into a controversy between President Paul H. Linn and the students, which has kept the college community in considerable turmoil since the early part of April and has resulted in the suspension of 27 students, all of whom have, however, been reinstated.

The students have sent committees all over the State to see members of the board and relate to them their grievances against the President. Linn will present his side of the case in his annual report to the board.

Linn, students say, has been dictatorial, arbitrary and untactful with the students and has provoked rebellion by imposition of hateful restrictions.

Early in April B. S. Drain, a freshman, was hazed by about 25 students, who paddled him in the good old-fashioned way and compelled him to push a peanut with his nose and chase bugs up a pole.

Students Stage Fake Fight.

Two weeks later, April 17, while the hazing was being investigated, about 50 students engaged in a fake fight on the campus. Harold Mabrey was carried to his room in Brannock dormitory. Freshmen not in on the "fight" were told that he had been stabbed and were sent for a physician. Someone telephoned to President Linn and he hastened to the dormitory in his automobile.

Mabrey was in bed, surrounded by students. Red ink had been used copiously and so realistically that it was some time before the President realized that it was a hoax.

Twenty-three students were suspended for participation in the hazing of Drain. The students had a mass meeting and there was talk of a walkout. A petition for the reinstatement of the men and promising obedience to the rules in the future was signed by 160 of the 200 students. It was presented by a committee. It was "turned down" by President Linn, but later the students were reinstated on confession of misconduct and promises of good behavior in the future.

President's Action Approved.

On Monday evening, May 15, the Phi Alpha Literary Society, at an open session, had its annual anniversary program. The society journal, "The Inquirer," edited by L. D. Nichols, L. R. Penn and M. B. Majors, was read by Nichols. The college situation was reviewed from the students' standpoint and the president and faculty were criticised with considerable freedom and warmth.

The following Saturday the three editors were suspended. That night the students held another mass meeting. A walk-out of the students was again urged by the most radical element. Instead of that, a motion was adopted by a vote of about 100 to 17 that committees be sent to lay the situation before the curators.

Three committees were chosen. The men named on them had not been involved in any friction with the faculty and were students of the highest standing, against whom there were no marks. Keen Johnson and E. D. Beals were sent to St. Louis, W. C. Cochrane and Stanley Merritt to Kansas City and G. A. Bergfield and H. W. Godfrey to Jefferson City, Mexico, Nevada and Slater. All the curators were seen.

No demand for the removal of President Linn was made, but the unhappy condition of affairs at the college was laid before the curators. They were told that probably a hundred of the students would not return next year under the conditions which now prevailed and were asked to make an investigation. The committeemen returned to the college encouraged by the manner in which the curators had received them and listened to their statements.

President's Action Approved.

Following the meeting at which the committees were appointed, another meeting was held by students who are spoken of as President Linn's admirers. The attendance was 17. A statement was drawn up approving the president's course of action and signed by the 17. The number of signers was later increased to about 30.

The issue of the Central Collegian of May 11 contained a great deal of criticism of the president and faculty. M. H. Sydney, the editor-in-chief, was suspended. Thereupon, the student staff of the publication decided to suspend it. There were to have been three more issues before the end of the school year.

A few days ago Penn and Nichols of the Inquirer were reinstated. Thursday afternoon Majors, the remaining Inquirer editor, and Sydney, the Collegian editor-in-chief, were reinstated.

Following the suspension of the Inquirer editors, the Aristotlean Society decided to cancel the arrangements for its annual open session, on the ground that if it was held there could be no freedom of speech.

President Linn, when seen by the Post-Dispatch correspondent, declined to make a statement or discuss the situation for publication, on the ground that he was to make a report to the Board of Curators on June 5, giving the details of what he termed a family row, and he did not wish to anticipate that statement.

A LOOK AROUND

By Clark McAdams.

IF Col. Roosevelt is not to make any greater rumpus at Chicago next month than seems probable now, $100,000 is going to be a terrible price for that city to pay for the convention. The successful bid contemplated a struggle between Titans. Evidently, there is to be nothing of the sort. The Republicans are merely going into a hall and nominate Hughes, while the Progressives will meet in some hotel parlor and nominate Roosevelt. There will be no excitement whatever, adherents of the opposing candidates will be kept roped off in restaurants and saloons, and there will be none of that violence which characterized the Republican convention of four years ago. Some people even think that Roosevelt will accept Hughes, in which case it will not be necessary to put up ropes. Personally I expect Chicago to get a better run for her money than that. I think Roosevelt will refuse to accept the nominee upon the ground that bosses against whom the people are struggling frustrated the popular will, and that the Progressives will proceed to their own affairs just as if peace had never been mentioned. Roosevelt has to run for President on some ticket, and if he cannot run as the Republican candidate he will continue the even tenor of his way as a Bull Moose. There is nothing heroic about Hughes. There is no assurance in his record that he would defend the country against invasion. There is only silence, the weakness of having no positive opinions, and that same unconsciousness of danger to which the Colonel has so frequently pointed with alarm. These things being so, it does not seem that the Colonel can escape running himself. He is an honorable man. He has his duty. Therefore should Chicago worry. It will not be exciting, but it will be worth $50,000 perhaps, and a loss of only half the money one invests in any enterprise is nothing—in Chicago.

On the Unhappy Plight of the Poor Pacifists.

MR. FORD lost patience last week. He said damn, and expressed regret that his friend Mr. Edison had marched in the fool New York parade. As a matter of fact, no one else in this country is as unhappy just now as the pacifists are. There is a great deal to be said on their side, and they can't say it. You probably know how that is yourself. It is a terrible position to be placed in. A gentleman who was here the other day from Chicago tells me that in a debate up there on this subject between Prof. Scott Nearing and Charles Edward Russell the preponderence of reason was upon the side of the pacifists to such a degree that Mr. Russell was constructively driven from the stage. All the pacifists feel that this would be the case if they but dared to make themselves heard. They cannot be heard because the country is down with war fever caught from the plague abroad. All that can be done about it is to hope that with the end of the war in Europe we shall have an atmosphere of greater dispassion in which this great subject can be debated. There is no debating it now. We must prepare against all those evils conjured out of our state of mind. Mr. Edison has probably taken a much saner view of the matter than his friend Mr. Ford. Old and busy as he is, he still managed to get out and march. He gave the widespread sentiment for preparedness the benefit of any doubt that might have been in his mind, and then went back to his workshop at Enloe Park. That is what Mr. Ford ought to do. He should get out all his men and make a tremendous showing for the Ford plant. The air will do the men good, and the demonstration will not do anybody's theory of peace any great harm. Fevers pass.

The Probable Relation Between Hell and Hiwater.

THE probability that there is some relation between hell and hiwater is indicated by what has been going on in the Mississippi Valley since the war in Europe began. One flood closely follows another. Flood seasons have nothing to do with the occurrence of floods. The river comes up whenever it pleases, and people in the lowlands have been reduced to something like the plight of the people of Poland. They have lost their crops and their property until they are in many instances destitute. Almost all these people believe that the war is the cause of the floods. Father Brennan, I think, expressed his opinion as an astronomer that this was probably the case, and it has firmly lodged in the minds of people along the river. There is no use talking to these people about the certainty that wet seasons follow dry ones. Not even the oldest inhabitant ever saw so many floods within so short a time as there have been in the Mississippi Valley in the last year, and only the war satisfactorily accounts for them to people who have spent most of the past year cogitating in tree tops. One thinks hard after one has climbed a tree half a dozen times within a year, and people who have enjoyed special advantages in reflection tell me there can no longer be any two ways about it. The river will never really go down until the bombardment in Europe ceases. Clouds have been rendered flimsy and leaky. The atmosphere is agitated. Living on earth at such a time is exactly like living under a leaky roof in the rainy season. You may believe it or not. The probability is that you would believe it after you had escaped out of your second-story window into a sycamore tree a couple of times.

Jests and Jingles

By

W. H. JAMES

ARABELLA IDENTIFIED.

MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, you'd know her in a minute,
When she goes tripping round the town as blithe as any linnet.
If we recall it right she wears a hat all trimmed with cherries;
On second thought we think they're pears, or maybe they are berries.
Or still we may be wrong at that, and it is just a feather
Which decorates that charming hat in sunny Maytime weather.
Her suit it is a shepherd plaid, as well as we remember.
Though maybe that's the one she had, way back in last November
Perhaps it is a foulard silk, a solid black creation,
Or its a serge as white as milk, defying imitation.
The skirt, we're sure is rather wide, at any rate its pretty
And stylish, we are satisfied, as any in the city.
To you she may seem short or tall, for looks are most deceiving,
And how our eyes may fool us all is really past believing.
She may be blonde, she may be dark, a Venus or a Juno
And if perchance we miss the mark it's probable that YOU know,
For somewhere in this great big town, your Arabella's tripping
In pretty hat and handsome gown, your heart-strings fairly gripping,
And whether she be clad in blue, or white, or pink, or yellow,
The girl that looks the best to you—why that is Arabella.

THE NEW BOGIE MAN.

BE very, very careful
What you do or what you say,
And use all due discreetness
As you pass along the way;
For a pair of eyes is watching
Every move you make, no doubt;
For Schneiderhahn will catch you
If you don't watch out.

When you see a moving picture
Be quite sure he's seen it first,
And never read a magazine
Till he has done his worst
Be very, very circumspect
Whenever he's about
For Schneiderhahn will catch you
If you don't watch out.

LOOKING AHEAD.

O WHERE, O, where shall I park my car?
It's a problem that's driving me dippy:
I've hunted in vain for a vacant space
This side of the Mississippi.

There's always a copper who's on the watch,
Enforcing the regulations,
And he'll run me in if I store my tin
Except at the specified stations.

O, where, O, where shall I park my car?
The puzzle, indeed, is a hot one.
It doesn't exactly bother me now,
But maybe it will when I've got one.

GOING UP.

SING a song of spring time,
Pocket full of dough,
Pinch coats and belt coats
Everywhere you go.

When the stores are opened
The clerks begin to sing:
"Everybody's wearing them;
They are just the thing."

So the stout man buys one
And wears it on the street;
It makes his waist line seem to be
A mile above his feet.

GENERAL ORDER 968.

VERDUN, May 27.—By mutual agreement the following regulations have been made to govern the fighting in this district:

"The French will capture Hill 60 on Tuesdays and Fridays and will be repulsed with heavy losses on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

"The Germans will make desperate charges in close formation at Dead Man's Hill between 1 p. m. and 3 p. m. on Mondays and Thursdays.

"The open shop principle shall be adhered to, but union soldiers shall be required to work only 8 hours a day, with time and a half for overtime and double time for Sundays and holidays.

"There has been too much successful execution of bayonet charges. Until further notice all such charges shall be gallantly repulsed.

"In future all rain checks shall be good for admission to either of the next three succeeding battles, with the sole exception that they will not be honored at double headers."

A LITTLE VAUDEVILLE.

"Hello, Binks."

"Morning, Jinks. Where are you parking your car?"

"In my mind."

"Then if you lose your mind you won't have a car."

"No; if I lose my mind I'll buy one."

"My brother bought one, and he's not crazy about it."

"I see Stifel's for Lamm."

"Sure; he likes to see the Browns lamming the ball."

"That's the naked truth."

"Shut up."

"What's the matter."

"Be careful how you talk. Here comes Mr. Schneiderhahn."

"O, very well. We'll tell him we were talking about the truth with a Palm Beach suit on."

"Better make it a black alpaca."

"I've got one of those pinch-back suits."

"Me too. I'll be pinching back on my grocery bill for six months to pay for it."

"Why did you buy it on time?"

"I didn't have cash. Why didn't you have yours made by a tailor?"

"I didn't have time."

"Time is money."

"Lend me some, will you?"

"Sure. I'll let you have 10 minutes, if you'll pay me back 15 minutes next week."

"Never mind. Speaking of golf, my doctor told me not to drink so much."

"What did you do then?"

"I took a little tea off."

"Where did you get that joke?"

"From Col. Bogey."

"Are you going to be in the preparedness parade?"

"You bet."

"Carrying the banner?"

"No; carrying the hod, with Red McAuliffe."

STARED AT LONG RANGE.

CONGRESSMAN HENRY D. FLOOD of Virginia, tells how two of his constituents emphasized their variant views of the power of the hypnotic eye. One of them contended that the fight could be driven from even the most savage dog by staring him straight in the eye.

"Yes," replied his friend. "I've tried that. A dog was making for me as fast as he could work his pins, and all I could do was to sit down and look him right in the eye."

"You thus demonstrated my contention and that of science."

"But I should have added," the friend went on, "that when I sat down it was near the top of a tall tree."

TALBERT FAVORS PLAN TO WIDEN OLIVE STREET

Director of Streets Thinks Enhanced Realty Values Would More Than Pay for It.

A movement to widen Olive street six feet, from Fourteenth street to Channing avenue, but cutting three feet off each sidewalk, was joined yesterday by Director of Streets Talbert. The plan also contemplates paving Olive street with wood block as far west as Grand avenue.

Director Talbert said he was much in favor of the widening as an aid to traffic movement, and he thinks it would more than pay for itself by enhancing the value of Olive street realty. At present Olive street is shunned by automobiles and other vehicles, he said, in favor of Locust, Chestnut and other parallel streets.

Olive street is 60 feet wide in this section, with 12-foot sidewalks and a 36-foot roadway. By reducing the sidewalks to nine feet the roadway could be made 42 feet wide, and the double track street car service could be accommodated without crowding vehicles on the side.

Dinks Parrish and Daniel C. Meehan, chairman of the Democratic City Central Committee, called on Talbert and arranged to have the widening considered by the Board of Public Service, which will announce a hearing on it as soon as petitions are circulated. Parrish and Meehan say the owners of property west of Jefferson avenue, on Olive have practically all been signed up, and petitions are being circulated east of Jefferson now.

"JOKER" CLAUSE IN WATER RATES BILL IS ELIMINATED

It Compelled Payment of Hose License Whether Hose Was on Premises or Not.

The Board of Aldermen Friday eliminated a "joker" clause from the water rates bill passed in March, which would have compelled householders to pay a hose license if their faucets were threaded for a hose connection, even though no hose was on the premises.

It was this proviso, according to Alderman Haller, that led to his reorganization of the Public Utilities Committee when the new session opened in April. Haller said he thought the committee should have known of its presence in the bill that was reported favorably and warned the other Aldermen that it might cost residents $25,000 a year for hose they did not have. The Aldermen rebelled at Haller's changes in the committee, and elected Alderman Hall to succeed Haller as president, restoring the original committee.

Water Commissioner Wall told the Aldermen the proviso was not a "joker" but was put in the bill deliberately. He said it was the only effectual method of taxing hose. The amendment adopted yesterday will compel the department to follow the old practice of asking the police to report those who sprinkle lawns.

GIRL'S FIANCE KILLED IN WAR

French Soldier Was to Have Married St. Louis Young Woman.

Miss Charlotte L. Volkening, 22 years old, of 4508 Ashland avenue, whose engagement to George Monnin of Bezier, France, was announced here shortly before the outbreak of the war, received a letter yesterday from a soldier comrade of her fiance telling of his death in battle on May 8.

Monnin was in St. Louis for two years in the interest of a French firm, arranging for the purchase and installation of packing house machinery. He left St. Louis April 15 preceding the outbreak of the war. Since that time Miss Volkening has received letters from him almost every week. His last letter was dated May 1, and was received by her May 9, one day after his death.

'PREPAREDNESS OF CHARACTER' TO BE TOPIC OF MEETING

Teachers, Ministers, Writers and Social Workers to Gather at Monte Ne, Ark.

"COIN" HARVEY THE HOST

Addresses by Educators and Others to Be Feature of Conference July 24 to 29.

Many parents, teachers, ministers, writers, editors and heads of fraternal and social organizations are expected to attend the summer conference to be held at Monte Ne, Ark., July 24 to 29, under the direction of the National Committee for Promoting Character Building, of which William H. Harvey, widely known as "Coin" Harvey, is chairman. The conference will be under the direction of W. W. Thomas, president of the Missouri State Teachers' Association and Superintendent of Public Schools at Springfield, Mo.

The promoters of the meeting have issued a statement in which they say that, without reference to the necessity of military preparedness, they believe that the conference will aid in developing a "preparedness of character" which in time will bring peace on earth.

Harvey to Speak.

Chairman Harvey, who also is the owner of the hotel and club accommodations at Monte Ne, will make the opening address and the principal speech on the first day of the conference will be that of Dr. Charles H. Brough, president of the Southern Sociological Congress and Governor-elect of Arkansas. In the afternoon there will be roundtable conferences and general discussions on character building.

On the second day there will be addresses by Dr. A. Ross Hill of the Missouri State University and other noted educators, with conferences in the afternoon and a lecture on the Ozarks by E. M. Shepard in the evening.

Mrs. J. B. McBride, former president of the Missouri Congress of Mothers' Clubs and Parent Teachers' Association, and Howard A. Gass, State Superintendent of Schools, will speak on Wednesday, July 26. There will be an Ozark fiddlers' contest in the evening.

R. H. Wilson, State Superintendent of Schools of Oklahoma, and other educators and sociologists, will be on the Thursday program. In the evening the fiddlers' contest will be concluded.

Gov. Capper of Kansas will be the principal speaker on Friday, July 28. Saturday, the closing day of the conference, will be devoted to receiving committee reports and general discussion of topics connected with education and character building.

"AS YOU LIKE IT" IN FOREST PARK OPENS ON JUNE 5

Just a Week or So to Wait for the Big Shakspearean Open-air Performance.

The weather in the week beginning Monday, June 5, will determine whether visitors to St. Louis in the following week, which is the week of the Democratic National Convention, will have a chance to see the "As You Like It" production in Forest Park.

The open-air Shakspearean performances are scheduled to begin Monday night, June 5, and to continue through the following Sunday night, with a matinee Saturday, making eight performances in all. Seats are now being sold for all these performances, and if any of them is prevented by rain it will have to be given in the following week. If there should be two or three rainy nights, the continuation would run that much longer. The convention opens Wednesday, June 14.

Margaret Anglin, who is to play the part of Rosalind, closed her New York engagement in Oscar Wilde's "A Woman of No Importance" last night. She is expected to arrive here tomorrow morning, accompanied by the 25 actors who will take part with her in the Shakspearean production.

This company includes Robert Mantell as Jacques, Frank Kingdon, Frederic Lewis, Sidney Greenstreet, Genevieve Hamper, Carolyn Brent, Helen Stewart, Max Montesole, Alfred Lunt, Ralph C. Kemmet, Howard Lindsey, Louis Calhern, Henry Hull and Raymond Koch. Calhern and Hull are members of the Park Theater Players, and Raymond Koch is the St. Louisan who won distinction by his playing of the role of Gold in the Masque of St. Louis two years ago.

This company will be assisted by courtiers, foresters, choiresters, shepherds and other costumed personages from an amateur cast of 500.

PARK PLAYERS TO CLOSE WITH $100 PRIZE COMEDY

Elsie Hitz and Minnie Potter to Have Parts in "Kitty Comes In," This Week.

The Park Theater Players will close their season with this week's production of Mrs. Leila Chopin Hattersley's prize comedy, "Kitty Comes In," which opens tomorrow night. This three-act play won a $100 prize in a recent competition. Elsie Hitz, who left the Players early in the spring, will return to take the title role. Mitchell Harris, in the chief masculine role, will make his final appearance with the Players. Miss Minnie Potter, a gifted amateur, will have a role in the play.

This play will not be taken to the Shenandoah next week, as it is planned to use the Shenandoah as a motion picture house for the summer, following this week's musical production, "A Modern Eve." Thursday night a testimonial performance will be given to Louise Allen at the Shenandoah.

The Grand Opera House vaudeville bill will be headed by the Seven White Blackbirds, a comedy specialty. Film bills for the week include the fourth chapter of "Gloria's Romance," with Billie Burke, and feature films, at the Columbia; DeWolf Hopper in Mr. Goode, the Samaritan," at the American; the fourth chapter of "Gloria's Romance" and William S. Hart in "The Primal Lure." at the King's, and "Naked Hearts" and a vaudeville sketch, at the New Grand Central. Hereafter the weekly change of bill at the New Grand Central will be made on Monday, and a vaudeville feature will be presented regularly.

MOUNT ST. ROSE BAZAR JUNE 20

Change in Date Because of Construction of New Building.

The Mount St. Rose Hospital's annual bazar, which is given under the auspices of the Sisters of St. Mary, will be held June 20 instead of on Labor day, as in previous years.

The change of date is made necessary because the Sisters of St. Mary are starting the construction of the north wing of the sanitarium. The new building will be four stories and will contain 32 rooms, with open air sleeping porches. The fourth floor of the building will be devoted to the children's ward. There will be a diet kitchen and baths and restroom for the nurses.

Y. M. H. A. TO COMPLETE FUND

The Young Men's Hebrew Association tomorrow will start a campaign to complete its $100,000 building fund. At a dinner at the Columbian Club last night, $45,000 was subscribed and since that time $5000 more, making a total of $50,000. Forty teams of three men each will devote the week to a canvass of the business men of St. Louis to complete the fund. The association is the second largest in number of the 250 similar associations in the United States.

KANSAS WOMEN OFFICE-SEEKERS WORRY THE MEN

They Get Jobs and Hold Them So Well Politicians Have a Time Breaking In.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 27.—A good many Kansas men who have had their eyes on political jobs for some years are doing a good deal of worrying. Too many women are getting into Kansas politics to suit some men and the women are getting jobs and holding them so successfully that there isn't much chance for men to break in.

A good many Kansas men voted for suffrage for women with the idea that women would vote and perhaps be a benefit in city elections, but most of these men had no idea that women would seek the jobs the way they have.

More women than men in Kansas have asked for seats in the Republican and the Democratic national conventions this year. There have been more than 1000 requests from women for seats in the conventions. There isn't a chance to give so many women seats and the State politicians are worrying. They fear that to refuse a woman a seat may make an active political enemy that will cause trouble in the primary in August and the election in November.

Many Women Candidates.

There are two factions among the women, supporters of the National Suffrage Association and of the Congressional Union. There are 129 women actively campaigning for county offices. One woman in a race for Congress and two are campaigning for State Senator. It is probable that there will be a dozen women candidates for the lower branch of the Legislature.

Kansas has tried women officials for several years. Even before the women could vote, there were numerous women County Superintendents of Schools, one or two County Treasurers, Clerks of the District Court and County Clerks. Two women were appointed Probate Judges to succeed their husbands, and these women were later elected. Electing women to office has often enabled one political party or faction to beat some chap, but then it was discovered that the women couldn't be pried away from the job. In only two instances have women candidates been defeated for county offices when they were up for second or even third and fourth terms.

Why Women Are Strong.

There is ample reason for the faith of the ordinary voter in women holding office in Kansas. The ordinary voter doesn't stand around and talk politics most of the time. He is busy with his farm or business and occasionally visits some county office to transact some legal business. When he goes into the office of a man he usually finds one to a dozen political hangers-on or friends of the official sitting around talking politics. If the official recognizes the caller as an influential citizen or thinks he might be, the official hastens to attend to the caller's needs. If the caller is just an ordinary everyday citizen he may have to wait a spell until the official finishes his conversation with the politicians. If the common citizen is waited upon and an influential citizen appears, the official very often quits the ordinary man and attends to the business of the chap he thinks can produce votes.

But the citizen is treated differently in the office run by a woman. There are no political parasites, and everybody is working. The caller has his business taken care of in turn and with dispatch and he can go home feeling that he has had a square deal and that the money he paid in taxes is well spent.

Women Have Been Honest.

There has never been a woman official in Kansas who defaulted or embezzled any funds or who was short in the public accounts. There are a dozen or so officials now in the Kansas Penitentiary for defalcations. When a woman official turns over her books at the end of the year and pays what she says is due the county or city, there has never been a public accountant able to find the books one penny out of line.

There is hardly a term of the Supreme Court when there isn't some lawsuit with county or city officials over funds in some public office. There have been cases where politicians actually hired accountants to "get something" on women officials, but every attempt of this kind was to get the job for a man and every attempt failed.

FATHER, 108, NURSES SON, 60, ILL WITH MEASLES

Youngster, Who Has Been Caring for Parents, Expected to Recover Rapidly.

BALATON, Minn., May 27.—William has the measles. William is past 60, but on good authority he has 'em, or it. William has been taking mighty good care of papa ever since the head of the family passed the 100-year mark. But William isn't taking care of papa now. Papa is taking care of William. William has the measles.

William is the son of John Shequin, who soon will be 108 years old. Shequin Sr. has been ailing a little lately, but under the care of his wife and William he is able to be up and about again.

Father and Mother Sequin celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary three years ago. Shequin Sr. was born in Franklin, Vt., and was 7 years old when the War of 1812 ended. He couldn't enlist in the Civil War because he was too old. His wife was Louise Bigford of Stanbridge, Canada. She is nearly 93 years old. The Shequins moved here from Freeborn County, Minn., in 1873.

William, being only 60, is expected to recover from the measles.

Offending Aviator Dismissed.

BERNE, May 27.—The German Minister here has informed the Swiss Government that the German airman who violated Swiss territory by flying over it has been dismissed from the service.

STANDARDS FOR OLD PEOPLE'S HOMES TO BE DECIDED UPON

Action to Be Taken at Meeting of Central Council of Social Agencies Tomorrow.

Standards for the operation of old people's homes in the city will be decided upon at the meeting of the Central Council of Social Agencies tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the City Club. An investigation of all the organizations of this character in the city has recently been furnished by a committee under the leadership of W. J. Fisher.

Miss Louise Abrams, a graduate of the School of Social Economy, has been making an investigation for several months.

Other committees are investigating other lines of charities to gather data showing all lines of duplication.

Francis H. McLean of the Russell Sage Foundation has been employed by the council to come here in June to make a definite survey of all of the charities and to establish standards for each institution; also to recommend to the Business Men's League what organizations are doing efficient work, as well as to establish facts and figures in regard to duplication of charity work in this community.

The purpose of the Central Council is to prevent duplication of effort in charity work. It was organized three years ago. J. Lionberger Davis is president. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

"SUPINE COWARDICE IN OUR SUBMARINE POLICY" CHARGES ADMINISTRATION CRITIC

James M. Beck, Former U. S. Attorney-General, Analyzes Our Notes With Germany to Show We Failed in Duty to Humanity by Not Breaking With Germany.

THE following article by a former Assistant Attorney-General of the United States is probably the most comprehensive statement yet made of the hostile pro-ally sympathizers' view of President Wilson's policy in handling the German submarine issue. This group of critics believes we should have broken with Germany long ago even at the risk of going to war with that Power. Mr. Beck was the chief speaker at the Boston and New York meetings on the anniversary of the sinking of the Lusitania when President Wilson's name was greeted with catcalls and hisses because of his efforts to preserve strict neutrality in the face of the Lusitania attack. This article gives clearly and at length the views of this school of political thinkers.

By JAMES M. BECK,

Formerly Assistant Attorney General of the United States and Author of "The Dual Alliance vs. the Triple Entente" and "The Evidence in the Case."

WHEN the present world-war broke out, no principle of international law was more securely established than that war should be so conducted that injury and death should be spared to noncombatants, so far as humanly possible. The principle was as old as civilization. The idea that it was of modern origin is largely due to the fact that the horrors of the Thirty Years' War, with its sack of Madeburg and other atrocities, which are a parallel to the rape of Belgium, caused the great philosopher and jurist, Grotius, to present in his classic treatise this principle of humanity, which in times of war marks the chief line of demarcation between savagery and civilization.

Grotius abundantly proved by citations from Cicero, Sallust and Seneca that to spare noncombatants and treat even captured soldiers with humanity and moderation was a basic principle of civilization. The excesses of the Circus Maximus and the Coliseum marked the baser days of Nero and Caligula and their successors. In the application of this principle, Grotius quoted Seneca as holding that " in the calamities of war children are exempted and spared on the score of their age, and women from respect to their sex." In his noble oration in defense of Ligarius, Cicero voiced no less a Judge than the greatest of the Caesars the virtue of moderation to the vanquished and uttered the immortal truth that "man can approach no nearer to the gods than in giving safety to man."

Noncombatants Always Immune.

The principle, thus recognized even in the times of the earlier Caesars, received a powerful impetus with the advance of civilization and the growth of Christianity, and in the days of chivalry became one of general recognition. No one can assert that this ideal was always observed in the passionate strife of the Middle Ages, but it was an ideal, consistently avowed, which generally moderated the excesses of war. The medieval knight disdained to use his sword upon a noncombatant; but now, to quote Burke's sad lament, "The age of chivalry is gone * * * and the glory of Europe is departed.

Such was the undoubted law of civilization at the outbreak of this war. It is no answer to say that international law is a misnomer and means little more than the etiquette of nations, to be observed or disregarded according to the pleasure or necessities of the combatant, for it may be said of this great principle of humanity, as Alexander Hamilton so eloquently said:

> The sacred rights of man are not to be searched for in old documents and musty records. They are written as with a sunbeam in the whole volume of human nature by the hand of Divinity itself and can never be erased by mortal power.

The clearest recognition of this principle of humanity is evidenced by the fact that for five months after the war began it was never asserted by any belligerent that any right existed to slaughter indiscriminately noncombatants, whether citizens of belligerent nations or not, in order to destroy an enemy's commerce. The first intimation to the contrary was an authorized interview by Admiral Tirpitz, given to the world on the eve of Christmas, 1914—God save the mark!—in which that chief of pirates, whom history has recorded—for no buccaneer of the Spanish Main ever did a fouler deed than the destruction of the Lusitania—stated that it was his intention to torpedo every merchant vessel belonging to the allies, and, directing his challenging to America, he asked, "What will America then say?" Had our President then called upon Germany to affirm or disaffirm this threat of its chief naval commander under penalty of an immediate severance of diplomatic relations, this black and shameful chapter of history would possibly never have been written.

German War Zone Proclamation.

This was followed on Feb. 4, 1915, by a proclamation which established a war zone around the British Isles, and said:

> Every enemy merchant ship found in the said war zone will be destroyed without its being always possible to avert the dangers threatening the crews and passengers.

We accepted that challenge in the most direct and unequivocal manner, when our Government on Feb. 10, 1915, called the attention of the German Government "to the very serious possibilities of the course of action apparently contemplated," and added as our warning that if such course of action caused > the death of any American citizens, it would be difficult for the United States to view the act in any other light than as an indefensible violation of neutral rights, for which the Government would be concerned to hold the German Government to a strict accountability, and to take any steps it might be necessary to take to safeguard American lives and liberty and to secure to American citizens the full enjoyment of their acknowledged rights on the high seas.

Thus was the issue joined with brave words, and if we had then begun to make adequate preparations to vindicate these words with deeds, it is reasonably possible that the Lusitania would never have sunk.

Whether the German Government was indifferent to our hostility or misled by the assurance which our then Secretary of State is said to have given to the

ONE DOLLAR IN THIRTY DAYS

— GET IT FROM THE FACTORY —

EXTRA large and double extra comfortable. The seat is of steel spring construction, twenty inches wide and twenty inches deep. The back is fully upholstered with the attractive diamond tufts, held in place by non-pull-out buttons, and the edges are prettily ruffled. The frame is made of specially selected wood. A substantially built Rocker in every respect, and comes from the hands of the master craftsmen direct to your home. You will note that aside from the beautifully finished hardwood runners, no wood is exposed. The covering is the genuine black Valeedo, equal in appearance and superior in wear-resisting qualities to much of the leather being used for this purpose. Valeedo is used on the highest grades of Quaker Valley furniture for the sole reason that it is far better value than leather.

The hardwood runners are finished in the color of fumed oak or mahogany, as you may prefer. Fumed oak will be furnished unless otherwise ordered. Shipping weight about seventy-five pounds. Shipped either set up or in sections ready to put together. The latter is the better and safer way, as the Rocker is thus protected against rough handling in transit and is guaranteed to reach you in perfect condition. Easily put together in a few minutes. Unless otherwise instructed, the Rocker will be packed in sections, in order that it may reach you safely. Shipment will be made by freight, direct from the Michigan factory to your home.

Another example of what it means to get your Home Furnishings direct from the factory. We want you to see this magnificent Turkish Rocker; we want you to enjoy its restful comfort before paying us a cent; we want you to compare it with Rockers, either in leather or imitation, that retail in the stores for $12 to $20. Then, if you are not thoroughly convinced that you have saved one-fourth to one-third by getting the Rocker direct from the factory, you may return it at our expense any time within thirty days from the day it left the factory. If, on the other hand, you are satisfied you have secured the greatest bargain in high-grade upholstered furniture you ever saw or heard of, send us a dollar a month till the special get-acquainted price of $7.65 is paid. Not a penny down till you have had this incomparable factory leader in your home long enough to try it out to your satisfaction.

In all large cities, and in most of the smaller ones, we have special delivery service, so that our customers there have no bother in looking after shipments. As soon as the goods arrive they are delivered at once to your home, and you pay only the freight and delivery charges to the driver. Not a cent of the price is payable till thirty days after shipment, and then it is remitted at the rate of only a dollar a month.

This is a factory leader: we frankly confess it; and we are offering it for the purpose of getting acquainted with you. The offer is open to every reliable housekeeper or her husband in the United States who has not accepted one of our other get-acquainted offers. After we have shipped you this bargain, we expect to retain you as a permanent Quaker Valley customer; but we could not hope to do this if we were not in a position to save you big money on all your purchases of Home Furnishings. From nine great factories we ship direct to the home on the strongest guarantee ever written,—namely, a trial of thirty days before you pay us a cent.

So now, sign the coupon and rush it to the mail-box.

"Supine" Cowardice Says Beck of Submarine Policy

Austrian Ambassador that our notes were to be taken in a Pickwickian sense and as chiefly intended for home consumption, we do not know; but it is certain that the German Government shortly thereafter determined to test the sincerity of our brave protestations.

On March 28, 1915, it sank the British steamer, the Falaba, without any warning, and destroyed a number of lives, including that of an American citizen.

It followed this a month later by firing on our flag and sinking the American steamer, the Gulflight, and three more of our citizens became the victims to their piracy.

"Unfortunate Accident" to Nebraskan

On May 24 a German submarine torpedoed the American steamer, the Nebraskan, and the German Foreign Office then assumed its attitude of almost contemptuous indifference by sending to us the extraordinary explanation in a subsequent note that the commander of the submarine could not see because of the gathering twilight what the nationality of the vessel was, and therefore torpedoed the unknown ship on general principles, and it was sardonically added that on this account the shot must not be regarded as intended for the American flag, but simply as "an unfortunate accident."

On April 22 the German Government determined to direct on our own soil the actions of American citizens, and in defiance of the principles laid down by our Government. At that time a large number of our citizens were preparing, in full confidence that their rights would be vindicated by their Government, to sail on the Lusitania, and the German Embassy, by an advertisement dated April 22 and published May 1, warned the citizens that if they sailed on the Lusitania they would do so "at their own risk." This meant, and could only mean, that the German Government on our soil forbade our citizens to do that which our Government had told them they had a right to do.

This violation of all diplomatic proprieties and virtual defiance of our Government on its own soil was intensified when the German Foreign Office, after the Lusitania had been sunk, ironically expressed its regret that Americans felt more inclined to trust to English promises rather than to pay attention to the warnings from the German side.

"Bernstorff Should Have Been Dismissed.

When Genet made a similar but far less reprehensible attempt to appeal over the head of the President to the American people, President Washington, although our country was then in its infancy and ill-prepared to defend its rights, promptly demanded his recall. De Lome went home because of one slur on our President in a private letter, while Sackville-West was given his passports because he expressed an opinion in another private letter how an American citizen should vote. We compelled Spain to disavow the murder of the crew of the Virginius and we sought to compel Mexico on short notice to salute our flag because some of our officers had been arrested by some overzealous Mexican subordinate. If Count Johann Bernstorff had been given his passports then, it is again possible, and perhaps probable, that the Lusitania would never have been sunk. Our Government was not aware of the gross impropriety of the action of the German Embassy, because it called its attention to it as a "surprising irregularity," but with this very mild rebuke, it permitted the German Ambassador to remain, and he has since influenced the action of our Government as no other foreign diplomat ever has done. Emboldened by his immunity, his military and naval attaches, Von Papen and Boy-Ed, outraged every principle of diplomatic intercourse by making this country a base of operations for hostile attacks upon our friendly neighbors.

The impropriety of the German Embassy was emphasized when Dr. Dernberg, the semiofficial representative of the Kaiser in this country, cynically added to the formal warning of the German Embassy:

> If after such warning and publication of the fact that a ship contained contraband, as I have suggested, people want to travel in her, it is their own affair. Nobody can prevent their committing suicide if they wish.

This brutally cynical remark also went unrebuked, until, with his exultant justification of the massacre of the Lusitania, public opinion—and not a laggard Government—drove him from our shores, whose hospitality he had so shamefully abused.

The Lusitania sailed on May 1 with 2500 noncombatants on board, and on May 7, without the slightest warning or an opportunity to escape, it was cruelly and treacherously torpedoed, and over 1000 men, women and children were thrown to the waves.

Two days later the President of the United States spoke in the City of Philadelphia and the entire world listened with bated breath to what the first citizen of America would say in relation to this outrage. He had only to lead. The American people were then at least ready to follow. He knew and must have known that every syllable he then uttered would be necessarily construed as having a direct reference to his attitude and that of his country. He must have been conscious of this, and this was his message to the world:

> Is not there such a thing as a man being too proud to fight? There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right.

The German Government thereafter not unnaturally paid little attention to successive notes, which it and the world generally regarded as more voluble than valuable.

Was it not Wilkins Micawber, the original advocate of "watchful waiting," who always wrote a note while "waiting for something to turn up?"

"President Mobilized the Dictionary."

On May 13, 1915, we did protest against this inhuman outrage, but all that we said was that

> The Imperial German Government will not expect the Government of the United States to omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment.

Thereafter no "word" was omitted. The President mobilized the dictionary industriously, if not effectively, and vigorously opposed German submarines with a typewriter.

On May 28, 1915, the German Government justified the sinking of the Lusitania upon grounds all of which were untenable and some of which were false in fact.

On June 9 we again wrote a note to the German Government and demanded assurances nian and killed 11 American citizens, and 19 days later it attacked the great transatlantic passenger ship the Orduna, and only a missed shot prevented a repetition of the Lusitania massacre.

On July 21 the German Government, having persistently refused to disavow the Lusitania outrage, our Government addressed to it another note, in which we simply emphasized the rights of our citizens as neutrals and concluded by saying that > Friendship itself prompts it (our Government) to say to the Imperial Government that repetition by commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of these rights must be regarded by the Government of the United States, when they affect American citizens, as deliberately unfriendly.

It will be noted that in this demand our Government commenced to modify at least the grounds of its contention by omitting its previous wholly creditable assertion of the rights of noncombatants on general principles of humanity and by restricting it to the rights of our citizens to be in any event immune. As I shall venture to show hereafter, this modification of our attitude compromised the principle upon which our whole contention was necessarily based. This distinction between the rights of noncombatants was not an inadvertence. The note was prepared by the great rhetorician with the utmost care, and it is said that he spent many hours in considering whether he would use the words "deliberately unfriendly" or "an unfriendly act," although it would take a mediaeval scholastic to recognize the precise distinction.

Tirpitz and His Subordinate Pirates.

While these innocuous notes were being exchanged, Admiral von Tirpitz and his subordinate pirates were not idle, for on Aug. 19 they destroyed the Arabic and killed some more American citizens. This act and the subsequent inaction of our Government raised so strong a storm of protest among the American people that the sagacious Bernstorff evidently advised his home Government that, while it could trifle with some American officials, it could not thus deal with impunity with the American people, and thereupon the German Foreign Office attempted to give the impression that the sinking of the Arabic had been contrary to authority and it authorized its Ambassador at Washington to give this Government a solemn pledge that > liners will not be sunk by our submarines without warning and without safety of the lives of noncombatants, provided that the liners do not try to escape or offer resistance.

This pledge was given not in Bernstorff's language but in the formal terms conveyed through him to our Government by the German Foreign Office. The pledge was absolute and without restriction as to the war zone. And yet in its note of May 5, 1916, as we shall presently see, the German Foreign Office denied that any such assurance was ever given as to the so-called war zone.

This was not the only pledge, for Secretary Lansing states in his later note of April 18 that > again and again the Imperial Government has given its solemn assurance to the Government of the United States that at least passenger ships would not thus be dealt with.

As recently as February last it promised this except as to armed merchantmen, but these promises have proved only "scraps of paper."

German Foreign Office's "Low Comedy."

The assurances that have been given our Government that the attempted torpedoing of the Orduna and the torpedoing of the Arabic and the Ancona were in violation of instructions would belong to low comedy if it were not in results the subject of high tragedy. Remembering the incalculable consequences that might befall Germany if our Government had proceeded to vindicate the rights of its citizens and the principles of humanity, it is altogether incredible that any commander of a submarine would have acted in violation of the instructions given to him by his Government. Remembering the discipline of the German army, navy and civil government, it is morally certain that whatever assurances have been given them through diplomats or whatever ships have been sunk by submarine commanders have been by direct authority of the respective heads of these departments and with the express authority of the supreme War Lord. When, therefore, assurances were given to this country that no more liners should be sunk without warning, and when submarine commanders subsequently proceeded to sink such ships without warning, the conclusion is irresistible that the same responsible ruler and War Lord who gave the pledge through his Chancellor, violated it through his submarine commanders.

The false pledge, thus given to our country to lull us into a false sense of security, was accompanied by another policy of sinister significance. In our country, public indignation was steadily increasing at this ineffective exchange of notes; and the German Ambassador insidiously suggested to our Secretary of State that the policy of publishing notes should cease, and that further communication should be conducted by confidential "conversations," which left little scope for the influence of public opinion either in Germany or in the United States. Thus was the policy of "pitiless publicity" vindicated in a grave matter! Undoubtedly diplomatic communications may often both advantageously and properly be conducted in camera, but this controversy had hitherto been conducted in the forum of public opinion, and its sudden transfer to "secret diplomacy" by the great apostle of "pitiless publicity" was but another surprising change of policy.

While these confidential "conversations" were proceeding the horror of the Lusitania was repeated on Nov. 7, 1915, when a submarine carrying the Austrian flag sank the Ancona, and nine more of our citizens were sacrificed. Once again we received the familiar excuse that the commander had acted in excess of his instructions, and it was agreed that he should be punished. If he has ever been punished, the fact and nature of his punishment have yet to be made public. His punishment may have been to be decorated, as was the commander of the submarine which sank the Lusitania.

Dispute Over Assuming and Recognizing.

On Sept. 30 another passenger steamer, the Persia, was sunk, and another American life, that of an official of the United States, was sacrificed. As the Persia presumably did not commit suicide by torpedoing itself, and as the scene of disaster was beyond the region of mines, it is not a very rash assumption that either a German or an Austrian submarine sank it.

After these confidential conversations had proceeded for about six months more, announcement was loudly and triumphantly made last February that the submarine controversy had been finally settled. It would have been consummated but for the fact that the issue of armed merchantmen suddenly arose, and the proposed settlement was again postponed. Had that settlement been consummated it would have included on the part of our country a compromise of the principle of humanity involved.

As that proposed settlement may yet be revived in the tortuous course of future negotiations, it is of importance that its nature should be clearly recognized, so that public opinion may, if possible, prevent it. The proposed settlement, which was for a few fleeting days proclaimed from Washington as a great diplomatic triumph for the United States, commenced with a promise to pay cash for the lives of the American citizens who were slaughtered on the Lusitania. The German Government then agreed to conform its future warfare to the recognized principles of international law, and then, as a disavowal of the Lusitania outrage, the German Government was to make sub-

RED PIMPLES ON NECK AND FACE

Spread Rapidly on Shoulders and Body. Itching and Burning Intense. Completely

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My trouble began in small red pimples which soon grew larger, festered and came to a head, then dried and formed a crust somewhat of a yellowish color. My neck and face were entirely covered with eruptions which spread rapidly on my shoulders and body. They were in the form of blotches and the itching and burning were so intense that I was obliged to scratch and irritate the affected parts.

"A friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They instantly cooled and relieved the trouble and one week's use completely healed me." (Signed) Miss Cecilia Wells, Valeene, Ind., July 21, 1915.

stantially the following acknowledgment to the world:

Germany, while considering reprisals against an enemy legal, but knowing that the United States regards reprisals as illegal, admits that the attack on the Lusitania was an act of retaliation, that was not justifiable so far as it involved the loss of neutral lives and also assumes liability for such loss of life.

Such was the nature of the settlement, as semi-officially given to the press of the country both by our State Department and the German embassy.

At the time that this proposed settlement was interrupted by the new issue of arming merchantmen, our State Department and the German Ambassador were discussing whether Germany would "assume" liability or would "recogize" liability. This was the merest verbal hair splitting in view of the express admission by the German Government that the attack on the Lusitania was unjustifiable "so far as [illegible] involved the loss of neutral lives."

Even Enemy Trade Ships Are Sacred.

Had this qualified disavowal been accepted by our Government, it would have compromised the justice of our cause and profoundly modified the existing law of humanity. If the attack on the Lusitania were not justifiable, "so far as it involved the loss of neutral lives," then the implication is not unreasonable that it was justifiable so far as it destroyed the lives of noncombatants of belligerent nations. It is true that it does not expressly say so, but the "disavowal," which we had insistently demanded for nearly a year, was a full recognition of a wrong and to the extent that a wrong was not admitted, it was by implication justified by this attempted "accord and satisfaction." This distinction was indefensible either on grounds of humanity or of international law. If Germany had a right without visit or search to attack the Lusitania because it was an English vessel and was believed to be carrying contraband and had a right to destroy English noncombatants, then that right could not be impaired by the accidental presence on the Lusitania of American citizens. No American would contend that the army of the Crown Prince was prevented from bombarding Verdun if some American citizens were accidentally in the beleaguered city.

The massacre of the passengers and crew of the Lusitania was unjustifiable not because American citizens were sacrificed, but because all on board were noncombatants. Its sinking without previous visit or search and without making any provision for the lives of the passengers and crew would have been in gross violation of the previously accepted law of nations even though no neutral happened to be there. Germany had always asserted and even insisted upon this contention. Indeed it had formerly carried further this principle of immunity by asserting that the crew of a belligerent merchant vessel could not even be made prisoners of war. Such was the contention of Prince Bismarck in the Franco-German war of 1870, when a French warship seized a German merchant vessel and thus treated its crew.

Our own Government had in the earlier stages of the diplomatic controversy clearly recognized this fact, and had very properly and justly rested its contention upon the rights of noncombatants, but in its later notes and until the final note of April 18 it so far modified its claim as to rest it upon the immunity of neutrals from the effects of reprisals. Most fortunately, after the destruction of the Sussex had again aroused our Government from its policy of inaction our claim was again securely rested not merely upon the rights of neutrals, but "upon manifest principles of humanity." It fittingly and forcefully denounced submarine warfare as "utterly incompatible with the principles of humanity, the rights of neutrals and the sacred immunities of noncombatants." It is most gratifying that our Government thus returned to the broader and nobler ground of its contention.

Retrograde to Principles of Savagery.

Unless we are to retrograde to the principles of savagery, which prevailed in the dark ages and before the Roman Empire, then the fundamental and all-comprehensive restriction on the rights of war must be based on the broad and humane consideration that as noncombatants make no pretense to fight, either by way of offense or defense, their lives shall be spared so far as is humanely possible. No other position can be reconciled with the claims of conscience.

To all humane men it cannot matter whether the women and children, who were so ruthlessly thrown to the waves, were Americans, Germans, Austrians, French, English or Russian. They were women and children, and that ought to have been the true ground of their immunity. If this principle were ever important to humanity, it is infinitely important today, when the methods of destruction have been horribly and infinitely multiplied by the agencies of chemistry.

Undoubtedly a siege of a city incidentally involves both injury and death to many noncombatants. The blockade of a country has of necessity a like effect. Prince Bismarck in 1881 and Count Caprivi in 1892 both contended that a blockade to cut off foodstuffs was not only legitimate war but a comparatively humane way of ending a war. The coercion of a nation by a food blockade is often an incident of warfare, but it does not follow that an aeroplane, a Zeppelin, a submarine, or a platoon of soldiers can deliberately and intentionally destroy noncombatants to terrorize and coerce a belligerent nation.

The indiscriminate dropping of a bomb on a city like London, Freiburg, or Stuttgart, which are not within the true war zone, is wrong, whether done by English, German or French aviators, as a deadly affront to civilization. I share with Lord Bryce the profound regretthat the allies have occasionally resorted to reprisals of this character.

"An Insult to Our Intelligence."

Fortunately this proposed compromise of the underlying moral principle as to the sacred immunity of noncombatants, without distinction of nationality, was forgotten in the issue as to armed merchantmen; and, while that was pending, the German Government committed what up to the present time is its crowning outrage, by sinking, on March 24, 1916, the Sussex, a Channel ferryboat, and destroying many women and children.

When challenged to justify this act and other acts of a similar character, and to reconcile these murderous deeds with the solemn pledges given to this Government, the German Government, on April 10, 1916, replied with a cynically insolent note. It said, in effect, that although a German submarine did on the same day, at about the same hour, and in the same locality, and in the same manner, sink an English boat, yet that a sketch drawn by the captain of the submarine through his periscope did not correspond with the picture of the Sussex in a London illustrated paper, and that it, therefore, must have been another vessel. This transparent falsehood has since been disavowed and the responsibility of Germany formally admitted.

This note would be comic if it were not so tragic. It was an obvious insult to our intelligence and measures the contempestuous indifference which the German Government then had as to the attitude of our Government. As to the three other ships, destroyed about the same time, the German Government replied by admitting the fact and justifying the deed without even deigning to give a reason.

We have, therefore, a course of conduct, now running over a year, in which not only the acknowledged rules of international law and the principles of humanity but the solemn pledges to this country have been ruthlessly and cynically broken. And yet, after all that experience of deception, cunning and violated promises, all that our

If Too Fat Get More Fresh Air

BE MODERATE IN YOUR DIET AND REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT. TAKE OIL OF KOREIN.

Lack of fresh air, it is said, weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, the liver becomes sluggish, fat accumulates and the action of many of the vital organs are hindered thereby. The heart action becomes weak, work is an effort and the beauty of the figure is destroyed.

Fat put on by indoor life is unhealthy, and if nature is not assisted in throwing it off, a serious case of obesity may result.

When you feel that you are getting too stout, take the matter in hand at once. Don't wait until your figure has become a joke and your health ruined through carrying around a burden of unsightly and unhealthy fat.

Spend as much time as you possibly can in the open air, breathe deeply, and get from Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. or any druggist a box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself every few days and keep up the treatment until you are down to normal. Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, helps the digestion, and even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight.—ADV.

3 Grain Cadomene Tablets

Men Supplied With Lots of "Ginger"

Tells How To Do It.

"Ginger" has become a synonym for a warm, fervent, energetic, enthusiastic, cheerful frame of mind. When one is in such spirit, obstacles have no terrors, and success, with fame and fortune, presents opportunities which the gloomy, despondent, unhappy man fails to see or grasp.

To have "lots of ginger," your system must supply your nerves with all the elements of nutrition to make them strong and vital, so that the mind or spirit also can be sustained by nervous force.

No one can be happy with a toothache, yet a toothache is just a suffering nerve. Doesn't that prove that the nerves control the pleasures and happiness of your existence? Starved nerves result in many illnesses, much gloom and little pleasure for the possessor.

When there are starved nerves, there is no "ginger," no "pep," no fire, no warmth, no vitality or magnetism. If you lack in "ginger," if you lack in "pep," there's a reason, and the reason is your nerves are being deprived of nutritive elements. What will correct this deplorable condition, you ask.

Cadomene Tablets is the answer, because they are designed for that particular purpose—a powerful, vitalizing tonic of purest kind known to medical experts—containing no narcotics or drug that can weaken—but only such as will strengthen and vitalize the natural, normal nervous forces. It may surprise you to know that in the past few years hundreds of thousands of tubes of Cadomene Tablets have been sold and every tube contains a printed guarantee of satisfaction or money back—and yet, to this date not one single patron has ever requested a return of purchase price on one tube or a dozen. Thousands have been benefited by this wonderful tonic for the nervous system, and you too can derive permanent benefit, if you are not brimming over with "ginger," warmth and personal magnetism. Every well stocked pharmacy can supply Cadomene Tablets in original sealed tubes at $1.00 per tube or six tubes for $5.00.

Weak, Nervous Women

FIND THAT CADOMENE TABLETS ARE NOT ALONE FOR MEN.

Surprising Strength, Vivacity and Endurance Comes to the User.

Primarily one might suppose that Cadomene Tablets were alone for the use of men, but this is not altogether true.

When a woman becomes weak, nervous, hysterical, always tired or irritable, she too is a victim of "starved nerves," and three-grain Cadomene Tablets, taken at such periods is an invaluable aid to the nervous system, creating by their tonic properties better digestion, better nutrition and consequently strength, vivacity, endurance and cheerfulness results, much to the happiness of the entire household—for an "irritable woman" causes dissension and much unhappiness for the whole household. Irritability is usually bad nerves. Cadomene Tablets helps to mend the nerves and make them "good." Get them from your druggist in original sealed tubes.

The Treatment for "Starved Nerves"

Is Equally Good for Man or Woman Who May Be Thus Afflicted.

Three-Grain Cadomene Tablets is a combination of ingredients—a physician's discovery in compounding—not a common so-called "patent medicine," because the formula of ingredients is printed on the label and you know before taking that there is no dangerous stimulants or narcotics to further lessen your vitality.

A powerful vitalizing tonic effect is what you receive in benefits when you take Cadomene Tablets. They work to aid the forces of nature, surely and with ever-increasing efficiency.

The starved nerves are supplied with nutritive elements which results in bodily health and strength and a corresponding improvement in the mental and moral stamina. You may doubt the benefits you will receive, before you take Cadomene Tablets, but you will feel and recognize these great benefits, even from the use of one package, or they will cost you nothing. Even this "doubt" is a symptom unless it is based on reason. Search your mind for a "reason to doubt" and you will fail to find such a reason. Cadomene Tablets are designed to help you and they will do so. They will enable your system to supply plenty of pep, and energy to fulfill your every ambition and hope. Take them and feel the "ginger" of normal strength coursing through your blood, and realize the power of strong, well-nourished nerves.

A Worthy Physician Says:

"After an examination of the formula of your Cadomene Tablets, I feel that nowhere could I obtain a tonic superior to this. Consequently I prescribe them whenever indicated, and with a degree of satisfaction to my patients that amazes me. The uniformity of the benefits to all cases of "nerves" has indeed given me cause to speak a generous word for this unequalled product."

Spring Time Is Tonic Time

Why Do We Need a Vitalizing Tonic in the Spring?

The Right Tonic at the Right Time Puts You in Fine Fettle.

Increase Your Pep With Cadomene Tablets.

Why a tonic in the Spring? Nature never intended that man should pass his time in over-heated dwellings and office buildings, nor take his exercise in poorly ventilated street cars and swift moving automobiles. But mankind does just such things all through the winter season, the consequences being that the flesh, the nerves and the spirit are in a poisoned lethargy, giving rise to a sluggish feeling, with rheumatic or neuralgic pains, faintness, loss of energy and appetite, and a feeling of being tired all the time. This is the reason for a tonic in many cases. Others need a tonic because they have dissipated and depleted the nervous system, by over indulgence in eating, drinking and other pastimes.

In either case, serious illness may be prevented, by taking a harmless, vitalizing tonic such as three-grain Cadomene Tablets. Mankind never before had opportunity to recuperate through the amazing benefits of such a miracle working tonic, as Cadomene Tablets. Try them and see how much brighter and stronger you will quickly become. Instead of being sluggish and full of pain, you will have "ginger and pep" in abundane. Your work will not be a horror, and your play will be pleasure. Vim and magnetism will permeate your every movement. A Plain Case of Starved Nerves

Thousands Thus Afflicted. Are You One?

Have you ever obserrved the "man with the starved nerves"? You probably have, but failed to recognize the symptoms. When you see such a man, you will note first timidity or hesitation in his step, in his words, in his attitude. His eye shifts when you talk to him, he becomes fidgety and nervous under the glance of a strong man, or a beautiful woman.

When he arises from a chair and walks, he is not firm and solid in his tread. You see evidence of "starved nerves" in his sunken eyes, with dark circles, giving his cheek bones unusual prominence and often lines of suffering slant obliquely across his cheek. The head is not carried erect, the shoulders are stooped more or less, the eye is dull and expressionless.

Is such a man attractive in his personality? No! He is not. And he knows he is not, but not knowing the cause—which is "starved nerves"—nerves depleted of their spirit strengthening vitality. Not knowing the cause, not knowing how to find relief, he becomes often a victim of despondency and gloom, resulting in melancholy and insanity.

"Starved nerves" are due sometimes to dissipation, to over-indulgence in tobacco and liquor, to overwwork, to worry and to mal-nutrition. Whatever the cause, the symptoms do not vary greatly. Timidity, fear without cause, sleep that brings no rest, or insomnia, trembling of the limbs, heart palpitation, numbness in the extremities, cold hands and feet, severe headaches, especiall y in the back of the head, backache, both when standing or in bed, nervousness, irritability and a general "worn-out" feeling soon after rising in the morning. A fickle appetite, restlessness, and a certain inability to fulfill the desires and hopes of a strong, robust being.

Cadomene Tablets afford certain and amazing benefits in all cases of starved nerves.

Government did by its note of April 18, 1916, was to demand an immediate cessation of these practices (a demand already made in almost the same terms on June 9, 1915), accompanied, however, by the threat that if the demand were not complied with diplomatic relations between the two countries would be severed, which practically amounts to our returning the visiting card of the German Government and asking back our own.

I am not aware that the German Government bases its justification of these outrages upon the principle of reprisal; and that the law of reprisals may, to the extent that they are justified, modify the ordinary rules of war should be freely conceded; but reprisals must be equivalent in degree, if not in kind, and cannot override fundamental principles of humanity.

"Germany's Delay Shows Her Contempt."

If England is violating international law by shutting off the food supplies of the German population, then Germany would be equally justified in cutting off by lawful methods the food supplies of England. If in such a blockade England, without preliminary visit and seizure, sunk German merchant vessels and massacred noncombatants then Germany would, as to the noncombatants of the offending country, have the right of a reprisal. But it does not follow that a blockade of a country, with the incidental result of economic suffering to the civilian population, justifies, by way of reprisal, the deliberate massacre of noncombatants on a merchant vessel. Did the German Government recognize, when Paris was besieged in 1870 and its people were dying from starvation, that such injury to thousands of noncombatants would justify the French Army in murdering every German noncombatant who happened to be in the besieged city?—and yet logically this is Germany's contention today. To admit that the suffering which the civilian population of any country incidentally suffers through a blockade justifies a resort to savagery would be the complete negation of international law.

Our note of April 18 demanded an immediate reply. Germany showed its indifference to this request by waiting more than a fortnight, although the Teutonic powers gave Servia only 48 hours to consider far more sweeping demands. This delay might be excused if the reply were in its form conciliatory. On the contrary, the note in places gives an unqualified acceptance of our just demands.

An Amazing Diplomatic Incident.

Replying to the assertion of our note that the submarine methods had resulted in the "indiscriminate destruction of vessels of all sorts, nationalities, and destinations," the German Foreign Office, having passed through the various stages of a quarrel referred to by Touchstone, finally reached the "lie direct" by the amazing statement that it emphatically repudiated the assertion, adding a charge that our Government had made a grave charge without any specification of facts. It then proceeds to repudiate altogether the express pledge, which was given by Count Bernstorff to our Government on Sept. 1, that no liners should be sunk without preliminary compliance with the rules of international law as to visit and seizure, by stating that it never agreed to limit its method of warfare "in the war zone surrounding Great Britin." It adds:

> With regard to these, no assurances have ever been given to the Government of the United States.

Few more amazing incidents have happened in diplomatic history. At a time when our Government was pressing for a disavowal of the sinking of the Lusitania and asking for explanations as to the Arabic, both destroyed in the so-called war zone, Count Bernstorff stated that he was authorized by his Government to give the very assurance which his Foreign Office now repudiates. As all the vessels, of whose destruction we were then complaining, had been sunk in the war zone, and as our demands for a disavowal and cessation of these murderous practices had their principal reference to the war zone, the pledge of Sept. 1, phrased by the German Foreign Office without respect to locality that liners should not be destroyed, could have only one meaning. If the war zone was to be exempted from the operation of the pledge the German Foreign Office should have said so. That office never qualified that pledge, although its Ambassador at Washington did state some months later, on Jan. 7, 1916, that in the Mediterranean German submarines > had from the beginning orders to conduct "cruiser warfare" against enemy merchant vessels only in accordance with the general principles of international law and in particular measures of reprisal, as applied in the war zone around the British Isles, were to be excluded.

"Never Intended to Respect Law."

Little attention was paid to these words at the time, but it is most clear that as to the so-called war zone, Germany never intended to respect the principles of international law regarding warfare against merchant vessels, and that the pledge of Sept. 1, which wholly failed to give this warning, was a palpable attempt to deceive this country and all neutral nations by false promises.

More than eight months afterward the German Foreign Office publicly disavows a pledge, publicly made in its name by its own Ambassador. Either that Ambassador made a false assurance to our State Department or the present German note contains a deliberate falsehood.

The note of May 5, then, contains a gratuitously insulting sneer by suggesting its regret "that the sentiments of humanity, which the Government of the United States extends with such fervor to the unhappy victims of submarine warfare, are not extended with the same warmth of feeling" to the civilian population of Germany.

It is true that the last note of the German Government states that it has decided to make further concessions in the methods of submarine warfare, and renews its promises, subject to immediate cancellation without warning, to conform the activities of submarine warfare to international law both within and beyond the war zone; but what assurance can our Government have that these pledges will be better respected than their predecessors? How soon will the new condition arise, when, dissatisfied with our dealings with Great Britain, Germany again murders our citizens on the high seas? For the present the pledge, caused by political considerations and the hope that our nation may "pull the chestnuts out of the fire" for Germany, may be sincere. But is this conditional and possibly temporary concession the "disavowal" of the Lusitania which we have demanded for a year past?

"Lasting Grave of Hohenzollern Dynasty."

"Remember the Maine" was once a rallying cry of potent force; and yet how shallow it was when we realize that it is altogether improbable that Spain had anything to do with its destruction, and yet the contrary belief awakened in the soul of a proud people the passionate resolve to end forever the misrule of Cuba.

"Remember the Lusitania!" Yes; it, too, will be remembered by our people—not with a proud consciousness of a work well done, but with the humiliating regret of a great work for humanity as yet left partly undone through the supine inaction, if not moral cowardice, of those officials to whom the dignity and honor of the republic are for the time being committed.

It is true that Germany has for the time being agreed to discontinue its piratical methods, but with what delay and at what a sacrifice of life and treasure this result has been most tardily secured! The result, temporary or permanent, cannot alter the fact that this submarine controversy presents easily the most unnecessary and discreditable chapter in the diplomatic history of the United States.

In a larger aspect and judged by divine and not merely human justice, the crime of the Lusitania will never be redressed until it is known of all men that the watery grave of its victims was the lasting grave of the Hohenzollern dynasty.

SON-IN-LAW OF J. P. MORGAN IS IN CHICAGO FOR T. R.

H. L. Saterlee to Open Headquarters Next Week to Swing Republican Votes.

CHICAGO, May 27. — Campaign headquarters for Theodore Roosevelt as a candidate for the Republican nomination for President will be opened here next week. Herbert L. Satterlee, son-in-law of the late J. P. Morgan and former assistant Secretary of the Navy under President Roosevelt and Lawrence Graham of New York, arrived today and made the necessary arrangements for launching boom.

They declined to make a statement further than to say that an active campaign would be made among delegates to the Republican convention in behalf of their candidates.

Friends of Col. Roosevelt expressed the belief today that he might decide at the last moment to come to Chicago for the convention.

The anti-Penrose faction of Pennsylvania Republicans known as the United Republicans today arranged to open headquarters here June 1 to boom presidential candidacy of Gov. M. G. Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania.

Chairman Chas. D. Hilles of the Republican National Committee was busy today counting and checking the 12,400 tickets to the convention which were received from the engravers last night.

A Chicago band of 100 pieces was engaged today to furnish the music for the convention.

JURY ACQUITS RIGGS NATIONAL BANK OFFICIALS IN 9 MINUTES

Finds That Men Accused by Government Did not Commit Perjury in Affidavit.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The three officers of the Riggs National Bank on trial here for perjury, C. C. Glover, William J. Flather and Henry H. Flather, president, vice president and former cashier, respectively, were acquitted here today by a Supreme Court jury, which deliberated nine minutes.

The Government contended that when the celebrated case of the bank against Secretary McAdoo and Comptroller Williams, the three officials signed an affidavit that the bank never engaged in stock market transactions, they had perjured themselves.

The defense was that the bankers signed the affidavit on advice of their counsel and that its intent was to swear that the bank never had engaged in stock dealings for itself, but not to deny that the bank's officers had executed transactions for depositors and customers in their personal capacities.

The bank's suit against McAdoo and Williams was a civil action, charging them with conspiring to wreck the institution and sought to restrain the Comptroller from imposing excessive fines for noncompliance with his orders.

ARMY BILL COMMENDED BY WAR SECRETARY AND GENERAL STAFF

Analysis Shows Measure Will Produce 226,000 Officers and Men and 440,000 National Guard.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Chairman Chamberlain of the Senate Military Committee introduced in the Senate today a letter from Secretary Baker, approving the Hay-Chamberlain army reorganization measure, now awaiting the Presidents' signature, as "the best army bill ever passed by Congress."

An analysis prepared by Maj. W. D. Conner, General Staff, accompanied the letter, showing they would produce a peace strength regular army of 226,000 officers and men besides 440,000 federalized national guard.

"I fully indorse the statement that the bill is the most comprehensive measure looking to military preparedness that has ever been passed by Congress," Secretary Baker wrote.

"There are just enough men of each arm to make a god fighting machine," the General Staff statement said, "and there are no extra organizations left over. This is the first time in our history that the army has been organized on such a basis, although all the other arm'es of the world always have been."

WOODROW WILSON

Reliable Laxative Remedy That Relieved This Baby

Child was Badly Constipated Until Mother Tried Simple Remedy.

In spite of every care and attention to diet, children are very apt to become constipated, a condition responsible for many ills in after life unless promptly relieved.

Mrs. C. W. Wilson, of Shelbyville, Tenn., had trouble with her baby boy, Woodrow, until she heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. She writes, "I can safely say Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best remedy of its kind on earth. It acts so gently and yet so surely. Little Woodrow was very badly constipated and we could find nothing that gave relief until we tried your Syrup Pepsin, which gave immediate relief."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of simple laxative herbs, free from opiates or narcotic drugs, mild in action, positive in effect and pleasant to the taste. It has been prescribed by Dr. Caldwell for more than a quarter of a century and can now be had for fifty cents a bottle in any well-stocked drug store. A trial bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be obtained free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

I consider that plenty of iron in my blood is the secret of my great strength, power and endurance.

Jess Willard

Jess Willard Says: "Take Nuxated Iron

If You Want Plenty of 'Stay There' Strength and Endurance and Health and Muscles Like Mine."

A Hitherto Untold Secret of His Great Victory Over Jack Johnson and Frank Moran.

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Often Increase Strength and Endurance of the Delicate, Nervous Folks 200 Per Cent in Two Weeks' Time.

SPECIAL NOTE.—Dr. E. Sauer, a well-known physician, who has studied widely in both this country and Europe, has been specially employed to make a thorough investigation into the real secret of the great strength, power and endurance of Jess Willard, and the marvelous value of nuxated iron as a strength-builder.

NEW YORK—Upon being interviewed at his apartment in the Colonial Hotel, Mr. Willard said: "Yes, I have a chemist with me to study the value of different foods and products as to their power to produce great strength and endurance, both of which are so necessary in the prize ring. On his recommendation I have often taken nuxated iron and I have particularly advocated the free use of iron by all those who wish to obtain great physical and mental power. Without it I am sure that I should never have been able to whip Jack Johnson so completely and easily as I did, and while training for my bout with Frank Moran I regularly took nuxated iron, and I am certain that it was a most important factor in my winning so easily." Continuing, Dr. Sauer said: "Mr. Willard's case is only one of hundreds which I could cite from my own personal experience, which proves conclusively the astonishing power of nuxated iron to restore strength and vitality even in most complicated chronic conditions.

"Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old, and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength-builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

"Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."—E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE.—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. and all good druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

WAITE CONVICTED, IS NOT SURPRISED BY JURY'S VERDICT

Wife Says: "God's Will Be Done," of Dentist Who Killed Father.

KEEPS COOL TO THE END

Prisoner Will Be Sentenced Thursday—His Counsel Says Finding Was Proper One.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Dr. Arthur W. Waite, dentist, convicted today of murder in the first degree for poisoning his father-in-law, John E. Peck, a millionaire drug manufacturer of Grand Rapids, Mich., is tonight in the Tombs prison where he will remain until Justice Shearn sentences him Thursday to death in the electric chair. The trial lasted six days.

Walter R. Duel, the young dentist's chief counsel, said tonight the verdict of guilty was a proper one. He declared all that could be done for the defendant had been done in the trial which ended today. One of Deul's assistants said, nevertheless, that preparations were being made to take an appeal at once.

Duel was in consultation with his client for a few minutes after Waite was remanded to the Tombs.

District Attorney Swann said tonight that if an appeal were taken his office would be ready in 10 days to argue the case in the higher courts.

Prisoner Declines to Talk.

Waite declined to make any statement from his cell, but said he might issue "some impression" later. That he was inclined to accept the verdict as final and was resigned to his fate seemed to be indicated by his remark, "this is a great relief," as he was led from the court room.

The dentist, who admitted not only the murder of Peck, but also to that of Mrs. Hanna Peck, his mother-in-law, and who admitted that he attempted to kill his wife's aunt, Miss Katherine Peck, apparently had no doubt that the jury would convict him. As the jury retired, he turned to his brother, Frank, and said:

"The jury should not be out five minutes. It was a long drawn out proceeding."

Half an hour later he remarked, "I don't understand this."

"You should not talk that way," said Frank. "They may be finding you not guilty."

"Oh, yes, they will find me guilty," insisted the young dentist.

"God's will be done," Mrs. Clara Peck Waite, wife of the prisoner exclaimed as he was being led back to his cell.

"Poor Arthur. My poor boy," Warren Waite, the aged father, sobbed as he was led half fainting out of the court room, supported by his other sons, Clyde F. and Frank Waite.

Sorry for His Father

"I feel sorry for my father," Waite remarked to assistant warden Julius Bremen, as he drank coffee in his cell, "but then he's a good Christian, so he oughtn't to take it so very hard," he continued.

The trial was almost a record for brevity for an important murder trial here in recent years. As compared with Waite's trial, the first trial of Charles Becker, for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, lasted 16 days, while Harry K. Thaw's first trial occupied 42 days.

Leaving the courtroom at 1:20 p. m., the jury was out only one hour and 25 minutes. After returning the verdict, the foreman declared the jurors had made a compact not to reveal the nature of their deliberations.

The young dentist preserved his nonchalant demeanor, not only while facing the jury to learn his fate, but after he was led back to the Tombs prison. Throughout the trial he seemed unmoved by any human feeling as he recited the details of his deliberate attempts to kill Peck with the bacilli of various diseases, of his final resort to poison, of his murder of Mrs. Peck by administering disease germs and his attempt to kill his wife's aunt by placing ground glass and germs in her food.

When he had given his pedigree to the Clerk of the Court and had been taken to the Tombs, he was allowed to exercise. He marched up and down a corridor whistling "La Paloma."

Waite declared on the witness stand that the main motive for his crimes was to obtain money. The opinion of his alienists that he was a "moral imbecile" was swept aside by the assertions of the State's alienists that he was sane and knew the nature and consequences of his crimes and by the charge of Justice Shearn that "moral imbecility" had no place in the law.

Dr. Waite entered the courtroom this morning with the same apparently resigned, nonchalent manner that has characterized his demeanor since the beginning of his trial. The prosecution promptly began its rebuttal of the testimony of the defense bearing upon Waite's alleged imbecility and idiocy, by placing on the witness stand a neurologist, Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe of New York.

Like Average Man.

Dr. Jelliffe testified that he had determined from an examination of Waite that the prisoner showed no signs of defective intelligence.

"He appeared as the average man of his early life and environment," said Dr. Jelliffe. "My belief is that he was

PAINT QUESTION IN COLISEUM IS GOLTRA'S CHIEF WORRY

He Had One Man "Spray" the Interior, but Now Wants it Washed Away.

Edward F. Goltra was telling his troubles as Democratc national committeeman in charge of Coliseum arrangements yesterday afternoon when Frank M. Robinson, manager of the Coliseum, entered, carrying a bundle of "proposals." Goltra recently accepted the "proposal" of a painting contractor to paint the interior of the Coliseum by a new spraying process. Robinson related to Goltra that not only had the walls been sprayed, but that all the floors, chairs and windows had also been generously sprayed with paint, and that they presented a frightfully mottled appearance.

The "proposals" which he had were for cleaning the paint from the chairs, floor and windows, the lowest bid being $170 for cleaning the floors and chairs and $60 for the windows. Goltra took the "proposal" under advisement, and in the meantime will try to induce the painting contractor to do the cleaning himself.

Schlatter was held in $2500 bail for hearing June 7 and was released in custody of his counsel.

August Algard, Schlatter's secretary, also was arrested on a Los Angeles indictment charging him with inserting a misleading advertisement in a Los Angeles paper.

LOS ANGELES, May 27.—"Prince" August Schrader, associate of "King" Francis Schlatter of New York, both alleged "divine healers," was arrested today on a Federal indictment charging use of the mails to defraud.

WOUNDED TROOPER IN 2 SHOTS KILLS 2 BANDIT LEADERS

Cervantes and Beaucome Slain by Accurate Markmanship of a Private.

FIGHT NEAR LAS CRUCES

Death of Leader, Next to Villa, Expected to Aid in Ridding Mexico of Outlaws.

FIELD HEADQUARTERS NEAR NAMIQUIPA, CHIHUAHUA, via wireless to COLUMBUS, N. M., May 27.—The bravery of George A. Hulett, a private in the Seventeenth Infantry, who, although himself wounded, shot and instantly killed Candelerio Cervantes and Juan Beaucome, in Thursday's engagement near Las Cruces, was commended by Gen. John J. Pershing in dispatches today. The expeditionary commander described the feat as ranking in importance almost as would the death of Villa himself, removing as it did two bandits who have constantly annoyed the American columns.

In this message, which was addressed to the commanding officer at Las Cruces, Gen. Pershing paid tribute to the enlisted men, who, in the absence of commanding officers, fought the engagement.

According to additional details of the engagement reaching here today, Hulett, with two other enlisted men, were in advance of a small party of American soldiers going to a ranch to purchase beef when Cervantes and Beaucome, riding ahead of the Mexican band of 20 men, charged over the crest of a hill. As they charged they fired several shots, one of which wounded Hulett. However, Hulett deliberately fired two shots, each of which brought one of the bandits from his horse, dead.

Members of the American detachment reported that among the Mexicans was an American half-breed, who yelled in English, "Come on, boys!" as the band approached the Americans, apparently in an attempt to mislead them. The soldiers recognized the ruse immediately, however, and paid no attention to the call.

The news of Cervantes' death was received with considerable excitement by the populace of Namiquipa, where his father still lives. Crowds gathered in the market place, where the body lay on an improvised bier.

"The townspeople in Namiquipa generally professed to be greatly relieved at the death of the bandit and have formed a civil guard with which they have promised to assist the American expeditionary command in ridding the vicinity of bandits. Military authorities pointed out that the passing of both Cervantes and Beucome leaves the scattered bands of Villistas in this section practically leaderless.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Thedore Marburg of Baltimore, former Minister to Belgium, won prolonged applause before the League to Enforce Peace this afternoon by suggesting that former President Taft be sent abroad to interest European countries in the league's movement.

The league re-elected Mr. Taft president and created a vice presidency, naming Alton B. Parker for the office.

The campaign started at luncheon yesterday to raise $300,000 to further the league's program had brought in more than $373,000 at noon today. Some contributions came from the neutral nations of Europe.

LAWYERS FAIL TO AGREE ON JURY TO TRY ORPET

Liberty of Prisoner Has Been Greatly Curtailed by Order of States Attorney.

CHICAGO, May 27.—A curb placed on Will Orpet's activities outside his cell by State's Attorney Dady at Waukegan brought a vigorous protest today from the lawyers defending Orpet, who is on trial charged with the murder of Marian Lambert. They have not talked intimately with him since May 20. On that day Dady asserted the prisoner was being given too much liberty. He felt that the fact that prospective jurors saw Orpet going to and coming from his attorney's office and into a store to purchase cigarettes was not helping the prosecution's case.

Attorneys tried vainly for five hours today to agree on the twelfth man for the jury. Prospects were favorable that he would be chosen Monday.

NORTH CAROLINA CONTEST

Entire Delegation Involved, but It May Not Receive a Hearing.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Notice of a contest involving the entire delegation from North Carolina to the Republican National convention, consisting of four delegates at large and 17 district delegates was received today by Secretary James B. Reynolds of the Republican National Committee. Secretary Reynolds said the contest would not be considered by the national committee when it meets June 1, because notice of the dispute was not received 20 days before the date of the convention, as required by the official convention call.

If the North Carolina contestants want their case heard they will be required to appeal to the Committee on Credentials of the committee.

Ticket Apportionment.

Chairman Charles D. Hilles today decided on the allotment of convention tickets. The seats have been divided into classes A, B, C and D, the A tickets being the best and the D tickets the least desirable. In alloting the seats to the different states each committeeman's portion will consist of 33 per cent class A tickets, 30 per cent class B tickets, 15 per cent class C tickets and 22 per cent class D tickets. The pasteboards will be divided among the states on the basis of three seats for each delegate allowed the state in the official call. The tickets will be distributed as follows: One for each of the 991 delegates and one guest ticket to each, 1982. Alternates, 991. Chicago's share as convention city, 2560.

Members of the Subcommittee on Arrangements of the Republican National Committee, 2200; presidential candidates, 200; press, 700; League of Republican Clubs, 25; National Congressional Committee, 32; officers of convention, 50; temporary chairman of convention and treasurer, secretary and sergeant at arms of Republican National Committee, 160; members of Republican National Committee, 3125. Total, 12,025.

There are 12,025 seats in the convention hall and more than 40,000 applications for tickets have been received. All the living former chairmen of the Republican National Committee are expected to occupy front row seats on the platform at the convention. They are: Gen. James C. Clarkson of Iowa, George B. Cortelyou of New York, Harry S. New of Indiana, Frank H. Hitchcock of New York and Victor Rosewater of Nebraska.

Robert T. Lincoln and wife have been invited to attend as special guests.

Invitations also have been extended to two other veteran Republicans. They are William Pitt Kellogg, former Governor of Louisiana and former Senator from that State, who is the only surviving member of the Electorate College which elected Abraham Lincoln and Addison G. Proctor of St. Joseph, Mich., who is said to be the only living delegate to the convention which nominated Lincoln. This year Proctor is an alternate delegate at large from Michigan.

Gavel From Alaska.

The gavel which will be used by the presiding officers of the convention is made of white, black and yellow ivory from Alaska. It is the gift of W. A. Gilmore, a delegate to the convention from Hunzau, Alaska, and was presented to Chairman Hilles today. In a statement issued by Chairman Hilles, attention is directed to the fact that 27 of the 53 members of the present Republican National Committee have been re-elected, either by direct primary, convention or at a caucus of the delegates to next month's national convention. Sixteen states have not yet chosen their national committeemen. Among them are Delaware, Illinois, Maine, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

MISSOURI NAVAL MILITIAMEN GO ON OCEAN CRUISE JULY 15

All Expenses Paid and They Will Receive Wages While on the Rhode Island.

Fifteen officers and more than 100 men of the Missouri Naval Reserve depart from St. Louis July 13 for a cruise on the battleship Rhode Island, which will start from Philadelphia July 15, and will return to Philadelphia 10 days later. The reserves will return here about July 28.

Their railroad fare and all subsistence expenses will be paid by the Government, and they will receive pay at the regular volunteer rate, the same as members of the national guard. This pay, for seamen, is at the rate of $24 a month. The time at sea will be spent in drills, gunnery, instructions and navigation.

Thirty new recruits can be taken on the voyage, if they will enlist at once, Commander G. F. Schwartz announced last night. Recruits between 18 and 21 years of age must have the consent of parents or guardians; those 21 or more are acceptable if able-bodied and law-abiding.

Text of President's Speech Advocating World Alliance for Permanent Peace, Freedom of Seas, Inviolability of Treaties

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Following is the full text of President Wilson's speech delivered here tonight before the League to Enforce Peace, of which former President Taft is the president:

When the invitation to be here tonight came to me, I was glad to accept it—not because it offered me an opportunity to discuss the programme of the league—that you will, I am sure, not expect of me—but because the desire of the whole world now turns eagerly, more and more eagerly, towards the hope of peace, and there is just reason why we should take our part in counsel upon this great theme. It is right that I, as spokesman of our Government, should attempt to give expression to what I believe to be the thought and purpose of the people of the United States in this vital matter.

This great war that broke so suddenly upon the world two years ago, and which has swept within its flame so great a part of the civilized world, has affected us very profoundly and we are not only at liberty, it is perhaps our duty to speak very frankly of it and of the great interests of civilization which it affects.

With its causes and its objects we are not concerned. The obscure fountains from which its stupendous flood had burst forth, we are not interested to search for, or explore. But so great a flood, spread far and wide to every quarter of the globe, has of necessity engulfed many a fair province of right that lies very near to us. Our own rights as a nation, the liberties, the privileges and the property of our people have been profoundly affected. We are not mere disconnected lookers-on.

Longer the War More U. S. Is Interested.

The longer the war lasts, the more deeply do we become concerned that it should be brought to an end and the world be permitted to resume its normal life and course again. And when it does come to an end, we shall be as much concerned as the nations at war to see peace assume an aspect of permanence, give promise of days from which the anxiety of uncertainty shall be lifted, bring some assurance that peace and war shall always hereafter be reckoned part of the common interest of mankind.

We are participants, whether we would or not, in the life of the world. The interests of all nations are our own also. We are partners with the rest. What affects mankind is inevitably our affair as well as the affair of the nations of Europe and of Asia.

One observation on the cause of the present war we are at liberty to make and to make it may throw some light forward upon the future as well as backward upon the past It is plain that this war could have come only as it did, suddenly and out of secret counsels, without warning to the world, without discussion, without any of the deliberate movements of counsel with which it would seem natural to approach so stupendous a contest. It is probable that if it had been foreseen just what would happen, just what alliances would be formed, just what forces arrayed against one another, those who brought the great contest on, would have been glad to substitute conference for force.

If we ourselves had been afforded some opportunity to apprise the belligerents of the attitude which it would be our duty to take, of the policies and practices against which we would feel bound to use all our moral and economic strength, and in certain circumstances even our physical strength also, our own contribution to the counsel which might have averted the struggle, would have been considered worth weighing and regarding.

Must Have a New Diplomacy.

And the lesson which the shock of being taken by surprise in a matter so deeply vital to all the nations of the world has made poignantly clear, is, that the peace of the world must henceforth depend upon a new and more wholesome diplomacy. Only when the great nations of the world have reached some sort of agreement as to what they hold to be fundamental to their common interest, and as to some feasible method of acting in concert when any nation or group of nations seek to disturb these fundamental things, can we feel that civilization is at last in a way of justifying its existence and claiming to be finally established. It is clear that nations must in the future be governed by the same high code of honor that we demand of individuals.

We must indeed, in the very same breath with which we avow this conviction admit that we have ourselves upon occasions in the past been offenders against the law of diplomacy which we thus forecast. But our conviction is not the less clear, but rather the more clear, on that account.

If this war has accomplished nothing else, for the benefit of the world, it has at least disclosed a great moral necessity and set forward the thinking of the statesmen of the world by a whole age.

Repeated utterances of the leading statesmen of most of the great nations now engaged in war have made it plain that their thought has come to this, that the principle of public right must henceforth take precedence over the individual interests of particular nations and that the nations of the world must in some way band themselves together to see that that right prevails as against any sort of selfish aggression; that henceforth alliance must not be set up against alliance, understanding against understanding, but that there must be a common agreement for a common object and that at the heart of that common object must lie the inviolable rights of peoples and of mankind.

Nations Are Each Others' Neighbors.

The nations of the world have become each others neighbors. It is to their interest that they should understand each other. In order that they may understand each other, it is imperative that they should agree to co-operate in a common cause and that they should so act that the guiding principle of that common cause shall be even-handed and impartial justice.

This is undoubtedly the thought of America. This is what we ourselves will say when there comes proper occasion to say it. In the dealings of nations with one another arbitrary force must be rejected and we must move forward to the thought of the modern world, the thought of which peace is the very atmosphere. That thought constitutes a chief part of the passionate conviction of America. We believe these fundamental things:

1. That every people has a right to choose the sovereignty under which they shall live. Like other nations, we have ourselves no doubt once and again offended against that principle when for a little while controlled by selfish passion, as our franker historians have been honorable enough to admit; but it has become more and more our rule of life and action;

2. That the small states of the world have a right to enjoy the same respect for their sovereignty and for their territorial integrity that great and powerful nations expect and insist upon. And,

3. That the world has a right to be free from every disturbance of its peace that has its origin in aggression and disregard of the rights of peoples and nations.

U. S. Ready to Form Partnership.

So sincerely do we believe in these things that I am sure that I speak the mind and wish of the people of America when I say that the United States is willing to become a partner in any feasible association of nations formed in order to realize these objects and make them secure against violation.

There is nothing the United States wants for itself that any other nation has. We are willing on the contrary to limit ourselves along with them to a prescribed course of duty and respect for the rights of others which will check any selfish passion of our own, as it will check any aggressive impulse of theirs.

If it should ever be our privilege to suggest or initiate a movement for peace among the nations now at war, I am sure that the people of the United States would wish their Government to move along these lines:

1. Such a settlement with regard to their own immediate interests as the belligerents may agree upon. We have nothing material of any kind to ask for ourselves and are quite aware that we are in no sense or degree parties to the present quarrel. Our interest is only in peace and its future guarantees.

2. An universal association of the nations to maintain the inviolate security of the highway of the seas for the common and unhindered use of all the nations of the world and to prevent any war begun either contrary to treaty covenants or without warning and full submission of the causes to the opinion of the world—a virtual guarantee of territorial integrity and political independence.

But I did not come here, let me repeat to discuss a programme. I came only to avow a creed and give expression to the confidence I feel that the world is even now upon the eve of a great consummation, when some common force will be brought into existence which will safeguard as the first and most fundamental interests of all peoples, and all Governments; when coercion shall be summoned not to the services of political ambition or selfish hostility, but to the service of a common order, a common justice and a common peace. God grant that the dawn of the day of frank dealing and of settled peace, concord and co-operation may be near at hand.

CHANCELLOR DAY, ONCE FOE OF ROOSEVELT, NOW IS FOR HIM

Syracuse Man Says He Prefers the Colonel Because Supreme Court Can't Spare Justice Hughes.

NEW YORK, May 27.—In 1908 charges were preferred against Chancellor James R. Day of Syracuse University before the New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church because he had said in an address:

"Anarchy of the sort practiced by President Roosevelt is the most dangerous kind. It means anarchy if the Judges are to be set aside and their verdicts upheld to criticism by the President." Dr. Day was exonerated.

Today the National Roosevelt Republican Committee made public at the Biltmore a letter from Chancellor Day in which he said:

"It is not necessary to say that I have been disappointed in Mr. Wilson. Not since Buchanan have we had a man so utterly unsatisfactory.

"I have been an admirer of Mr. Fairbanks, but his nomination being impossible leaves my choice between Roosevelt and Hughes. I greatly prefer Roosevelt; this is no time to take Mr. Hughes off the Supreme Court bench with Brandeis going upon it."

MISS SILLIMAN RELEASED

BERLIN (10:15 p. m., via London), May 27.—An announcement was made today of the release of Miss Mary Silliman, a teacher in the American School for Girls at Constantinople, who was arrested on suspicion of espionage at Warnemunde, Germany, a month ago while on her way to the United States.

Miss Silliman has been allowed to resume her journey home and is returning to America by way of Holland.

MINE PROMOTERS ARRESTED IN BALTIMORE AND NEW YORK

Government Officials Accuse Men Interested in Property in Arizona They Said Was Worth $2,000,000.

BALTIMORE, May 27.—Charles Blackburn and Charles E. Wyatt were held today by U. S. Commissioner Bond in $10,000 and $5000 respectively security for their appearance in court on a charge of misusing the mails in promoting the Howie Mining Co. of Arizona.

Blackburn is the son-in-law of S. H. Bracey, president of the company, who was arrested in New York yesterday.

According to District Attorney Dennis, the Howie Mining Co. was represented by its owners as being valued at $2,000,000, and that its purchase price was $300,000. Government officials say it was bought for $30,000 and is mortgaged several times.

Stock in the mine was sold in various cities and a list of stockholders in Baltimore, according to the authorities, indicates that $100,000 or more was invested in the company here.

Bracey and his mining company have been involved in litigation here since April. One stockholder is suing for $23,000 he invested and receivership proceedings are also pending.

The company was incorporated in Arizona with an authorized capital of $2,000,000, of which $300,000 is preferred stock. The other shares are common, at $1 per share.

Four Killed in Mine Explosion.

J. J. HILL OPERATED UPON, REPORTED RESTING QUIETLY

Mayo Brothers Act at Once on Their Arrival in St. Paul on a Special Train.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 27.—James J. Hill, veteran railroad builder, was operated upon here this afternoon by Drs. W. J. and C. H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., who were brought here on a special train.

The surgeons went into immediate consultation with Dr. J. S. Gilfillan, Hill's physician, upon their arrival here and decided upon an operation at once. At 4:30 p. m. Dr. Gilfillan issued the following statement:

"The patient is suffering from an infection of the buttock and thigh. The condition is serious at his age, and the patient is being watched carefully. The infection was opened and drained this afternoon. Mr. Hill got through the operation nicely and is resting quietly."

NEW YORK, May 27.—James N. Hill, son of James J. Hill, left tonight for the West. Information as to his destination was refused at his home. Mr. Hill is a director in the Texas Co. and several other corporations.

POPE HONORS IMPRISONED MAYOR

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands, May 27.—The Mayor of Malines, Belgium, M. Ch. Dessain, who was recently condemned to a year's imprisonment for printing the Lenten letter of Cardinal Mercier, has been nominated by the Pope a commander in the Order of St. Gregory.

This appointment is regarded as a fresh proof of the Holy Father's sympathy for the Catholics of Belgium, and especially for Cardinal Mercier, who asked for the conferment of this distinction during his recent stay in Rome.

WILSON'S SPEECH TAKEN AS 'FEELER' TOWARDS PEACE

President Tells League to Enforce Peace U. S. Is Ready to Become Partner in Association of Nations to Prevent War in Future.

Hopes European Peace Terms Will Include Provision for the Absolute Freedom of the Seas.

Declares Small States of World Have Same Right to Territorial Integrity as Powerful Nations.

"It's About Time" Says Von Bernstorff to Taft as to Peace Activity

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 27.

FORMER President Taft and Count von Bernstorff met at the President's garden party tonight.

Taft jocularly referred to his activities in behalf of peace, at which the Count remarked:

"Well, it's about time."

WASHINGTON, May 27.—President Wilson declared here tonight before the League to Enforce Peace, that the United States was ready to join in any feasible association of nations to preserve peace of the world against "political ambition and selfish hostility" and in service of "a common order, a common justice and a common peace." He expressed the hope that the terms of peace which end the present war would include such an agreement.

Outlining suggestions for peace, which the President said he hoped the United States would make if it has opportunity to do so, he included provision for absolute freedom of the seas, a contention which has been the keystone of all the diplomatic discussions with Germany and Great Britain and virtual guarantees of territorial integrity and political independence.

Officials interpreted the President's address as a preliminary feeler for peace in Europe. He outlined the conditions on which the United States would move if it made a formal mediatory offer with the idea, it was understood, of learning how such suggestions would be received abroad.

Interest Only in Peace.

"I am sure," said the President, "that the people of the United States would wish their Government to move along these lines:

"First, such a settlement with regard to their own immediate interests as the belligerents may agree upon. We have nothing material of any kind to ask for ourselves and are quite aware that we are in no sense or degree parties to the present quarrel. Our interest is only in peace and its future guarantees.

"Second, a universal association of nations to maintain the inviolate security of the highway of the seas for the common and unhindered use of all the nations of the world, and to prevent any war begun either contrary to treaty covenants or without warning and full submission of the causes to the opinion of the world—a virtual guarantee of territorial integrity and political independence."

The fundamentals of a lasting peace, President Wilson said he believed were.

"First, that every people has a right to choose the sovereignty under which they shall live. Like other nations, we have ourselves no doubt once and again offended against that principle when for a little while controlled by selfish passion, as our franker historians have been honorable enough to admit. But it has become more and more our rule of life and action.

"Second, that the small states of the world have a right to enjoy the same respect for their sovereignty and for their territorial integrity that great and powerful nations expect and insist upon.

"And third, that the world has a right to be free from every disturbance of its peace that has its origin in aggression and disregard of the rights of people and nations."

Lesson of the War.

The outstanding lesson of the world war, the President said, had been that the peace of the world must henceforth depend upon a "new and more wholesome diplomacy."

"If this war has accomplished nothing else for the benefit of the world," said he, "it has at least disclosed a great moral necessity and set forward the thinking statesmen of the world by a whole age. Repeated utterances of the leading statesmen of most of the great nations now engaged in war have come to this, that the great nations engaged in war have made it plain that the principle public right must henceforth take precedence over the individual interests of particular nations and that the nations of the world must in some way band themselves together to see that right prevails against any sort of selfish aggression; that henceforth alliance must not be set up against alliance, but that there must be a common agreement for a common object and that at the heart of that common object must lie the inviolable rights of peoples and mankind.

"So sincerely do we believe in these things," said the President in conclusion, "that I am sure that I speak the mind and wish of the people of America when I say that the United States is willing to become a partner in any feasible association of nations formed in order to realize these objects and make them secure against violation."

The President told his hearers he had not come to discuss a program but only to avow a creed and give expression to the confidence that the world was approaching a day when some commonn force would be created for "the service of a common order, a common justice and a common peace."

Introduced by Taft.

President Wilson was introduced by former President William H. Taft, who is head of the League to Enforce Peace.

Vice President Marshall, several Cabinet members and many members of Congress, diplomats and publicists were present. Other speakers were President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, R. G. Rhett of Charleston, S. C., president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Prof. Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia Universiay, Shailer Matthews, president of the Federal Council of Churches, and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

The purposes of the league, Senator Lodge declared, led the way to the only possible method of ending wars. Washington's warning to the country to steer clear of entangling alliances, he added, should not be interpreted to mean that the United States could not join with other nations if a method were found to diminish war and encourage peace. The world, he said, has shrunk to a size Washington did not forsee. Only through force, said the Senator, could any international alliance hope to prevent wars.

"The United States," said Senator Lodge, "always has led in matters of arbitration and peace that will end this war can come not through expeditions or mass meetings, but must be approached through arbitration."

Gardner Introduces Resolution Against "Inconclusive Peace."

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Rep. Gardner of Massachusetts introduced in the House today a resolution to discourage any "inconclusive and premature peace in Europe which would encourage the world to believe that nations may with impunity violate every law of God or man." The resolution in part reads:

"Whereas, in the opinion of the vast majority of the people of the United States the deplorable European war was wantonly and madly precipitated by the autocracies which govern Germany and Austria, and,

"Whereas, France, the British Empire, Russia, Japan, Belgium, Servia, Italy and Portugal have entered into an alliance for the preservation of civilization and the punishment of international faithlessness,

"Resolved, that the Congress of the United States heartily congratulates France and her allies in the success which is so certain in the near future to crown their superb efforts; and,

"Resolved, further, that the Congress of the United States expresses its heartfelt admiration of the 200,000 Irishmen who are now heriocally serving the cause of their country and of civilization in the trenches in France and Belgium; and,

"Resolved, further, That the Congress of the United States would view with apprehension any inconclusive and premature peace which would encourage the world to believe that nations may with impunity violate every law of God or man; and,

"Resolved, further, That the Congress of the United States utterly condemns all efforts, no matter how plausible the disguise which are designed for the purpose of embroiling the United States with France, Great Britain or any one of their allies."

In explaining his reason for introducing the resolution today, Congressman Gardner said:

"I have introduced this resolution because I believe it is about time to call attention to the reasons for the great growth of the peace at any price party in Germany. Nothing could be more harmful for the future security of the world than for the United States to become an accomplice of Germany's struggle to escape the penalty of her crime against humanity."

German Chancellor Will Not Reply to Edward Grey's Latest Declaration.

BERLIN, May 26, via London, May 27.—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, has decided to make no reply to the latest declaration of Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary of Foreign Affairs. The Chancellor, it is stated in Government circles, in particular will refrain from following the British Foreign Secretary in the tone adopted by him and by Premier Asquith in their recent public declaration. It is contended that the Chancellor finds such phrases as "shameless audacity" and "liar of the first rank" little adapted to advancing the ostensible object of ministerial declarations.

In support of Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg's assertion regarding Great Britain's attitude in the Bosnian crisis, however, Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung prints the texts of two reports sent by Count von Pourtales, the German Ambassador at Petrograd, to Chancellor von Buelow, dated April 1 and April 5, 1909, on the extreme dissatisfaction openly manifested by Sir Arthur Nicolson, the British Ambassador at the settlement brought about by the German proposals. The British Ambassador at that time, according to the report of Count von Pourtales, even took M. Iswolsky, the Russian Foreign Minister, to task for accepting the German proposals without consulting France or Great Britain and Sir Edward Grey is said to have expressed dissatisfaction with the Russian concessions and to have characterized the actions of Iswolsky as Considerable Infantry and Artillery Activity Reported at Macedonian Border—Austrians Continue Tyrol Advance.

PARIS, May 27.—Violent artillery engagements occurred along the entire Macedonia front yesterday, according to the Havas correspondent at Saloniki telegraphing on May 26. He reports Kilindar completely destroyed by the German bombardment.

Bulgarian troops yesterday installed themselves for the first time on Greek territory. Continuing its advance the Bulgarian regiment occupied forts Kanivo and Gragotin, constructed by the Greeks immediately after the last war.

FRENCH CAPTURE POSITIONS NEAR DEADMAN'S HILL

Several Trench Sections Taken—German Attack on Champagne Repulsed.

PARIS, May 27.—Several trench sections near Dead Man's Hill were captured by the French yesterday, according to tonight's official report. The Germans gained a footing in the French positions near the Navarin farm in the Champagne, but were later driven out.

The official communication says:

"In Champagne, both artillery forces were very active in the sectors of Ville-Sur-Tourbe, Tahure and Navarin. About 6 o'clock in the evening the Germans directed an attack against our positions to the west of the road from Navarin and gained a footing in several small posts of our advanced lines, from which our counter attacks drove them out completely.

"On the left bank of the Meuse there was fighting with artillery and trench guns in the Avocourt Wood and in the sector of Hill 304. To the southwest of Le Mort Homme we captured several sections of trenches and made about 50 prisoners.

"The number of prisoners captured in the course of our attack on Cumieres has reached about 100; two machine guns remained in our hands.

"On the right bank the bombardment has been maintained with intensity in the region of Haudromont-Douaumont. In the underground passageways to the northwest of the Thiaumont Farm we made appreciable progress in the course of the day."

French Enter Cumieres, but Are Driven Out, Berlin Says.

BERLIN, via London, May 27.—French troops forced their way into the southern part of the village of Cumieres, west of the Muese, on the Verdun front, during stubborn fighting last night, but were subsequently driven out, the War Office announced today. The statement follows:

"Western front: North of La Basse Canal one of our patrols penetrated an enemy position near Festhubert.

"In the Argonne there have been lively mining operations, during which enemy trenches were destroyed over a great width. The French suffered numerous losses.

"On the left bank of the Meuse (Verdun front) the French succeeded temporarily in penetrating the southern part of the village of Cumieres during stubborn midnight attacks. In clearing them out we took 63 prisoners.

"On the right bank of the Meuse we succeeded in advancing as far as the heights in the region southwest of Thiaumont wood. A French attack against our advance was stopped at the very outset by our artillery.

"Two enemy attacks against our newly captured positions south of Fort Douaumont completely failed. In engagements southwest of this fort since May 22 we have taken prisoner 48 officers and 1943 men."

Austrians Report Further Progress in the Tyrol.

VIENNA, via London, May 27.—Further victories over the Italians north of Arsiero were announced by the War Office tonight. Italian troops were driven from their positions west of Bacarola, after which the Austrians in a seven-hour battle, cleared the forests of Monte Cimons and occupied the peak, according to the statement, which also announces that Batalo, in the upper Posina Valley, has been captured.

Twenty-five hundred Italians, four guns and four machine guns and a quantity of war material were captured by the Austrians, who stormed an extensive mountain ridge on the Trentino front, according to an official statement issued by the War Department here earlier in the day.

Steamer of Unidentified Nationality Is Sunk.

LONDON, May 27.—Lloyds announces that the steamer Hercules, nationality unknown, has been sunk.

More than a score of steamers named Hercules are listed in the shipping registers, several of them being British and others the property of various neutrals.

Italians Say Austrian Attack Has Been Checked.

ROME, May 27.—The Austrian offensive is being continued with especial violence southeast of Rovereto, against Coni Zumpena but although it has now entered its second week, the Italian resistance has checked the Austrians' onrush which otherwise would have enabled them to invade the Arsa Valley, leading to the Venetian provinces.

British Report Destruction of German Stores at Guillemont.

LONDON, May 27.—The British official report says:

"During the night we bombarded the enemy trenches southeast of Neuve Chappelle and our artillery fire caused the destruction of enemy stores at Guillemont. The enemy directed a heavy bombardment lasting 80 minutes, against our trenches west of Fricourt and also shelled our trenches about Serre.

"We sprang five mines, three about Hulluch and two southeast of Cuinchy. The enemy sprang one mine about the Hohenzollern redoubt, another west of La Folie wood, the crater of which our troops occupy.

"We bombarded enemy trenches west of Lens and southeast of Leventie. Hostile parties working east of Maricourt we dispersed by artillery fire."

Waite Convicted, Is Not Surprised by Jury's Verdict

an average man, somewhat superficial, inclined to be snobbish and of no great intellectual attainment

"In my opinion he was sane. I believe he knew the nature of the crime he committed and was fully aware of all phases of it. He had sufficient mentality to appreciate his acts. He was sane when he killed Peck."

"Do you consider Waite a normal man?" asked Walter R. Deuel, the prisoner's counsel.

"That question cannot be answered," replied Dr. Jelliffe. "He is a criminal with a mind. He differs from the average man in terms of psychology, because of his whole life being spent in living and feeling. His demeanor was not like the normal, average man, but he has a trait that a criminal type would show."

Dr. William Mabon also testified for the prosecution, saying he found no disturbance of Dr. Waite's nervous system. On some occasions when he examined Waite he found the prisoner made an effort to give false answers.

"What is your conclusion about insanity?" asked District Attorney Brothers.

Knew What He Was Doing.

"That he was sane," said the witness. "Waite is as normal as a man of this type can be. He had control of himself and he knew what he was doing."

Asked if he noticed that Waite smiled when on the witness stand, Dr. Mabon said the prisoner smiled while he was being examined by the alienist.

"I consider that he chose that attitude for a purpose," added the alienist. "I think he had trained himself for years to be pleasant to everybody and was able to tell a story of the crime on the stand with the same manner that he would have told of the simple life."

Dr. Waite paid close attention to the testimony of the alienists for the prosecution and smiled broadly and shrugged his shoulders when Dr. Mabon testified that he believed Waite was acting.

Dr. Menas S. Gregory of Bellevue Hospital said he had examined Waite at the hospital and concluded he was sane.

It was then announced that both sides rested.

Deuel began to sum for the defense. He said he did not think the jurors would believe Waite was sane. "Can a man who lived as he lived and did as he did have any moral sense whatsoever?" asked the attorney.

"Is there anything in his life's story to show he ever had a moral sense and lost it? No.

"We can not allow Waite to go at large with the awful consequence of his crime before us, but we can remove him from society by placing him in an institution. If you should grant that he be placed in an asylum, I promise you that neither I nor any member of his family will ever try to get him out."

Assistant District Attorney Brothers, in summing up for the prosecution, said Waite confessed his crimes only after having been confronted by indisputable evidence.

Insanity Only Defense.

"What other defense did he have except the plea of insanity?" asked Brothers, and declared that Waite had sufficient sense to realize that something was wrong when Percy Peck began to act strangely at Grand Rapids, and his effort to bribe an undertaker's assistant by paying him $25,000 showed he realized his guilt.

"Unless society is protected against the acts of men like this, human life is insecure," declared the prosecutor.

Justice Shearn in his charge warned the jurors not to let resentment interfere with their judgment in reaching a verdict.

"The horrible crime to which he confessed must not sway you," said the Justice, adding that the prisoner admitted premeditated killing with deliberation and calmness, and that he did it with a motive. If the jury found the prisoner had committed murder with premeditation, even though it believed he should be incarcerated for some extraneous reason, its duty would be to bring a verdict for murder in the first degree, said the Justice.

Justice Shearn quoted the law that idiots or insane persons are not guilty and not responsible for their crimes, but he asserted that the law presumes a defendant to be sane and the burden of proof on that point falls on the defense.

Waite's Mother Collapses at News of the Verdict.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 27.—The verdict of guilty in the case of Dr. Arthur Warren Waite for the murder of his father-in-law was expected in the Waite home here. Waite's mother collapsed at the news and is under a physician's care.

PEACE IS ON WAY, GERARD IS QUOTED IN MUNICH PAPER

Ambassador Declared to Have Said Way Is Prepared for U. S. Mediation.

"AMERICA IS WILLING"

Washington Believes Envoy in Berlin Has Correctly Interpreted Situation.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Administration officials today read with interest the interview attributed to Ambassador Gerard and published in a Munich newspaper, in which the American envoy is quoted as declaring he is convinced "peace is on the way." State Department officials would not comment on the Ambassador's statements. Officials generally expressed the hope that if the interview is genuine the Ambassador has correctly interpreted conditions.

Administration officials declined to discuss the report that Col. E. M. House is to go to Europe in the near future in the interest of peace.

According to Berlin dispatches Gerard was quoted as saying:

Way Is Prepared.

"Nothing can shake my confidence that peace is on its way."

The Ambassador referred to the settlement of the difficulty of the United States and Germany as preparing the way for President Wilson to take up the question of peace. President Wilson, he said, has much greater freedom of action now to deal with the immense problem which will determine the future attitude of nearly all the countries of the globe.

"It is useless to discuss at this moment the question as to whether President Wilson's intermediation is desirable or probable," the Ambassador is quoted as saying. "In this instance facts alone must speak and one of the most important facts is that the neutrals are probably as much interested in bringing about an early peace as the belligerents. America urgently needs peace and for this reason alone the American Government is under an obligation to its citizens to do and support everything that serves the cause of peace. A fact of chief importance is that my Government is really willing to take action for the promotion of peace.

Optimistic Over Outlook.

"I am very optimistic regarding the progress already made of the idea that the war should be ended, even among belligerent nations. The wise and moderate words of the German Chancellor regarding Germany's readiness to make peace had probably their strongest echo in America and strengthen the impression that Germany will take all further steps calmly and with confidence.

"When another step will be taken and what shape the further development of the peace idea will take, is not clear."

FOUR KILLED IN FIRE IN PENN COLLEGE, IOWA

Four-Ton Bell Crashes Through the Building While Men Are Carrying Out Valuable Books.

OSKALOOSA, Io., May 27.—Fire which early today destroyed the administration building of Penn College here took a toll of four lives instead of two, as had been supposed, it was stated tonight. City authorities late this afternoon ordered a search of the ruins for bodies of the two additional victims, trapped by falling walls, while trying to carry valuable books from the college library.

The bodies of Robert H. Williams, 35 years old, financial agent of the college and State secretary of the Prohibition party, and Harry Oakley, 22, a freshman, were recovered.

According to the Chief of Police, the two additional dead were George Raber, a railroad fireman, and an unidentified man. They were in a party of a half dozen who were carrying books from the library when the four-ton bell in the cupola fell through the building, splitting and collapsing its front walls.

George Minear and Howard Kelley, students who were injured by the falling wall, probably will recover.

College officials tonight declared that the loss will total approximately $100,000.

BOND OF SYMPATHY UNITES "LITTLE MOTHERS" IN HOSPITAL

Ida Baldwin, 16 years old, of 1208 Madison street, who tried to kill herself by drinking iodine because she was weary of her work as a "little mother" for five younger members of her family, found a sympathizing companion at the city hospital yesterday in Beulah Castelle, 17, of 127 South Compton avenue, who tried to end her life by asphyxiation a week ago for a like reason.

Ida was taken to the hospital Thursday, after swallowing the iodine, and is now out of danger. She described to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday her work of washing, ironing and cooking for a family of nine, which included her father and two older brothers, as well as the five younger children. She expressed discouragement at the idea that she would have to "go back to it all."

Beulah also said she did not mean to return, if she could help it, to her home. She is the oldest of seven children, four of whom are her half-sisters. Since her stepfather left home a year and a half ago, she said, she has worked in a laundry, earning $7 a week. Her mother, she said, has taken in washing, but she has done most of the washing. She said she could have stood the work, but that her mother's words to her were discouraging.

3 RAILROADS TO HAVE 3000 MEN IN PARADE HERE

Frisco, Missouri Pacific and Cotton Belt Pledge Support to Preparedness Move.

GOV. MAJOR IS COMING

He Will Review Marchers With Mayor—Organization Plan Announced.

The latest pledge of support for the preparedness parade received by the committee in charge last evening was from Alexander Hilton, passenger traffic manager of the Frisco Railroad, who announced that the road would have 1200 men in line next Saturday afternoon. During the day the Missouri Pacific pledged 1000 men, the United Railways 1200 men and the Cotton Belt 800 men. Heads of departments of all three steam railroads will march at the head of the respective divisions.

The committee of the St. Louis Branch of the National Security League, in charge of the parade, announced that it is in need of additional funds to carry out the plans of the parade.

Purpose of Parade.

In view of the doubts that have been expressed by leaders of some organizations regarding the purposes of the parade, the committee issued a statement as follows:

"The purpose of the parade is to show Congress and the administration, by the marching of thousands of patriotic citizens, that an overwhelming public opinion in St. Louis demands adequate military protection against all eventualities and protests against a policy that intrusts the future of America to the accident of chance.

"It is not a demand for a huge standing army, but for a system that will train all citizens to defend the nation and not condemn brave men to slaughter at the hands of a fully equipped and trained enemy.

"It is the expression of a belief that preparedness is the best assurance of continued peace. It is a demand for a navy large enough to guarantee protection of American interests and American citizens at all times, wherever they may be."

Gov. Major sent word yesterday that he will march with Mayor Kiel at the head of the parade until the line reaches the St. Louis Club, when they will take places in the reviewing stand.

Where Parade Will Form.

Final arrangements for the parade provide that the first division, made up of men from the regular army and the militia, will leave Tenth and Locust streets at 1:30 p. m. The other divisions will form both north and south upon cross streets as far west as Eighteenth street, joining the procession in turn until the entire column will be in line. Spectators must get places along Locust street or Lindell boulevard west of Eighteenth street to witness the parade.

The committee on arrangements has requested all organizations having more than 1000 men in their division to have two mounted aids for the marshal in charge. Each organization is expected to provide small flags for each marcher and banners for the heads of each division.

Among the organizations yesterday announcing their intention to join the parade were the architects' and dentists' societies. The committee will announce early this week a complete list of the organizations entered.

Col. J. A. Ockerson, member of the Mississippi River Commission and former president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, will be marshal for the division to be composed of engineers. In a circular calling upon the engineers to turn out in force the statement is made that 9000 engineers turned out in the recent New York parade and that the Government is recognizing the engineer as the most important aid to military organization. The Engineers Club has pledged a representation in the parade, but the number of marchers has not been determined.

The Board of Directors of the Societe Francaise de St. Louis last night agreed to request the members to turn out in a body in the parade.

Business men and householders along the line of march from Tenth and Locust streets to the Lindell cutoff at Channing avenue, and along Lindell to Vandeventer avenue, have notified the committee of their willingness to decorate their buildings.

East St. Louis Will Have Half Holiday for Preparedness Parade.

Mayor Molman of East St. Louis yesterday issued a proclamation designating a half holiday next Saturday and urging all employers of labor to allow their employes to participate in the East Side preparedness parade.

The proclamation urges that women and civic organizations take part, and invites the officials of all Southern Illinois towns to participate "to show the country how strong is the sentiment of Illinois in favor of preparedness."

A meeting of citizens will be held in the Council Chamber Tuesday night to make final arrangements for the parade.

80,000 March in a Preparedness Parade in Boston.

BOSTON, May 27.—Advocates of preparedness, 80,000 strong, marched through the streets today while tens of thousands looked on, cheered and waved the national colors. It was the greatest turn out of paraders in the history of the city. All activities of the city, commercial and professional were represented. Many cities of New England were represented. Gov. McCall, and Major-General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., commander of the Department of the East and Mayor Curley reviewed the parade.

HENSLEY, DEAN OF 'SMALL NAVY' MEN, FAVORS INCREASE BILL

Missouri Congressman's Attitude Is Held to Insure Passage of $241,000,000 Measure by House.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—In a speech in the House of Representatives today, Representative Walter L. Hensley of the Thirteenth Missouri District, announced his support of the naval increase bill, paid his respects to the "munitions patriots," and urged his colleagues to support the provision of the bill which authorizes the President to call a conference of nations after the European war to discuss disarmament and permanent peace.

Hensley said he opposed the five-year program recommended by Secretary Daniels with the approval of President Wilson, on the ground that "the lesson of this war cannot be learned until the war is over, and may completely change the relative fighting value of the craft we now have or make them practically obsolete. He also said he believed that the adoption of any fixed program would have a tendency to "destroy the hope in the breasts of millions of people for a saner and a more humane way of settling disputes between nations."

The fact that Hensley is generally recognized as the dean of so-called "small navy" men in the House, and is now found supporting a bill carrying $241,000,000, including $100,000,000 for five giant battle cruisers of a type heretofore unknown, is believed to insure the passage of the naval bill.

IGOE ARRANGES TESTS FOR TWO VACANCIES IN NAVAL ACADEMY

Applicants Who So Desire May Undergo Physical Examination Before Preparing for Mental One.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Representative Igoe of St. Louis has arranged for the Civil Service Commission to hold a competitive examination in St. Louis June 22 to aid him in nominating candidates to fill two vacancies in the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Any legal resident of the Eleventh Congressional District, between the ages of 16 and 20 years, will be permitted to take the examination and those receiving the highest average will be nominated in order. The examination will include algebra, geometry, grammar, geography, United States history and arithmetic.

Igoe also has made arrangements for applicants who so desire to undergo a physical examination prior to the mental examination. He will furnish, on application, letters to the surgeon of the recruiting station of the Navy Department in the Custom House, who will make the physical examinations. This is done to save the applicants who do not meet the physical requirements the trouble of taking the mental examination.

SOTHERN AND MARLOWE BID FAREWELL TO THE STAGE

Brilliant Audience Greets Noted Players in Their Last Public Appearance.

NEW YORK, May 27.—E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe (Mrs. Sothern) together said their farewell to the stage tonight at the close of the final performance of "If I Were King," at the Shubert Theater. Although a last night, in many respects it was more brilliant than an ordinary first night. The best elements in the artistic and professional life of the city were represented in an audience of almost 1500 persons who heard the actor say his parting wish was to see Shakspeare acted at low prices, for the benefit of the "plain people."

So great was the desire to see the Sotherns on their last public appearance premiums were paid for orchestra seats, a large number selling for $10 each. Sothern's share of the profits will be contributed to the actors fund.

It was almost 12 o'clock when Mr. Sothern began his farewell address. At its close he led forward Miss Marlowe, who had been sitting in a box, and she recited a poem which had been written for her by a friend.

LEILA ADAMS RECOVERING

Doctor Finds Symptoms Favorable for Child Who Ate Mercury for Candy.

Leila Lackland Adams, 4 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Washington Adams and granddaughter of James G Nugent of 5847 Maple avenue, who swallowed a bichloride of mercury tablet last Wednesday, in the belief that it was candy, was resting easily last night.

Dr. F. ratton of 5573 Vernon avenue, who is attending her, said that in a case of mercury poisoning there might be a serious reaction any time within ten days after the poison was taken, but no unfavorable complications have developed thus far in this case. He thinks it probable the child will recover.

This Actually Devitalizes Coarse Hairy Growths

Stubborn growths of coarse hair which have been caused by the unwise use of pastes, rub-on preparations and worthless imitations of De Miracle, which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin, can only be divitalized with De Miracle, the original liquid hair remover, because it attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin. Well groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from limbs and under arms. De Miracle never disappoints.

Le BON TON says: It is "the best method in the world today." Genuine magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called endorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories. Buy De Miracle by name and you will get the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money if it fails. In 50c, $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you buy a bottle at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. P-3, Park Av. and 129th St., New York.—ADV.

U. S. DETERMINED NOT TO WITHDRAW TROOPS IN MEXICO

Administration Will Not Discuss Evacuation Even if Carranza Requests It.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The administration's determination not to consider any proposal for immediate withdrawal of the American expeditionary force in Mexico was further emphasized today when officials made it clear that the question of withdrawal would not be discussed in any form at the conferences to be held by Gen. Pershing, commander of the expedition, and Gen. Gavira, Carranza's commander in Chihuahua.

While details of the conference were being worked out the State Department heard unofficially today that even should Gen. Carranza's forthcoming note demand immediate withdrawal, he would not insist to the point of an armed effort to expel the American troops, but would be satisfied with some arrangement for gradual retirement as de facto armies assume control of the bandit-ridden territory south of the border.

Official information regarding the contents of the Carranza communication still was lacking, but there would be little surprise here if it made a peremptory demand for withdrawal.

MARTIAL LAW IN IRELAND TO CONTINUE BECAUSE OF UNREST

Proclamation Declares That Dissatisfaction Prevails in Certain Parts of Country.

DUBLIN, May 27.—Martial law will be continued in Ireland for the present. A proclamation issued today says:

"Whereas, disaffection and unrest still prevail in certain parts of Ireland; martial law will be continued throughout Ireland until further notice."

Another Naturalized American Held in Connection With Revolt.

LONDON, May 27.—Another naturalized American citizen is under arrest, accused of being implicated in the Sinn Fein revolt. Ambassador Page learned today that Peter Fox, who has been living with his mother in Carrickmore, County Tyrone, is in the prison at Wandsworth, a suburb of London, awaiting trial.

Foreign Secretary Grey replied today to Ambassador Page's inquiries regarding John J. Killgallon, the 17-year-old Far Rockaway (Long Island) boy who was attending an academy in Dublin when the uprising began, was arrested and was sent to the internment camp at Stafford, England. Gray stated, what was already known, that Killgallon was arrested in connection with the Sinn Fein revolt. He said he would ask the Dublin military authorities on what charge the lad is held.

Killgallon, Fox, Patrick Hogan, Mortimer O'Conner and whatever other American citizens may be under arrest in this connection, are reported to be well treated.

PENALTIES FOR M. E. PREACHERS WHO MARRY DIVORCED PERSONS

General Conference Adopts New Rules Including Resolution Asking Methodists Not to Smoke.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., May 27.—A Methodist minister who officiates at the marriage of a divorced person in violation of the rules of the church is guilty of an act of maladministration and may be compelled to answer charges before his conference, according to an amendment to the discipline of the church, adopted unanimously today by the general conference. The church always has recognized only one ground for divorce and has permitted remarriage only of the innocent party, but no penalty for disobedience has ever existed.

A resolution was adopted urging Methodists to abstain from the use of tobacco.

For the purpose of completing action the conference was in session until late tonight, delegates hoping adjournment may be possible on Monday morning. The consecration of the Bishops who were chosen last week will take place tomorrow.

For the requirements of the foreign mission field, according to a report which was adopted by a rising vote, the income of the board of foreign missions and of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society from regular sources must be doubled. The report continued:

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America is requested to arrange for a council of churches to meet at the time and place of the conference to end the European war, when it is held, to devise plans for an establishment of co-operation between the Christian forces of the world.

EAST ST. LOUISAN, DIVORCED IN MARCH, MARRIES ST. LOUIS GIRL

Name of Bride Mentioned in Divorce Petition and Frequently in Trial of Case.

Horace Harper, son of City Engineer E. F. Harper of East St. Louis, was married a week ago yesterday to Miss Hilda Jackson of 3937 West Pine boulevard, St. Louis, it was learned yesterday.

Harper's first wife got a divorce from him in March in the East St. Louis City Court, on the ground of infidelity. Miss Jackson's name was mentioned frequently in the testimony and in the petition.

The Illinois law provides that a person against whom a divorce decree is granted cannot remarry within two years. The couple are living in St. Louis, however, where Harper is an automobile salesman. The bride was a stenographer for a commission company at the National Stockyards.

LORD CECIL SAYS MAIL CENSORSHIP PLAN IS PERFECTED

Blockade Minister Believes System Has Minimized Delays in Visiting Ships.

SEA SEARCHERS UNSAFE

Vessels Are Sent to Certain Ports to Avoid Attack by Submarines.

LONDON, May 27.—Lord Robert Cecil, Blockade Minister, in an interview with the Post-Dispatch correspondent this evening on the censorship of the mails, indicated that the British Government had practically perfected its system of handling the mails, saying:

"There are delays in handling the mails, but we think we have taken all the precautions possible to minimize them."

Asked if it were true that British patrol vessels guided into port neutral vessels destined to ports other than British, to search the mails, he said:

"In the exercise of our legal belligerent rights, such vessels as we are prepared to search are told to go into a port where it can be done properly and without danger of submarines. Of course, if they refused to do so they probably would be given a military escort.

"We regard the search under such conditions the same as if done on the high seas, only more efficient and safer. We receive them just as we do a friendly ship bound for our own ports."

Asked if it were true that the British Government intended preventing the export to America of German dyes, he said: "We don't permit Germany to export anything if we can help it. On the thirteenth of April, 1915, the British Government granted a permit to export certain quantities of dyes to the United States, in payment for two cargoes of cotton, sent to Germany."

Lord Robert said he had been informed by Viscount Peel, chairman of the committee investigating the blockade delays, that up to the present time no complaint has been received from neutral shippers. The committee's full report on the workings of the blockade will be completed in the near future.

G. O. P. DELEGATES HAVE 15 ASPIRANTS TO CHOOSE FROM

Of 985 at Chicago Convention Only One-Quarter Have Been Instructed.

SEVERAL FAVORITE SONS

Hughes Appears to Be First in Popularity With Col. Roosevelt Second.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—West Virginia is the only one of the 48 states that has not elected delegates to the Republican National Convention, which will meet in Chicago a week from next Wednesday. Its 16 representatives are not to be elected until the day before the convention meets, but as the delegates have been carefully "handpicked" and will be sent to vote for a Presidential nominee unhampered by instructions, the result there will not change or clear up the confused conditions existing.

There will be 985 delegates in the convention. It will require the votes of 493 to nominate. There are up to date 15 men whose names engage the attention not only of the delagates, but the people of the entire country. It is probable one of these 15 will be selected to lead the November battle to wrest the control of the Government from President Wilson and his Democratic administration. These 15 are:

Charles E. Hughes of New York, with apparently the largest popular support of any of those under consideration.

Theodore Roosevelt of New York, apparently second in point of popularity and upon whose plans in the event of defeat depend the fate of the nominee of the convention.

Elihu Root of New York, who is favored by the majority of the party leaders and who, it is believed, will have a larger individual following than any of the others.

Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana, who is supported by his own state and delegates from Kentucky, Oklahoma and one or two other states.

Burton Loses Strength.

Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, who has the 48 votes of his own state pledged to him, but whose stock has depreciated within the last month or two and who may be the nominee for Vice President.

Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, for whom the 26 votes of his own state have been pledged, as well as the 24 of Minnesota, and who is not regarded as formidable.

John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, who may get one-half of the 36 votes of his own state, a few from North Carolina and Oklahoma and possibly one or two other southern states.

John W. McCall of Massachusetts, who may get the other half of the delegates of his own state and prove an attractive candidate in some contingencies.

Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, for whom 15 of the 26 delegates of his own state have been pledged and who is not seriously considered as a factor.

Henry Ford of Michigan, for whom the 30 votes of that state have been pledged, which will go probably to either Hughes or Roosevelt—most of them to the latter.

J. Coleman Du Pont of Delaware, for whom the six votes of that state have been pledged, but who probably will not figure beyond the first ballot.

Warren G. Harding of Ohio, regarded as a possibility in certain contingencies, but for whom no delegates have been pledged.

Leonard Wood a Possibility.

Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, regarded as the probable choice of Roosevelt in the event of the latter's rejection as a candidate and his acceptance of the convention programme.

James W. Wadsworth Jr. of New York, regarded as a possible residuary legatee of the Root following.

Lawrence Y. Sherman of Illinois, to whom 56 of the 58 delegates of that state have been pledged, but a majority of which will probably be for Roosevelt. Sherman also may be the nominee for Vice President.

The selection to date, with the probable line-up of the delegates, are as follows:

Alabama, 16; uninstructed; probably split between Roosevelt, Root and Hughes.

Alaska, 2; uninstructed; against Roosevelt.

Arizona, 6; uninstructed; probably for Hughes.

Arkansas, 15; uninstructed; against Roosevelt.

California, 26; uninstructed; against Roosevelt.

Colorado, 12; uninstructed; probably for Roosevelt.

Indiana, 30; instructed for Fairbanks; probably Roosevelt 20, Hughes 10.

Iowa, 26; instructed for Cummins; probably Roosevelt 16, Hughes 10.

Kansas, 20; uninstructed; probably Hughes 10, Root 6, Weeks 4.

Kentucky, 26; 10 instructed for Fairbanks; probably 18 Roosevelt, 8 Hughes.

Louisiana, 12; uninstructed; probably for Roosevelt.

Maine, 12; uninstructed; probably Hughes 8, Roosevelt 4.

Maryland, 16; uninstructed; probably divided between Hughes, Root, Wood.

Massachusetts, 36; uninstructed; probably divided between McCall and Week, but finally Hughes and Roosevelt.

South Dakota, 10; instructed for Cummins; probably split between Hughes, Roosevelt.

South Carolina, 11; uninstructed; probably split between Roosevelt, Hughes.

Tennessee, 21; uninstructed; probably split between Roosevelt, Hughes, Root.

Texas, 26; uninstructed; probably split between Roosevelt, Root, Hughes.

Utah, 8; uninstructed; Root, Roosevelt.

Virginia, 15; uninstructed; probably against Roosevelt.

Vermont, 8; instructed for Hughes.

Washington, 14; uninstructed; probably for Roosevelt.

Wisconsin, 26; 15 instructed for La Follette; probably split between Roosevelt, Hughes.

Wyoming, 6; uninstructed; probably for Roosevelt.

Two delegates are given to the Philippines, two to Porto Rico and the same number to Hawaii. But these six delegates have no vote in the convention unless this privilege is extended to them by a vote of the convention.

May Queen Who Answers Demand for a "Regular Man's Girl"

MISS SARAH M. KEWLEY.

TYPIST CHOSEN FOR MAY QUEEN OF THE PAGEANT

Miss Sarah M. Kewley Fills Demand for "Regular Man's Girl, Jolly and Romping."

A search for "a regular man's girl, jolly and of a romping kind," resulted in the choice of Miss Sarah M. Kewley, 21 years old, a stenographer, of 1429 Arlington avenue, as May Queen for the prologue to the "As You Like It" performance in Forest Park, June 5 to 11.

Mrs. Lawrence T. Post of 5642 Kingsbury avenue, who represented the Pageant Drama Association in making the selection, had as her guide the specifications given by Cecil J. Sharp, the London expert in folk dancing, who is to supervise the work of the 500 St. Louis amateurs taking part in the prologue.

In his outline of the scene which is to follow the raising of the May pole, Sharp wrote:

"Then the men congregate, and, after a brief consultation, run forward to the May Queen, present her with a wreath of May blossoms, with ribbon streamers and rosettes for her dress, and escort her to a raised mound of grass where everyone may see her.

"She is kissed by the men, amid much laughter and merriment, and defends herself by boxing their ears. The woman chosen is a regular 'man's girl,' jolly and of a romping kind, quite different from Ruskin's conventional May Queen."

A Post-Dispatch reporter asked Miss Kewley last evening if she had been informed of the requirements as to being kissed. She said she had heard that the young men would try to kiss the queen, and that she had also heard that the queen would be expected to box their ears. She said she believed herself competent to perform this task.

Miss Kewley has been a member of Miss Olga Bates' dancing class for several months, and it was in this way that she came to Mrs. Post's attention. She is of medium height, and weighs about 130 pounds. She swims, rows and plays tennis, as much as her daily work will permit. Her younger sister and a brother make their home with her, their parents being dead.

Four general rehearsals of the amateur cast will be held this week. Group rehearsals, under the direction of St. Louis dancing instructors, will be held tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday, and in the second half of the week, Sharp and his assistant, Miss Maude Karpeles, will conduct the general rehearsals. The rehearsals of Thursday and Friday nights will be in Miss Bates' studio, in the Euclid building, 393 North Euclid avenue. Rehearsals will be held Saturday and probably Sunday at the Forest Park stage, the hour for these outdoor rehearsals not having been determined.

Lumberman Hurt When Auto Skids.

Edward W. Wiese of 2242 Holly avenue, vice president of the Thomas-Proetz Lumber Co., was slightly injured last night when his automobile skidded over a five-foot embankment at Olivette, St. Louis County. Wiese and a companion were riding east on the Olive Street road when the machine ran into a rut, turned completely around and slid over the embankment.

RECORD CROWD IS EXPECTED AT THE CONVENTION HERE

Secretary of National Committee Says Whole Country Is Talking of St. Louis.

J. Bruce Kremer of Montana, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, who opened headquarters for his office at the Jefferson Hotel yesterday, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he expects all national convention attendance records to be broken at the Democratic National Convention which opens in St. Louis June 14.

"From all parts of the West great crowds are coming to enjoy the wonderful hospitality and generosity of St. Louis," Kremer said. "In fact, I think Missourians, especially, everywhere are going to make a home-coming event out of the national convention.

"I attended the Democratic State Convention in Kentucky recently. It seemed to me that everybody in Kentucky intends to come to the convention."

"President Wilson is growing stronger all the time, and will defeat any candidate nominated by the Republicans at Chicago, regardless of whether the Republicans and Progressives unite."

The office of secretary of the Democratic National Committee will be kept open in St. Louis until after the convention. Kremer brought with him his secretary, Frank L. Riley. The entire office force of the secretary of the committee will be transferred from Washington to St. Louis next week.

Kremer said that so far he has received notice of only two contests, those being in Porto Rico and Hawaii. The party leaders in Hawaii are trying to settle the contest among themselves.

Between 800 and 1000 men have volunteered to serve on reception committees to entertain the delegates. On the New York committee alone, of which Harry B. Hawes is chairman, there are 50 members. At a recent meeting of the committee, 27 members agreed to provide automobile for the use of the New York delegation, and a fund of $750 was subscribed to help pay expenses.

Tickets for eight sessions of the convention — two each day for Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday—are being printed by the Democratic National Committee. National Committeeman Goltra of Missouri said that he was flooded with demands for tickets, and that he would not be able to supply more than one out of every ten applicants.

The tickets are apportioned to the committeemen to the Democratic vote of the different states. The committeemen from distant states, who may not have a demand for all the tickets they are entitled to, usually help out the committeeman of the state in which the convention is held, who never has enough to supply the demand.

The emergency hospital for the convention will be in a tent on the Locust street lot immediately west of the Coliseum. The old Huntington Smith mansion on Locust street has also been rented for committee rooms.

Arrangements have been made to keep the convention cooled by refrigeration, if the weather should be hot enough to require it.

"The resolution to seat only the number of delegates and alternates each state is entitled to was made by Clark Howell of Georgia," Goltra said, "and yet his own State was the first to break the rule. Missouri has elected eight delegates at large, each with half a vote, instead of four, and many other states have done the same thing. Until all the state conventions are held and we know how many delegates and alternates there will be, we shall be up in the air over our seating arrangements.

"This is one time when there isn't much fun in being a national committeeman. I have never been so busy in my life. I hate to meet anybody I know, because I know the first demand will be for tickets to the convention.

"We have changed the plans for the platform many times. The platform will be completed before the convention meets and the Coliseum will be put in perfect order."

VANDERBILT ALUMNI CELEBRATE

Alumni of the university throughout the country are endeavoring to raise $300,000 to meet the requirements of a conditional endowment of $700,000 by the general education board. When the alumni raise their $300,000 a $700,000 Rockefeller endowment will be available. Thus far more than $200,000 have been pledged.

GERMAN VOTE IS STRONGLY AGAINST T. R., SAYS LEADER

Detroit Man, Former Roosevelt Champion, Explains Opposition to Colonel.

DETROIT, Mich., May 27.—That the voters of German descent are against Roosevelt and will vote against him if he is nominated is the statement made her today by Carl Schmidt, Detroit's foremost German-American. If no other choice is left, he says, they will vote for Wilson. "I was a Roosevelt man," said Schmidt, "in 1912 and even after the election I contributed every month to a fund to keep the Progressive party and Roosevelt going. Since the war has started and his attitude has become what I consider dangerous to the country, I have stopped.

"I believe every German of German descent is against him. Nothing he can say or do can conciliate them. He is an opportunist; he would attack Great Britain tomorrow if he thought he could gain votes without losing the others.

"The Germans find Roosevelt's Americanism an un-American spirit. It is an armed threat, a fist shaken across the water. It does not differ from the spirit of any monarch.

"Lacking a candidate who will answer to their ideas of what a President should be, the Germans tend toward Wilson. But under no circumstances will they vote for Roosevelt.

"German-Americans fear that Roosevelt is likely to drive the country to war with Germany. They do not believe that he will keep any promises he may make. He is for or against anything he believes at the moment to be popular or unpopular."

German Editors Will Not Stand for Roosevelt or Root.

CHICAGO, May 27.—German newspaper editors today served notice on the Republican chiefs that they will not stand for Col. Roosevelt or Elihu Root.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee of the German Newspaper Publishers' Association of the United States at the Kaiserhof Hotel, in which Bernard Ridder, son of the late Herman Ridder, was active, it was decided to submit their protest formally to the Republican convention. It will set forth that aside from these two the Germans have no favorite.

Meantime, the Progressive leaders have the stage all set for the nomination of the Colonel, probably the second day, and possibly the first.

EDUCATION PERIOD TO BE ALLOWED ON PARKING OF AUTOS

Places in Congested Districts Where Cars May Stand More Than Two Hours.

Although the police have announced that tomorrow they will begin enforcing the new ordinance, limiting the time in which autos may be parked on the streets east of Twelfth and between Market streets and Washington avenue, it has been decided not to make arrests for a few days more.

Instead, traffic policemen and special officers have been directed to begin a "campaign of education," whereby the law will be explained to motorists until all its requirements are sufficiently understood.

For perhaps eight or ten days yet, policemen will observe autos left standing in one place longer than two hours in the restricted district and will paste stickers on them. The stickers will bear printed notice that the law has been disregarded.

The authorities believe this will be a simpler and more effective way of going about it than by making numerous arrests. Police court summons will not be issued, in most cases, until the same persons have offended several times in spite of warnings.

For the accommodation of the public, certain places have been set apart in the congested district where designated numbers of cars may be parked for longer than two hours. They are:

On the Fourth street side of the Courthouse, 60 cars; in a lot at Fourth and Market streets, 110 cars; adjoining old city hall site, on a lot between Eleventh, Twelfth, Chestnut and Market streets, 130 cars; on Twelfth, between Market and Olive streets, and between Locust street and Washington avenue, 180 cars.

Patrolmen will be stationed at these places to direct auto drivers how to park their cars properly. The earliest comers will get space until the limit is reached.

Raise of Meat Freight Rate Suspended.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Increases of from 10 to 30 per cent in freight rates on fresh meat from Omaha, Chicago and St. Louis to points in Oklahoma were suspended today by the Interstate Commerce Commission until Oct. 4, pending investigation.

IRON MOUNTAIN SUES TO COLLECT $23,700,000 BONDS

Action Filed in Louisiana Against Texas & Pacific Also Asks for Receiver for Road.

SHREVEPORT, La., May 27.—Suit was instituted in the United States District Court here today by the St. Louis Iron Mountain & Southern Railway and B. F. Bush, receiver for that road, to force the collection of $23,700,000 second mortgage income bonds issued by the Texas & Pacific Railroad in 1888 and which are held by Bush as receiver.

Application also is made for the appointment of a receiver for the Texas & Pacific.

Subpenas were served today upon representatives of the Texas & Pacific in Shreveport and its duly authorized agents in New Orleans and officials of the Bankers' Trust Co., the Metropolitan Trust Co. and Walker Hill of New York, trustees.

The suit is brought on entirely different grounds from that of the Bankers' Trust Co. of New York at Dallas and recently dismissed by the Federal Courts for lack of jurisdiction. The bonds are an asset of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern and it is contended that the receiver for that road was instructed by the Court to marshal and protect all of that company's holdings.

MEANS CONVENTION FOR ST. LOUIS

Catholic Alumnae Conference of Missouri Names Officers for Year.

The organization Friday of the Missouri Conference of Catholic Alumnae practically assures the next international convention to St. Louis. Thirteen institutions for the higher education of women were represented at the meeting at the Queen's Daughters, 3730 Lindell avenue. Among the alumnae associations were St. Aloysius, Loretta and St. Theresa, all of Kansas City; Arcadia College, Arcadia; St. Joseph's Academy, St. Joseph; Sacred Heart, St. Charles, and those of Loretta, Marysville; St. Elizabeth, St. Joseph; Ursaline and the Visitation academies and the Rosatti-Kain High School of St. Louis.

Officers to serve during the ensuing year were elected as follows: Miss Stella R. Gillick, St. Louis, governor for Missouri; Mrs. James Green Sr., Kansas City, vice governor; Mrs. S. R. Mathieu, St. Louis, recording secretary; Mrs. Eugene Fusz, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. H. Smith, treasurer, and Mrs. E. Brewer and Misses M. Murdock and Frances Kelly, trustees. A letter of approval and commendation received from Archbishop Glennon said: "Our Catholic women have a right and the duty to stand out before the world for the training they have received and the good they may do."

JEAN KNOTT SUED FOR DIVORCE AS HE DEPARTS FOR EAST

Comic Artist Alleged to Have Violent Temper and Told Her to "Go to the Devil."

Jean Knott, the well-known Post-Dispatch comic artist, originator of "Penny-Ante" and "Short-Sport," was sued for divorce yesterday by Mrs. Elizabeth E. Knott.

Knott left the service of the Post-Dispatch Friday, and yesterday took a noon train for New York to enter the service of the Hearst newspapers. Before leaving he authorized a law firm to enter his appearance in the suit.

The Knotts were married Sept. [illegible], 1907. The date of the separation is given as Jan. 5 last, since when they lived apart under the same roof at [illegible] Kingsbury Court, according to the petition. Mrs. Knott says that when her husband was home he ate his meals with her, but refused to converse with her.

The petition recites that Knott had a violent temper, that he quarreled with the plaintiff about unimportant matters, at other times did not speak to her for weeks at a time, and that on occasions when angry would tell her to "go to the devil" when she tried to calm him.

In February, 1915, after Mr. and Mrs. Knott had returned home from a dance, it is alleged he informed his wife they couldn't get along and that they had better separate. She persuaded him against this, she says. A year ago he again appeared dissatisfied, she says, and told her that he no longer loved her and for her to get a divorce.

Last April by appointment Knott met his wife and child, Ruth Elizabeth, 5 years old, at Union Station to go to a country club. They rode on the same train, but Knott did not sit with his family and refused to recognize them, the wife states. At their destination Knott walked ahead and registered at a hotel alone. She registered with her child. She asks custody of the girl.

Mrs. Knott states in the petition that his salary is $10,000 to $12,000 a year.

ISSUES IN EIGHT-HOUR RAILROAD CONTROVERSY AS SEEN BY EACH SIDE

Head of Brotherhood of Trainmen and Spokesman for General Managers Discuss Case on Eve of Decisive Meeting.

HERE are two statements representing the contentions in the controversy between the railroads of the country and their employes which will be taken up in New York next Thursday when the general managers meet the representative of the unions to discuss the demands of the latter for an 8-hour day. Elisha Lee is a vice president and general superintendent of the Pennsylvania System and chairman of the Conference Committee of managers of Eastern railroads—the chosen spokesman of the railway in the affair. W. G. Lee is president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and was selected to make this statement on behalf of the transportation brotherhoods. Both have carefully gone over and revised their articles which were written especially for the Post-Dispatch.

BY ELISHA LEE.

Vice President and General Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Chairman of the Conference Committee of Eastern Managers.

The wage bill of the railroads is around $1,400,000,000 a year. Out of every dollar the carriers receive from the public, 45 cents goes to the employes.

The employes in train service—engineers, conductors, firemen and brakemen—earn about $400,000,000 a year.

These are the highest paid men in the service. Although only 18 per cent of the employes, they get 28 per cent of the wages.

These train employes throughout the United States have made a united demand for a new wage schedule that will add from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 to the payroll.

The demands of the men in brief, are:

1. Ten hours' pay for eight hours' or less service in all freight and yard service, thus increasing the hourly pay by 25 per cent.

2. Overtime to be paid for at one-and-one-half times this higher hourly rate, thus increasing the overtime pay by 87½ per cent.

It is an eight-hour basic payday, and not an eight-hour workday that the employes demand. As Val Fitzpatrick, vice president of the Trainmen, says in the official organ of the brotherhood:

"The eight hour basic workday contemplates that eight hours shall be the basis for a day's work and any time in excess thereof shall all be paid for as overtime, consequently under such a provision there is no limit to the hours worked. The latter system is the one proposed by the train service brotherhoods.

"For train employes, a workday of a fixed number of hours is impossible. The hours on duty must vary through a wide range, depending on the speed of trains and length of runs. The men are now paid for every mile they run on fast trains, and for every minute they are on duty on slow trains—with a guarantee of a day's pay, no matter how short a time on duty.

Standard Workday Impossible.

The length of a day's service depends upon the speed of trains and the length of runs. Some employes work a short time every day and earn high wages; others are on duty longer hours, with many days off, and also earn high wages. The location of terminals, the character of traffic, the demands of shippers, and many other factors make any standard length of workday in all kinds of train service a physical impossibility.

There are three theoretically possible ways in which the railroads could comply with the demands:

1. Reconstruct the roads with shorter divisions so as to shorten the time of freight runs.

2. Reduce the length of trains so that they could run at higher speed to escape the penalty of overtime.

3. Pay the increased wages under present working conditions.

As to the first of these theoretical solutions, it may be explained that every road of any considerable length is laid out in a number of divisions, and each of these divisions has certain terminals and yards necessary for switching, handling and making up trains. These have been constructed at great expense. In order to shorten the length of divisions to enable trains to cover them in less time, it would be necessary to relocate many of these yards and terminals. This would be a tremendously costly and difficult task. In congested territory, such as is found throughout the larger part of the Eastern United States, it would be a practical impossibility, and in every part of the country it would involve a waste of many millions of capital, the cost of which would have to be paid ultimately by the public in higher rates, or else many now solvent roads would be forced into bankruptcy.

Economy Always in View.

As an alternative to this, it has been suggested in support of the demands made by the men that the speed of trains should be increased, so that, for example, a train which now covers a division 100 miles long in 10 hours could make the same run in eight hours. This, it is pointed out, would involve no increase in pay to the train crew.

For many years past the railroads of the country have been engaged in herculean efforts to introduce every possible economy in operation. If it were feasible to increase the speed of freight trains, and consistent with safety, it would have been done by the railroads as a matter of economy. But, it may be objected, why should not the railroads cut their long freight trains in two and thereby enable them to run at higher speed?

To this the answer is obvious that by doubling the number of trains the number of employes, and consequently the wage bill of the railroads for train service, would be doubled. Multiplying the number of trains would require more locomotives and additional road, yard and roundhouse facilities. The chances of delay and accidents would be correspondingly increased. It would menace the safety of employes and of the traveling public.

Practically, therefore, the railway managers, if they were to grant the demands of the men, would be compelled to adopt the third course and to pay the greatly increased wages which would result.

The public that pays for railroad transportation, and, therefore, for all railroad labor, must be chiefly interested in knowing whether these employes who are asking for higher wages are well paid. If they are not well paid, they should be.

The distinguished Board of Arbitration in the Eastern engineers' wage controversy, headed by Dr. Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, gave his opinion in 1912 of the wages of these employes:

"Well organized railway labor, illustrated by engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen, etc., receive consideration from the railroads not accorded to the classes of labor not so well organized. Public utilities should not impose an undue burden upon the public by paying higher wages than are reasonable."

The railroads are now preparing detailed records of the pay checks earned by all train employes. These records will show that these employes, who are demanding still higher wages, are probably the highest paid of any large group of workers in the world.

Overtime Demand Unfair.

Certainly their demand for a still higher rate for overtime is most unfair. Conditions in railroad work are very different from those in most industries. The manufacturer can control his overtime. When he chooses to work his men overtime he gets additional output and profit, and he passes the cost of overtime on to the buyers of his goods. But the railroad that schedules its train to perform service without overtime is forced to pay overtime on account of congestion of traffic, whether accidents or other causes over which it has no control. It cannot pass the cost on to the buyer of transportation—the shipper.

A railroad receives from shippers a certain sum for carrying a trainload of goods 100 miles. If the train is delayed and the trainmen are on duty 14 hours instead of 10, the carrier receives not a cent more from the shippers, but it must pay the trainmen four hours' "overtime."

The essential difference between railroad train service and work in factories, as regards payment for overtime, has been generally recognized.

But the question of the wages earned by these employes, their hours of service and their working conditions, is of minor importance, to that which would be presented by the refusal of the brotherhood leaders to discuss with the railroad managers any phase of the wage schedules not included in the men's demands.

Such a "jug-handled" proposition does not appeal to the American idea of fair play, especially when there is behind it the thinly veiled threate of a nation-wide strike that would paralyze the commerce of the nation.

The public that pays for railroad transportation rightly insists that there shall be a full and fair discussion of a national question of such vital interest to every citizen. And more than this, the public insists that it has more at stake than either the employes or the employers, and that it must be represented in any discussion of the brotherhood's demands.

Views of W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Trainmen

BY W. G. LEE.

President of the Brotherhood of Trainmen.

Railway freight train service employes have submitted to the railroads a demand for a shorter workday.

They feel that they are entitled to relief from the long and arduous labor that many of them are now required to perform.

They feel that their condition has not been improved as compared with wage workers in other industries.

Railroad train crews are not paid a fixed salary. They are pieceworkers and are paid only when they move freight from one end of a division to another.

The present schedules of pay are based on the moving of a train 100 miles or less in 10 hours or less. The men now ask the railroads for a revised schedule providing for the moving of a train 100 miles in eight hours "or less."

The words "or less" always appear in schedules of train crews' pay for practically the same reason that railroad freight rates are based on 100 pounds "or less." If the train crew is ordered out and makes the run of 100 miles in less than the time specified in the pay schedule, the crew is paid the minimum rate for a day's work just the same as the railroad company collects for 100 pounds on a package, even though it would actually weigh only 10 pounds. They have performed their service of taking the train 100 miles, which is the piece of work they are paid to do. There must be a minimum rate.

If the locomotives are loaded down with a great number of cars so that they will just barely move over the road, meeting with all sorts of delays by reason of the long and heavy trains and do not make an average of 12½ miles per hour, then the employes expect to secure overtime of time and a half (after the expiration of the eight hours' work, just the same as any other wage earner gets). If the railroads add tonnage sufficient to delay the movement of a train and make less than an average speed of 12½ miles per hour, they of course receive more revenue and in consequence, should pay the train crews for overtime. The railroads should not ask the employes to work overtime in order to increase the revenues of the roads unless they are willing to pay the employe in addition to their regular rate for this overtime, which was used to produce additional revenue.

How Wages Are Figured.

In figuring wages for all railroad train crews, 100 miles is the arbitrary basis for the normal day's work on a division.

Under the schedules of pay for which the men are now asking, it will be necessary for the railroads to move their freight trains an average of 12½ miles per hour instead of 10 miles per hour, as at present, in order to avoid the payment of overtime to the train crews.

If a division is 100 miles long, overtime would begin after eight hours; if 125 miles long, after 10 hours; 150 miles long, after 12 hours, and so on.

The number of hours when overtime would begin, is arrived at by simply dividing the number of miles by 12½.

Any talk of the roads having to change their division points under an eight-hour day schedule is absurd for the reason that the average running time on a short division must be 12½ miles an hour just the same as it would be on a long division of over 100 miles. If a train would not average 12½ miles an hour on a 150-mile division, it would not average 12½ miles an hour on less than a 100-mile division.

Railway freight train crews do their work by the piece and what they are paid to do is to move a train at least 100 miles in a given number of hours. If they should perform this duty in less than a day of eight hours, then they would be paid a day's wages, or if they worked a day of eight hours and did not succeed in moving a train 100 miles in eight hours, then they would go into overtime and would be paid accordingly.

The length of a division has little to do with the proposition. The men have agreed to run the divisions at uniform speed regardless of their length. The limitations as to time are fixed only by the Federal hours of service law. Very few divisions are more than 150 miles in length and the railroads are entitled to 12-hour time from the men on divisions of this length before they pay overtime at all. The men having agreed to a speed basis for freight trains that will permit the railroad to have divisions 200 miles long and still get in under the hours of service law and not pay a cent of overtime.

Calculated on Speed Basis.

It is not the length of the division that enters into the calculation; it is the speed basis of freight trains.

By putting a penalty on overtime, there would be little or no overtime used, as the officials would see to it that the trains made the divisions on a 12½-mile per hour basis, which would give the men relief from the long hours of work and permit them to have more time at home with their families.

If the train crews demanded an eight-hour day on the basis of a wage worker in a factory, meaning to quit work at the end of eight hours, regardless of where they might be at the time, the railroads could very properly maintain that it could not be granted without changing every terminal so that all divisions would be exactly 100 miles.

Railroad men regard the shorter workday in exactly the same way other men have considered it. They have had opportunity to know for themselves the advantages that follow a reduction in the number of hours of work; they remember when there was a limit to the hours and they know how they paid the penalty; they realize that with the endless day they were not as well off as they now are with the 10-hour day, and with the lessons of years to prove it they stand for the shorter workday as a humane, just proposition which they consistently demand on the ground that eight hours' service at a time is all the man can give with fairness to himself if he is to retain his mental and physical health, enjoy a part of his time to his own advantage and that of his family, to remain alert and active, the better to perform service and to have some hope of remaining a wage worker several years more than he knows he now has.

Size of Cars Increased.

Freight cars have grown in length from 28 to 50 feet in the last 20 years, and where formerly it took 24 loads to make a train, it now requires from 50 to 100 cars. One crew is now doing the work that formerly was done by three or four crews, and this crew does not receive pay commensurate with the increased work.

Statistics show that it cost the railroads for wages to locomotive engineers and firemen, 65 cents for each 1000 tons carried one mile in 1890, while in 1913 1000 tons were transported one mile for only 33 cents, a decrease of cost to the railroads for these employes alone of more than 50 per cent. While there has been some slight increase in wages during that period, it has not been in accordance with the decrease in operating cost to the railroads or to the increased work made necessary by extremely long and heavier trains.

The railroads are attempting to make capital out of the statement that for every dollar of revenue received, 45 cents of that dollar is paid out for labor. This is an admission that railroad labor is not paid as much as labor in other industries.

Ten of the leading industries selected from the United States census reports show that the ratio of wages to the cost of production is 61.4 cents out of each dollar.

The United States census reports also show that wages in all lines have increased more rapidly than on railroads.

Even on the farms the census reports show that farm wages have increased, east of the Mississippi 70.1 per cent, and west of the Mississippi River 97.1.

The only fair basis of stating wages is to show how much a man receives per hour for his work. The railroad train service employes receive less per hour compensation than almost any other trade. A hod carrier gets $4.50 for eight hours, or 56 cents per hour.

On through and irregular freight train service in the eastern territory, the prevailing wage for engineers is 48½ cents per hour, firemen 31c per hour, conductors 40c per hour, brakemen 26 7-10c per hour.

Are these high wages when you compare them with the hourly wage in other industries?

The suggestion has been made that this controversy could well be settled by arbitration and in this connection it is proper to state that the railroad brotherhood organizations are not opposed to arbitration, neither are they pledged to accept it, but at the present time the question of arbitration is not to be considered one way or the other, as the negotiations between the employes and the companies have not reached a stage where arbitration would be considered germane to the subject.

The railway officials contend that the men do not really want a shorter day and are only making these demands in order to get more wages. If the roads believe this to be true, let them make a proposition of a flat 8-hour day with no overtime and we would welcome it enthusiastically as a solution of the problem of bettering the condition of the freight train service employes.

Arguments by Railroads and Trainmen on Eight Hour-Issue

FOR THE TRAINMEN

RAILWAY freight train service employes feel that they are entitled to relief from the long and arduous labor that many of them are now called upon to perform and that their condition has not been improved as compared with wake workers in other industries.

The men want, not overtime, but a shorter work day. The railway officials contend that the men do not really want a shorter day and are only making these demands in order to get more wages. If the roads believe this to be true let them make a proposition of a flat 8-hour day and we would welcome it enthusiastically.

Under the schedules of pay for which the men are asking, it will be necessary for the railroads to move their freight trains an average of 12½ miles per hour instead of 10 miles per hour, as at present, in order to avoid the payment of overtime to the train crews. * * * Any talk of the railroads having to change their division points under the 8-hour day schedule is absurd.

The railroad men stand for the shorter work day as a humane, just proposition, which they consistently demand on the ground that eight hours' service at a time is all the man can give with fairness to himself.

The railroads are attempting to make capital out of the statement that for every dollar of revenue received, 45 cents is paid out for labor. United States census reports show that the ratio of wages in 10 of the leading industries of the United States to the cost of production is 61.4 cents out of each dollar.

FOR THE RAILROADS

Engineers, conductors, firemen and brakemen earn about $400,000,000 a year and are the highest paid employes in the service.

If it were feasible to increase the speed of freight trains consistent with safety, it would have been done long ago as a matter of economy. To cut the freight trains in two to increase their speed would mean doubling the number of employes and consequently the wage bill of the railroads.

The railroads are now preparing detailed records of the pay checks earned by all train employes. These records will show that these employes who are demanding still higher wages are probably the highest paid of any large group of workers in the world.

When the manufacturer chooses to work his men overtime he gets additional output and profit and he passes on the cost of overtime to the buyer of his goods. But the railroad when forced to pay overtime cannot pass on the cost to the shipper.

TEACHERS' ANNUITY BENEFIT BALL GAME TO BE WEDNESDAY

First of Browns-Cleveland Series Made Occasion of Half-Holiday in Public Schools.

When the Browns and Clevelands play the first game of their St. Louis series at Sportsman's Park Wednesday, the 2300 teachers in the St. Louis public schools, and as many of the 80,000 children as can crowd in, will be on hand to see the game. It is to be Public School Baseball day. The Teachers' Benevolent Annuity Association has chartered the game and the park, and the Board of Education has granted the schools a half holiday for the occasion.

Aside from the joy of being out in the open and at a baseball game, on what is ordinarily a school day, the committee having charge of Mr. Roosevelt's movements for that day has announced that the former President will go directly from the City Club to the game, and will address the grandstand audience from the box set apart for him.

The Annuity Association, the object of which is support of the superannuated teachers and those who have become broken in health, has made no public appeal since June, 1907, when a festival of the nations was given by the schools at the old Fairgrounds at Grand avenue and Natural Bridge road. With the conversion of the Fairgrounds into a public park, the association has been compelled to replenish its treasury in other ways, with the result that the present baseball game was selected as perhaps the easiest method to teachers, and the pleasantest method to the public, of raising needed funds.

The association had, at the time of making its last report, 1059 members, a large majority of whom are actively engaged as teachers in the St. Louis schools.

In fact, every woman contemplating the purchase of furniture should consider carefully the important protective features of the

Buettner Club Plan

With every purchase made here, we give a Protective Bond, which reads as follows—

"This certifies that........................has this day become a member of the Buettner Protective Home Furnishing Club and is entitled to the benefits therefrom as follows:

If the member is a married man, living with and supporting his wife or family, should he die after six months from date of this membership, the Buettner Furniture Company will waive and cancel all indebtedness due it from said member."

The chief worry of Newly-Weds is the fear that something may happen to the "bread winner" before he can have laid aside a competence to support his family in case he is taken away.

This Protective Bond removes all obligation in the event that such circumstances occur. By purchasing furniture at Buettner's you receive this protection without extra charge.

CITY SANITARIUM PAY NOT RAISED IN PAST 47 YEARS

Superintendent Tells Doctors Low Wages Makes It Impossible to Get Competent Assistants.

INSANE PATIENTS SUFFER

Training School Needed, Dr. Johns Says, but Efforts to Get the Money Are Unavailing.

Attendants at the city sanitarium have not had an increase in wages since the institution was established, in 1869, Supt. George A. Johns said last night in a paper he read before an open meeting of the St. Louis Medical Society at 3525 Pine street. The meeting was devoted to a discussion of mental hygiene, and physicians and public officials criticised the shortcomings of the city and State institutions for the insane.

The low salaries paid the attendants at the city sanitarium was given by Dr. Johns as the greatest hindrance to the proper care of the city's insane. Male head attendants get $30 a month; male attendants, $28; female head attendants, $28, and female attendants, $25. Attendants live at the sanitarium, their board being furnished by the institution.

These salaries do not attract capable help, Dr. Johns said. It had been his experience that only poorly qualified men and women were willing to work for such wages when, in fact, the proper care of the insane requires attendants of good education, tact, resourcefulness and strong personality.

Training School Needed.

"In addition," Dr. Johns said, "we should have a training school for attendants so that those who are to be entrusted with the care of the insane may go to their tasks with the best possible understanding of the methods and means that are best for the patient. So far we have been unable to get funds to establish this training school and have had to put up with inexperienced help that is 40 per cent new every month."

Director of Public Welfar Tolkacz, in opening the discussion of Dr. Johns' paper, scored the city government for failure to appreciate the financial needs of the sanitarium and provide funds for training schools and adequate social service. He said he believed the greatest need was a social worker at the city hall to educate the city officials in the needs of the insane patients. He also referred to the recent conference in St. Louis of the heads of the State institutions and lamented the inefficiency of these officials.

"They get their places through political influence," Director Tolkacz said, "and not for their qualifications. Their tenure of office is subject to the changes in the Governorship and it is seldom that a superintendent continues through more than one term of the Governorship.

Help Sometimes Brutal.

"Our city sanitarium and other city institutions are far in advance of the State institutions, but the low salaries that Dr. Johns referred to are a serious obstacle. The wages paid result in the attendants being employed from among the lowest possible social order and the superintendent never knows when one of these poorly qualified persons is going to beat up a patient. And when this happens the newspapers make great 'scare heads' out of it without mentioning the underlying cause of entirely inadequate wages."

Dr. Cleveland Shutt, Hospital Commissioner, said that for 12 years he had come in contact with the heads of these State institutions and had never known one who was selected for his qualifications for this particular work. "They are usually conscientious and well-meaning physicians, but absolutely incompetent," he said. "This is because of the political control of the institutions."

He told of his hope that the city would soon be able to establish a training school for the sanitarium attendants. He also urged the need of larger grounds, so the patients, who now number more than 2000, could produce much of the food they consume.

Announcement was made that it was thought that at least two-thirds of the society's membership would march in the preparedness parade June 3. The active membership of the society is now 626.

2100 "PILGRIMS" ASSURE ROOSEVELT OF THEIR SUPPORT

Three Special Trains Take Crowd to Oyster Bay, Where They Get Warm Welcome.

TALK ON AMERICANISM

Colonel Says This Country Should Stand for Courage That Would Inspire Loyalty.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., May 27.—Three special trains brought into Oyster Bay this afternoon 2100 Roosevelt boomers, marshalled under the auspices of the Roosevelt Non-Partisan League. In the plaza about the railway station they formed in column of fours, headed by the Seventh Regiment band, and marched off to Sagamore Hill, three and one-half miles distant.

Bankers and actors, sculptors and illustrators, clergymen and professors, made up the throng. No one of any present political importance had a hand in the affair. They assured him of their support in the event of his nomination for President.

Actors and Sculptors There.

Charles Dana Gibson and Howard Chandler Christy climbed the hill, as did Gutzon Borglum, sculptor, Wallace Morgan, illustrator; Frederick MacMonnies, sculptor; Hamlin Garland and Julian Street, authors; James K. Hackett, John Barrymore and Jefferson de Angelis, actors.

Dressed in his khaki riding clothes, wearing his spurs and a red and yellow scarf that was reminiscent to some of the war with Spain, Col. Roosevelt received his visitors as he stood on the west porch of his house.

Reprisals had been promised anyone who might seek to stop for a bit of conversation with the Colonel, but the Colonel himself broke the rule when "Mike" Donovan, who used to box with him, came along. The rule was broken again with the appearance of Patrick Egan, former Minister to Chile, and once again for Police Capt. Tighe, who was a Sergeant when the Colonel was Commissioner.

"I'm pure German on both sides," said one man, "but there's no hyphen about me."

"Come back here," cried the Colonel, and he shook hands with him again. "You're the sort of American for me, Shake!"

When another proclaimed his German parentage and added that he himself was "pure American" the Colonel said: "I'm willing to rest the case for straight Americanism with our citizens of German birth, and I would carry them two to one for the American doctrine."

Richard M. Hurd, who was spokesman for the visitors, in addressing Col. Roosevelt, said:

"Lincoln said this nation could not endure half slave and half free. It is equally true, as you have pointed out, that this nation cannot now endure half hyphenated and half American."

Speech of Roosevelt.

Col. Roosevelt, addressing the visitors, said:

"Mr. Chairman and friends, fellow citizens and fellow Americans whose Americanism is without qualification and whose allegiance to the flag is undivided: I deeply appreciate, I am more than deeply touched by the honor you do me today. Sir, the address you have just read I accept in the spirit in which you, sir, and all of you mean it as pledging all of you here to a common ideal, to the ideal of our country and our flag.

"I, of course, stand absolutely and unqualifiedly for every principle set forth in that address, and I understand entirely that in making the address you have pledged yourselves primarily to the principles and to me only so far as I embody those principles.

"We have a right to demand that every man who comes here becomes a citizen, that he becomes an American and nothing else. We regard the hyphen as a bar sinister drawn across our national coat of arms and we don't intend to permit it to remain there.

"To you both, native of this country and those born abroad, and above all to you old native Americans of old stock, you cannot expect to get loyalty from the immigrant or the immigrants' children unless you make this country one to which a proud man can be loyal. And to do that you have got to demand that the country stand for courage and for strength.

"No man ever yet was loyal to a coward. No man ever yet was loyal to a weakling whose weakness was due to the fact that he would not take the pains and undergo the effort necessary to be strong. If we as a nation do not put up our ideals, including the ideals of courage and strength, and if we do not put to use our immense national resources, in other words, if we allow timidity and willful weakness to become attributes, unless we make up our minds, we shall not command the loyalty of those who come to our shores.

"Just today I was very glad to see published in the papers the letter of Admiral Dewey describing an incident that took place while I was President. When we were menaced with trouble, I acted up to my theory that the proper way of handling international relations was by speaking softly and carrying a big stick. And in that particular case, Dewey and the American fleet represented a big stick.

"I asked on behalf of the nation for nothing to which we were not entitled. I was as courteous as possible; I not only acted with justice, but with courtesy toward them. I put every battleship and every torpedo boat on the sea under the American flag and Dewey, with instructions to hold himself ready in entire preparedness to sail at a moment's notice. That didn't mean that we had war. Dewey was the greatest possible provocative of peace.

"We will do well to remember one of Lowell's great lines: 'Peace won't keep house with fear.'

"It is a line worth remembering, and the way to get peace is not by being so unprepared as to invite war, still less by using words which are not translated into deeds, but by behaving with scrupulous justice and courtesy toward the other nations, and at the same time being so prepared both in soul and in body, both spiritually and materially as to make it evident that insult to this nation by any other nation will not be tolerated by our people.

"I have spoken of our getting together and of keeping the immigrants' loyalty. Of course, I have not given you all of what we must do—roughly it is to keep our standard of national action in international matters level to the standard set by Washington and maintained by Lincoln—men who loved peace but who loved righteousness more than peace.

"The next thing to remember about the immigrant and every other one of our fellow citizens is that it is our business to fit this land so that it will be a good place in which our children and children's children shall dwell, and it won't be a good place, a good living place for our children's children or any of us, unless we shape conditions so it will be a good place for our children's children of all of us."

FOOTPRINTS EVIDENCE IN TRIAL OF MAN CHARGED WITH MURDER

SYRACUSE, Kan., May 27.—Footprints leading away from the body of Nellie Byers, the murdered Grant County school teacher, corresponded in size to the shoes of Archie Sweet, who is on trial for the crime, according to the testimony today of Dr. James Brewer, Coroner of Grant County.

Dr. Brewer declared he found the prints to be 11½ inches in length, and in measuring the shoes of several persons in a crowd near the spot, Sweet's were found to be the same size.

Tinted Glasses

For Motorists, Golfers and Other Lovers of Outdoor Sports

THE Violet Rays now begin their season's campaign of injury to the eyes. It therefore behooves all men and women going about the out of doors to seek protection from this invisible source of distress.

Come and let me examine your eyes and tell you the exact tint your particular glasses should have.

Any tint will not do. There are several shades that prevent the violet rays from passing through and the peculiar structure and general condition of your eyes have an important bearing upon which is the most suitable and healthful for you. It is something you cannot determine yourself. I make no charge for the examination.

And should you conclude to purchase the proper glasses, they will cost you less because my rent is cheaper than a sidewalk store, and you must take an elevator to my floor.

On the hottest days my place is twenty degrees cooler than any store and the time spent here will be a rest and pleasure to you.

Abel's KeeLock Mounting fitted to all glasses of spectacles ordered, without extra charge. This mounting will not work loose or get out of adjustment. I will attach it to any glasses, no matter where they were bought, at small cost.

The Doctor's Advice

By Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptons or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Miss Adele writes: "My hair is combing out, my scalp itches and dandruff is very annoying, and I want something to cure these conditions."

Answer: For hair and scalp troubles I have never found anything to equal the beneficial results of a thorough treatment of plain yellow minyol. It is cooling, cleansing and invigorating, and thousands now use it regularly as a hair and scalp tonic.

Henry J. C. writes: "Something seems to be wrong with my system and I don't know what it is. I have huge puffs under my eyes, my eyes are bloodshot in morning and my feet and ankles are swollen. Sometimes I have chills and feel weak and tired most of the time."

Answer: Your eliminating organs, such as liver and kidneys, are in need of treatment. Begin taking balmwort tablets at once. Get them in sealed tubes with full directions of any well-stocked druggist.

C. M. C. asks: "Please relieve me of a coated tongue, foul breath, headache, constipation and general ill health."

Answer: If habitually constipated, you should take three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) and arouse the organs which eliminate waste material from your body. These tablets purify the blood and improve the health by acting on the liver, kidneys and bowels. Obtain in sealed tubes, with full directions.

"Sarah" says: "Can anything be done for one who is bothered with rheumatism? If so, please reply."

Answer: You can be relieved of your rheumatism if you take the following: Mix by shaking well and take a teaspoonful at mealtimes and at bedtime and you will soon be relieved. Comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs.; wine of colchicum, one-half oz.; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; iodide of potassium, 2 drams.

Miss Bertie L. asks: "What remedy can you recommend to reduce obesity safely? I want to reduce about 30 pounds."

Answer: I rely on five-grain arbolone tablets as being the most effective and convenient treatment to reduce abnormal fat. Druggists supply this in sealed tubes with complete directions. After the first few days a pound a day is not too much reduction.

Mrs. M. D. D. asks: "Do you think it is possible for me to increase my weight from 97 pounds to about 125 pounds?"

Answer: Yes, I believe that the regular use of a special tonic tablet will do this for you, as it has for thousands of others. Ask your druggist for three-grain hyponuclane tablets in sealed package with full directions. Take them for several months to get the full benefit.

John C. L. writes: "I find my natural strength and nervous system failing me. I do not recuperate as of yore. My food and rest seem not to benefit as they should. Am weak, despondent and unable to perform the duties which were assumed earlier in life, while my ambition for work and pleasure is slowly going."

Answer: I think a powerful, harmless tonic and nervine medicine will rejuvenate and restore the functions of digestion, assimilation and elimination by invigorating the nervous system. Obtain three-grain cadomene tablets, packed in sealed tubes, and take as per directions accompanying.—ADVERTISEMENT.

ROOSEVELT TO TALK AT BROWNS' PARK WEDNESDAY AT 3

Tells Chairman Reynolds He Would Not Miss Audience at Teachers' Benefit Game.

Arrangements for the reception of Theodore Roosevelt in St. Louis next Wednesday have been completed.

The big change in the arrangements tentatively announced for the reception of the former President is that he will not go to Clayton in the afternoon, but will make a speech at the American League baseball park at 3 o'clock.

The game between the Browns and Cleveland on that day will be a benefit for the School Teachers' Benevolent and Annuity Association. School teachers and pupils of all the public schools have been asked to be present, and Roosevelt wrote to Judge Matt G. Reynolds, chairman of the Reception Committee, that he would not miss an opportunity to address such an audience under any circumstances.

300 Invited to Joint Committee.

An invitation was sent to 300 St. Louisans yesterday to become members of a committee to receive Roosevelt upon his arrival Wednesday at 7:30 a. m., over the Missouri Pacific from Kansas City. Reynolds said last evening that he had as yet received no replies from the persons asked to act upon the committee, excepting from Chauncey I. Filley, former Mayor, who said that he might not be able to go to the station, but he would be at the breakfast.

Reynolds had received word from Roosevelt two days ago that he probably would be able to stop over in St. Louis, but he was asked not to announce definite arrangements until positive assurance of the stopover was received.

Reception Program.

7:30 a. m.—Roosevelt met at Union Station by a nonpartisan committee made up of Republicans, Democrats and Progressives.

8:30 a. m.—Breakfast at the Planters Hotel. Everyone who wishes to pay $1.50 for breakfast is invited. Roosevelt will speak.

10 a. m.—Public reception at the Planters Hotel.

12:30 p. m.—Luncheon at the Mercantile Club, where Roosevelt will be the guest of the club and of the Business Men's League. The dining room will be decorated with moose-heads and flowers.

1:15 p. m.—Roosevelt will speak at the City Club.

3 p. m.—Roosevelt will speak at the American League Baseball park.

5 p. m.—Roosevelt leaves the city for the East. He may stop at Indianapolis on his way to New York.

Reynolds said last night that while he has been acting as chairman of the committee to receive Roosevelt, some St. Louisan, not active in politics, probably will be named as chairman of the day.

Missouri Moosers Confident Republicans Will Name Roosevelt at Chicago.

The confidence of Missouri Bull Moose leaders that Col. Roosevelt will be nominated for President by the Republicans at Chicago has not been shaken by the recent decided trend towards Justice Hughes.

Roosevelt and Fairbanks—the ticket of 1904—is the plan upon which the Bull Moosers expect to see the two parties unite at Chicago. The Republican delegates of Missouri are being felt out, and the Progressives believe at least 18 of the 36 Republican delegates from this State would vote for Roosevelt for President, with the understanding that Fairbanks should be the nominee for Vice President.

The fact that former United States Senator William Warner, a standpatter, is chairman of the Kansas City Reception Committee, which will entertain Col. Roosevelt during his visit to Kansas City this week, and that former Gov. Hadley is vice chairman, is regarded by the Bull Moose leaders as an indication that Republicans are ready to treat with the Colonel.

The Bull Moose leaders say that they will not accept Justice Hughes as a candidate for President; that if the Republicans should offer him he would be rejected, and the Progressive convention would nominate Roosevelt. The Progressives seem to think that Roosevelt would draw to his support in November all of the 4,219,000 voters who supported him four years ago.

They argue that as Roosevelt polled nearly 1,000,000 more votes than Taft, they are entitled to dictate the terms upon which the two parties should be amalgamated, if there is to be an amalgamation. They have made it clear to the Republicans that they will amalgamate only if the Colonel is made the joint candidate of the two parties.

While there is some doubt in the minds of Republican leaders that Roosevelt can be elected, even with the two parties united, the Bull Moosers believe that the eagerness of the Republicans to win in many State and local elections would make them willing to accept him. The Missouri Republicans have been working for two years to unite the two parties, and they realise that unless the Republicans and Progressives get together at Chicago next month there will not be the slightest chance to elect any Republican State official, or a Republican United States Senator. With the Progressives and Republicans united, the Republican leaders believe they can elect a United States Senator, and their entire State ticket.

Judge Albert D. Nortoni, who will be the Progressive party candidate for United States Senator unless there is an amalgamation of the Republican and Progressive parties, will depart tonight for Kansas City to meet Roosevelt. He was made a member of the Kansas City reception committee, and will travel across the State with the Colonel. He is also a member of the St. Louis reception committee.

GEN. GALLIENI TO HAVE A NATIONAL FUNERAL IN PARIS

Former War Minister Known as Savior of Paris; Started Battle of Marne.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, May 27.—Gen. Joseph S. Gallieni, former Minister of War, died at Versailles today.

The Cabinet decided this morning to arrange a national funeral for Gen. Gallieni, and, subject to the approval of the family, to transfer the body to the Hotel des Invalides, which contains the tomb of Napoleon.

The death of Gen. Gallieni, while not unexpected, created a profound sorrow, as he was idolized by the French people, particularly the poor, who regarded him as the savior of Paris during the critical days of August, 1914. His funeral will be the occasion of a notable military and civil demonstration.

On Aug. 27, 1914, with the Germans threatening Paris, he was given the important post of commander of the entrenched camp and Military Governor of Paris. The question of declaring Paris an open town was seriously discussed at that time. The departure of the Government for Bordeaux created a great deal of uneasiness and all those who were in the capital at the time recall the feeling of relief and revival of confidence following the posting of Gallieni's proclamation in which he declared: "I have received the mission of defending Paris against the invader; I shall accomplish that mission to the end."

At once his organizing ability and energy were shown. In a few days the city was surrounded by new field fortifications, heavy artillery was posted at all vantage points, a complete system of telephonic and telegraphic communication was established around the city.

The part he played in the Battle of the Marne is partly known; how on a Sunday, while Von Kluck's lightning-like advance was progressing he sent 50,000 men of the troops of the army of Paris, in taxi motor cars, across the town, out to the spot where Gen. Maunoury was assembling his army and brought his forces up to a strength that enabled him to fall upon Von Kluck's flank protection and start the great victory of the Marne.

Gallieni was born of a military family at St. Beat, April 24, 1849. He had reached the age limit for retirement in 1913, but was maintained in active service by decree, the Minister of War holding that the services he had rendered as Governor-General of Madagascar justified an exception generally made only in favor of Generals who have held a supreme command in the face of the enemy.

SIMPSON BREAKS WORLD'S RECORD IN HIGH HURDLE

Missouri U. Star Covers 120-Yards in 14 3-5 Seconds, at Valley Conference Meet—Ties Low-Hurdle Mark.

A. A. U. PROBABLY WILL NOT SANCTION TIME

One Watch, That Held by Bender, Catches Him at 15 Flat — Tigers Capture Meet With 49 Points.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 27.—Bob Simpson of the University of Missouri broke one world's record, tied another and won three firsts in the ninth annual Missouri Valley Conference meet here this afternoon. Missouri won the meet with 49 points. Washington University of St. Louis scored no points.

Simpson's official time in the 120-yard high hurdles was 14 3-5 seconds, which is a fifth of a second better than he ran over the high sticks in the Ames and Kansas dual meets. Of the five timers, two caught him at 14 2-5 seconds, two at 14 3-5, and one, John Bender of the Kansas State College, at 15 seconds. This last time will perhaps mar any attempt to get the record sanctioned by the A. A. U., but was announced as a new conference record.

Surprises in Low Hurdle.

The hurdlers' biggest surprise came in the 220-yard low hurdles, which he negotiated in the time of 23 3-5 seconds, equalling the world's standard. The last time this record was equalled was when Kraenzlein of Pennsylvania, did it in 1898. This time was 4-5 of second faster than Simpson has ever run it, and it is thought that it is the first time he has ever extended himself.

He won the broad jump with a leap of 22 feet 10 and 1-4 inches.

The track was heavy from a hard rain of several hours preceding the meet. There was no wind. The timers were G. S. Lowman, H. A. Collier, John Bender, H. L. Kempster and W. A. Tarr. In the high hurdles Packer of Ames ran close to Simpson all the way, finishing but two yards behind.

Kansas finished second in the meet with 23 points, Ames third with 22½, Drake fourth with 13 points, Nebraska fifth with 10 points, Grinnell sixth with 10, Kansas State seventh with 6, Simpson eighth with 5 and Fairmount ninth with 4½ points.

The condition of the track was thought to be responsible for the failure of Hoyt of Grinnell to tie or break the conference record in the 100-yards and the 220-yards dash. He took first in both events, however, with times of 10 1-5s. and 22 1-5s.

Tigers Land Five Firsts.

The Tigers won five firsts and tied for two more. Besides Simpson's three firsts, Warren won the discus throw with a heave of 124 ft. and 3 in., and Daggy won the quarter mile run in 50 3-5s.

In the pole vault Powell of Missouri and Pattison of Kansas tied for first, height 11 ft. 9 in. In the high jump Pittam of Missouri tied with Frizzell, of the Kansas Aggies, at 5 ft. 11 in., ¾ of an inch short of the Valley record.

In the mile relay, the only three entrants were disqualified for fouling. The cup was given to Missouri, however, for first place. Kansas finished second and the Kansas Aggies third.

Upsets in the dope occurred when Daft of Simpson won the two-mile event in remarkbly fast time for the conference; when Reber of Kanss failed to win the shot put; when Rider of Missouri finished second in the half mile run and Keys of the Kansas Aggies won it and when Kansas failed to place in the quarter and half mile events.

Kansas suffered some bad luck. Their star in the quarter mile, O'Leary, booked for first or second, fell down before he had gone quarter of a lap, and Rodkey, a sure winner, suffered a like fate in the half mile run.

Kansas Has Bad Luck.

C. E. McBride of Kansas City was referee and starter.

The Washington men who competed were Pemberton and McSorley, who failed to qualify in the 100-yard dash; Brady who did not place in the half mile, and Shepard, who qualified, but did not place in the broad jump. McSorley also qualified but did not place in the broad jump.

Summary:

One-mile run—Hawthorne (Ames), first; Sproul (Kansas), second; Gableman (Missouri), third; Overman (Nebraska), fourth. Time, 4m. 29 3-5s.

FITZGIBBON AND C. PANGMAN ARE WINNERS AT GOLF

Former Lands Spring Title at Normandie, While Latter Takes Algonquin Honors.

Two spring-time golf champions were crowned on local links yesterday afternoon. Although Mr. J. Pluvius tried his hardest, he was foiled in his attempt to keep from Frank Fitzgibbon and C. C. Pangman the honors which were in store for them. Fitzgibbon won the championship of the Normandie Country Club by defeating Dr. J. B. Rule, 2 up and 1, while Pangman assumed supremacy over Algonquin stickers by defeating F. O. Hale, 5 and 4. Both matches were started out after the downpour and although the links were soft the medal scores were quite commendable.

Ralph S. Rhodes won the Class B trophy at Normandie by defeating J. B. Holley. George Gilpin scored a finals victory over H. R. Leudinghaus, but was compelled to play the twentieth green before he was declared victor. The Class D title went to J. P. Middleton after a 2 and 1 win over C. D. Chesbro.

The spring tourney of the Midland Valley Country Club also got as far as the finals round, when Frank Canter and Oliver Smith won their semi-finals matches. The two victors will play on Wednesday or Thursday for the championship. Canter won over W. H. Whitten, 1 up, while E. A. Eaton went down to defeat before Smith by the same score.

The class A semi-finals were won by Richard Taylor and W. H. Parsons, the former defeating J. W. Brown, 4 and 3, while J. W. Jamison went down before Parsons, 3 and 2. Harry B. Ink won from T. Bulfin, 7 and 6, in one match of the class B semi-finals, while J. S. Mills won the other match in this class.

The qualifying round of the spring tourney of the Municipal Golf Association was postponed until next Saturday and Sunday, because of the soggy condition in which the public course was left after yesterday's downpour. It is also announced that the annual spring tournament for women who traverse the free links will be started on Thursday with the qualifying round. Entries for the tourney will be received at the municipal clubhouse.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 27.—Four more drivers qualified today for the sixth annual international sweepstakes which is to be run on the Indianapolis motor speedway May 30. Rain stopped the trials late in the afternoon and it was arranged for the eight drivers who still hope to start to make their trials tomorrow. They must average 80 miles an hour for a lap of the track. Fourteen have qualified.

COLLEGIATE CONTESTS ARE STOPPED BY RAIN

High School Field and Brock's Park were in such soggy condition following the rains of yesterday morning and noon, as to necessitate the postponing of the baseball games between the Soldan and Cleveland High School nines and the Concordia Seminary teams of this city and of Springfield, Ill. The dates on which the games will be played have not as yet been announced.

New Records in S. A. A. U.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 27.—Dana Jenkins of Louisiana University set a new all-Southern record in the Southern Amateur Athletic Union senior championship meet today by winning the 220-yard dash in 21 2-5 seconds, one-fifth second less than the A. A. U. dash in 21 2-5 seconds. He ran under the colors of the Young Men's Gymnasic Club of New Orleans, which won the meet with 108 points.

Jenkins also lowered the Southern Union's record for the 440-yard run by winning in 49 3-5 seconds. W. F. Ryan of the Catholic Athletic Association of New Orleans beat his former Southern Union record for the javelin throw with a mark of 159 feet ¾ inch.

PHILS WILL BEAT OUT M'GRAW'S MEN, HUGGINS ASSERTS

Alexander, Backed by Reliable Playing, Form Principal Assets of Moran.

By W. J. O'Connor.

Beginning at 1:30 p. m. today, the Cardinals and Corsairs will perpetrate the first double-header that has been seen here since the good old days of the Federal League. This afternoon's festivities will be abruptly ended at 5 o'clock to allow the Pirates time to catch a fast train for Smoketown where they are scheduled to play a game Monday with the Reds.

Yesterday's game was postponed because of rain. However, the diamond, in spite of the downpour, was as dry as the State of Kansas, having been wrapped over night in that $1500 canvas cover. Said canvas was removed only for a brief spell and when last seen was again covering the entire infield like Hornsby covers third. Some covering.

Manager Huggins was loath to approve the cancellation of yesterday's game because he figured that James John Callahan had nothing up his sleeve but his elbow. Cal used up Harmon and Mamaux in Friday's frolic, leaving only Adams available yesterday. Kanlehner, a southpaw, who has been troublesome for the Cards, is laid up with a sore wrist and will not work here.

For the bargain bill today, Huggins intends to use Spittin' Bill Doak in the first portion with Lee Meadows in the final. Adams probably will go for the Pirates with either Harmon or Mamaux in the afterpiece.

Huggins Likes Philadelphia.

After the game had been rubbed out yesterday, Miller Huggins, assisted by Bob Connery, entertained in the grand stand. One of the many things discussed was baseball. After Huggins had taken the stand and adjusted his tobacco behind his eyetooth, the attorney for the prosecution opened this:

"Well, Hug, you've seen 'em all, so what do you think of the league race?"

"Still like Philadelphia," said Huggins.

"Why?"

"Well, they've got Alexander, and I believe Alex will win as many games this season as Tesreau and Perritt or Tesreau and Mathewson combined. Then they have a seasoned ball club, one that has been through the fire, and will be consistent throughout the season, just as they were last year. It isn't a flashy team but it will always be up there playing good ball."

"How about New York?"

"If they keep up their present batting stride they'll win; but who expects them to bat for a year like they have been batting for the past two weeks? It isn't 'on' for them to do it. If they do, then the dope is shot to pieces again. Figuring them to come back to a normal hitting stride, I thing the race will devolve into a fight where the consistent team will win. The Phils are going to be consistent. Alexander is good for 30 or 35 victories. Never a long losing streak with him in there. I dont fancy Boston this season. They haven't the pep and the outfield punch that they had when they were winning."

Very good, Eddie.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Prof. William V. Pooley of Northwestern University, chairman of the Board of Football Officials for the Western Intercollegiate Conference, has announced an informal meeting of coaches and officials at the conference at Evanston, June 2. The purpose of the meeting is announced as discussion of the code and was called at the request of several coaches who desired a thorough understanding of the rules as they will be interpreted this fall.

GIANTS MAKE IT 16 STRAIGHT BY TAKING 2 GAMES

McGraw's Gang Defeats Braves 4—3 and 2—1 and Moves to Second Place.

Giants' Winning Streak Is Longest in Four Seasons

WHEN the Giants yesterday won both ends of a twin bill from the Braves by scores of 4—3 and 2—1, they brought their winning streak up to 16 in a row, the longest enjoyed by any club in the majors since 1912, when Clark Griffith's Nationals copped 17 straight. Capturing both contests yesterday sent McGraw's clan to second place.

The Gotham crew started in its winning streak on May 9, when Pittsburg was downed 13—5. Since then the Giants have taken four from the Corsairs, two from Chicago, four from the Cardinals, three from Cincinnati and three from the Braves.

Prior to the start of this sensational run, McGraw's bunch was last with 2—13, eight and one-half games behind the leaders and four games out of seventh place. Now they are just one and one-half games behind the Superbas. The point gain during this time is .448.

This is the longest winning streak the Giants have enjoyed since 1904, when they landed 18 in a row. The National League record was set in 1884, when Providence, then in the circuit, landed 20. The White Sox, under Fielder Jones, in 1906, set the A. L. mark at 19.

BOSTON, May 27.—New York made it 16 straight victories by defeating Boston in two games today, 4 to 3 and 2 to 1. Up to the eighth inning of the opening game, the local team had little opportunity for scoring, but in that session Gowdy singled and Connolly, batting for Allen did likewise. Maranville sacrificed and after Evers had popped to Fletcher Collins hit to Merkle, who made a good stop, but threw wild to Anderson at first base and two runs came in, tieing the score. In the ninth inning Robertson singled and went to second on Compton's fumble. Doyle flied to Collins and Kauff was purposely passed. Fletcher drove in the winning run with a single to left.

In the second game Ragan held New York to five hits all of which were for extra bases, and the two runs scored were both earned. Benton kept the Boston hits well scattered until the eighth when the bases were filled with none out. A double play followed, Maranville scoring while it was being made. Score:

Ted Meredith Shatters Sprint Record That Had Stood Test of 16 Years

Famous Pennsylvania Athlete, in Final Race as Collegian, Runs 440-Yard Dash in :47 2-5, Clipping 2-5 of a Second Off Maxey Long's Mark.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 27.

CORNELL won the intercollegiate track and field championship in the Harvard Stadium here this afternoon for the third consecutive year . Trainer Jack Moakley's athletes piled up a total of 45 points to Yale's 29, while the two Pacific Coast universities, Stanford and California, tied for third place with 22 each.

The ability of the Californians is attested by the fact that, with small squads, they outranked Pennsylvania which scored 18 points, Dartmouth with 14, Michigan 12, Harvard 11, Princeton 10, Bowdoin 5, Syracuse 3, Pennsylvania State 2 and Massachusetts' Institute of Technology 1.

The victory of the Cornell team was far more impressive than a year ago, for the field of entrants today was the best that ever has assembled to compete for I. C. A. A. A. A. titles. Two intercollegiate records and one world's record were broken.

Capt. J. E. P. (Ted) Meredith of the Pennsylvania team, was the individual hero. The famous Olympic, national and intercollegiate champion closed his track career as a collegian by winning the 440-yard dash in 47 2-5 seconds, which is a new world's record around a turn.

The previous time, made by M. W. K. (Maxey) Long in 1900, was 47 4-5 seconds. About an hour later Meredith raced home first in the half-mile run, winning from a sterling group in 1 minute 53 seconds which was 2-5 of a second faster than the intercollegiate record made by D. S. Caldwell of Cornell on the same track two years ago.

Capt. F. S. Murray of Stanford won the 120-yard high hurdles in 15s. flat, thus clipping 1-5s. from the former record made by A. B. Shaw of Dartmouth in 1908.

The Stanford star made the same time, in his trial heat yesterday, but a record was not allowed on account of the stiff wind at his back.

R. Bush Defeats Heard and Wins Southern Tit'e

Youngster Beats 60-Year-Old Veteran, 1 Up in 36-Hole Final Match.

DALLAS, Tex., May 27.—Youth and ability to putt won the championship of the Southern Golf Association here today for Reuben G. Bush Jr. of the New Orleans Country Club. He defeated Bryan Heard of Houston for the title, 1 up in 36 holes.

Heard played Bush as a younger man might have played him. Heard is more than 60 years old, but during the afternoon missed what appeared to be several easy putts, which cost him the title. Bush did not play up to the brilliant form that had been expected.

There was a large gallery, which at times seemed to bother the New Orleans man. Once a hat blew across the green just as he was about to putt, and he missed. At another time, the Texans applauded when Bush missed a putt which would have sent him ahead, and that seemed to rankle also. H. F. Smith of Nashville, Tenn., president of the association, who followed the full course of the match, warned the spectators and the demonstrations ceased.

Bush was 2 up when the afternoon round started. He took 5 holes of the afternoon round. Heard won 6 and the others were halved.

DILLON-GUNBOAT SMITH BOUT WILL BE STOPPED

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 27.—Sheriff George V. Coffin announced this afternoon that the Jack Dillon-Gunboat Smith prizefight, planned for next Monday night, would not be permitted.

This followed the action of Judge T. J. Moll in modifying, at the request of Prosecutor A. J. Rucker, the restraining order, making it effective until further order of the Court, instead of expiring at 9 o'clock Monday morning, which probably would have permitted the holding of the fight.

The fight was promoted as an attraction for visitors in the city for the automobile race to be staged at the Indianapolis motor speedway on the following day.

BERRY'S HOMER HELPS PENN DEFEAT CORNELL

ITHACA, N. Y., May 27.—Penna defeated Cornell in an exciting 15-inning game here this afternoon by the score of 5 to 3, Berry breaking up the game in the fifteenth inning by a home run drive, scoring Kane ahead of him. Cornell scored two runs in the first inning on a force and a long fly by Valentine. In the third Smith singled and Bennis drove a home run over center field track, tying the score. The Ithacans again took the lead in the fifth when Mellen scored from third on a long fly by O'Connell. The score then remained tied until the fifteenth when Berry won the game.

Cornell Varsity Crew Is Winner Over Princeton

Yale Is Hopelessly Outclassed in Triangular Race on Cayuga Lake.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 27.—In the most thrilling race ever rowed on Cayuga Lake, the Cornell varsity eight defeated the oarsmen of Princeton by a scant three feet this afternoon with Yale a hopeless third.

The victory of the Ithacans was all tho more spectacular because the crew which won was classed almost until the eve of the regatta as the third 'varsity. It took the place of the eight which was defeated the week before by Harvard.

Cornell's new crew rowed as follows: Bow, Fitzpatrick; 2, Lytle; 3, Moir, 4, Bonney; 5, Kirkland; 6, Brinckerhoff; 7, Cown; stroke, Kingsland; coxswain, Kephart.

Although Yale led at the quarter mile in the freshman race, the Cornell youngsters pulled away steadily from that point on and won by a length and a half from Yale, with Princeton a poor third.

The time in the varsity race was: Cornell 11:21 1-5; Princeton 11:23 1-5; Yale 11:43 1-5.

The time of the Freshman race was: Cornell 11:27 3-5; Yale 11:32 4-5; Princeton 11:58 1-5.

ST. LOUIS IS AWARDED BIG AUTOMOBILE MEET

DETROIT, Mich., May 27.—St. Louis was today awarded the third International Grand Circuit Automobile Race meet, by George W. Dickinson, president of the International Motor Contest Association. Cleveland was originally awarded the race meet, but it was called off on account of several of the drivers going to Indianapolis.

The St. Louis mile track is already credited with two official world's marks and with an automatic timing device and with at least 12 cars entered and five drivers who hold official records.

Morearty With 14 Points Stars as Central Captures Valley High School Meet

KANSAS CITY, May 27.—Central High School of Omaha, Neb., with 41 points won the seventeenth annual Missouri Valley interscholastic track and field meet here today. Central High, of St. Joseph, Mo., was the nearest competitor with 35 points. Other scores were: Kansas City, Kan., high school 25; Manual Training High School, Kansas City, Mo., 24; Lincoln, Neb., high school 7.

Morearty, the Omaha captain, was the individual star scoring fourteen points for his team. He took first in the 220 yard dash, second in the 100 yard dash, third in the broad jump and tied for first in the high jump.

Following closely on Morearty's heels was Barrett Castle of St. Joseph. His efforts totaled thirteen points, the little Blue and White Flyer, running his last race for his school, taking first in the 100 yard dash, first in the broad jump and second in the 220 yard low hurdles.

Because of a soft track the distances were shortened.

WEILMAN WEAKENS IN SECOND ROUND; BROWNS LOSE, 3-1

Former Tiger Tamer Pitches Good Game, Except for One Inning, When Detroit Hitters Thump Him for Four Safeties.

BOTH SIDES PUT ON BRILLIANT FIELDING

Double-Header, Scheduled for Yesterday Afternoon, Is Cut to Single Contest—Only 3659 See Saturday's Battle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., May 27.—The St. Louis Browns were plunged farther into the depths this afternoon, as the Detroit Tigers broke their long losing streak by winning a 3-to-1 victory. A double-header had been scheduled for today, but rain prevented the first game, and the bargain bill will be Monday's offering.

The American League will never see a more spectacular game of ball than the one the Browns lost today. The field was slow, but the defensive work of both clubs was beautiful. Neither Coveleskie nor Wellman, the opposing flingers, was hit unusually hard, but there were many drives that were hard to reach because of the slippery turf, and the manner in which both outfields did their reaching had the crowd of 3659 faithful fans nearly crazy.

Shotton was the first player to spring the sensational stuff, hauling down line drives by Vitt, Cobb and Stanage in the first two innings. Veach and Cobb immediately staged their little fielding show, and then Miller took the spot-light with some wonderfully fine catches. Burns starred with his work on some high fouls and both infields repeatedly pulled the bugs to their feet by their excellent work.

Both Coveleskie and Wellman pitched fine ball. Neither issued a base on balls or hit a batsman, and with the exception of one wobbly inning—the second—for the Browns southpaw, the crooked arm flinging was well-night perfect. Strangely enough, there was no sacrifice hitting of any sort. Few attempts were made at base-stealing, because of the slowness of the paths, and none of them was successful.

Fluke Hit Nets a Score.

Detroit won the game in the second inning, which Heilman opened with a triple to left center. Burns scored Harry with as woozy a single as could be imagined. He apparently was attempting the squeeze play and he poked at a low ball. The Brownie infield closed in quickly, and what was nothing more or less than an unusually long fly bunt, sneaked over Johnson's head and rolled into left. Heilman registered on the play.

Young forced Burns on the only attempt to sacrifice during the game, Wellman making a nice play at second.

Coveleskie bounced a single off Wellman's glove and Johnson was unable to field it in time for a play. Bush thereupon thumped a single through the box into center, and Young scored.

There was no more tallying for the Tigers until the eighth, when Veach drove a ball past Marsans for a home run. The ball rolled slowly, after it hit the turf, and took its time bounding off the bleacher wall back to Marsans. The Cuban might have headed off Bobby at the plate, but his throw to Johnson was none too good and the Tiger then had easy sailing.

Sisler Drives in Run.

The Browns did all their scoring in the first inning when, with two out, Austin drove a double to left center. Sisler came through with a resounding thump that sent a single across the keystone sack, and Jimmy ran home.

Austin really was the hero of the day. He gave his club the only other real scoring chance that came St. Louis' way. In the seventh again, with two out, he tripled to right center. Sisler failed, this time, and left the peppery veteran to languish on the hot corner. Austin also turned in some fielding that was more than acceptable.

Austin also was responsible for the only misplay of the game, and strangely enough, it was the first play of the game. Bush banged a blistering grounder off Jimmy's shins. The infielder recovered, however, in plenty of time for a play, only to throw low and wide to first. This gave the Jungaleers their first scoring chance; but Donie never budged off first.

Double Bill on Monday.

Three more games remain of the present series. One will be played Sunday and two Monday. Wellman seemingly has lost the jinx with which he used to wallop the Tigers. He has started in three games against the jungle tribe, now, and has been defeated in all of them. In the last two there was nothing wrong with his pitching, however. In each game his club gave him only one run, while detroit turned in two the first time and three this time.

Earl Hamilton reported to Manager Jones today, expecting to work in one game of the advertised double-header. The southpaw warmed up, and may start Sunday.

BOBBY ANDERSON AND JIM HANLON TO BATTLE AGAIN

Boys Who Furnished Such a Good Fight Last Week Will Show Here Tuesday.

OUTDOOR BOUTS ASSURED

Future City A. C. Will Introduce Friends to New Home on South Side Monday.

By Harry S. Sharpe.

Referee for the Future City Athletic Club and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

Bobby Anderson and Jimmy Hanlon have been re-matched for next Tuesday night at the Future City Athletic Club. It is a just reward for the splendid entertainment they afforded last week and enables Mr. Tommy Sullivan to afford his patrons another evening of pleasureable excitement.

These boxers are fearless, ambitious and enduring. It was a pleasure last week to note the suppleness of their well-conditioned bodies and the easy play of their muscles. Compared with some of the bloated, short-winded and dull-skinned men which have occasionally appeared in the local ring Anderson and Hanlon looked like the firm, ripe, healthy-colored August peach.

Because nothing much was known of Hanlon, the bout last week did not smack of any particular significance, but it developed such an excellent contest that the spectators readily conceded it to be one of the best seen before the club. There was action, and plenty of it, in every round, and it is remarkable the wonderful endurance with which the boxers assimilated the punishment inflicted by hard blows to the face and body.

For next Tuesday night the weight agreed upon between Anderson and Hanlon has been placed at 133 pounds at 6 p. m., and a cash deposit of $25 by each has been posted to insure it. The bout will be for eight rounds.

Anderson's Rise Rapid.

Anderson was not introduced to the boxing fans of St. Louis until last October, coming here then as a green fighter and boxing the semi-final to the Benny Palmer and Louis Reese match. His opponent on that occasion was Leo Witt, and Anderson was defeated. It was the only defeat he has sustained in this city. Following is his remarkable record here:

Date.	Opponent.	Result.	Rounds.

Commission May Be Formed.

A call has been issued by the Future City Athletic Club for a meeting of sport writers at Meramec Park, Meramec street and Grand avenue, at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow (Monday) evening. Dinner will be served at 7 o'clock.

Aside from introducing the sport writers to the new summer home of the Future City A. C., the meeting is called for the purpose of receiving suggestions and discussing plans for the betterment of conditions under which boxing is maintained in St. Louis. To this end boxing promoters and representatives of athletic clubs which include boxing in their list of entertainments have been invited to attend.

Among other things, it is hoped that a plan of co-operation can be worked out among the clubs that will enable them to assist each other in promoting matches and avoid conflicting dates and monopoly of boxers.

It has been suggested that a volunteer boxing commission be constituted. That is, that the promoters of the clubs in this city select three representative citizens who are patrons of boxing who will serve as a commission before which disputes and complaints may come for adjustment and such matters, suggestions, etc., as will tend to the betterment of the sport.

Of course, such a commission will have no legal standing and no authority beyond that given it by those who are willing to co-operate with it. It will be nothing more than a "gentlemen's agreement," but this should amount to a great deal if the parties to the agreement co-operate in an earnest manner and lay aside personal bickering, animosity and jealousy.

Any club, promoter, boxer or official who wished to do so could, of course, ignore the rulings of the commission, but if that body performs its duty in an impartial manner and is supported by the majority of clubs and the press it would be rather hard going for anyone who sought to override its reasonable recommendations.

MULLEN FORFEITS GAME TO WICHITA OUTFIT

SIOUX CITY, Io., May 27.—Umpire Mullen forfeited today's game to Wichita in the ninth with the score 9 to 7 in favor of that club. The action came when the Sioux City manager refused to allow his men to take the field unless the other umpire was removed, claiming he was not in physical condition to officiate. The umpires were attended by the spectators as police reserves escorted them from the grounds. Score:

Punch-in-the-Pinch Keeps Cleveland in Pennant Hunt

Roth, Gandil, Graney and Speaker Lead the League in Driving Tallies Across the Plate and in Advancing Runners—Johnson Leads for the Brownies.

THE felicitous facility with which four Cleveland players—Roth, Graney, Gandil and Speaker—have punished the pill in the pinch explains why the present standing of the American League clubs looks like an upside-down edition of what the pre-season prohpets had pictured for the fans.

Averages just published and made to include all the games up to May 24, show that this quartet of horsehide assassins are pre-eminent in the American League. They have "delivered" more times in the pinch than any others in the league. Gandil, for instance, leads in driving in runs, having hammered home 26. However, in this new efficiency record, the batter is given credit for advancing runners from base to base and Roth excels Gandil in this department.

Ernie Johnson tops the Brownies, although Johnson hasn't played in as many games as the leaders. However, Ernie went to bat 32 times with men on and he has driven home nine runs, while he advanced runners for a total of 21 bases.

Real Light on Base Stealers.

Another interesting feature of these new averages is the column which shows the percentage of steals. From this we learn, for instance, that Marsans has essayed a steal 16 times and succeeded in nine of his attempts. Sisler has succeeded nine times in 19 attempts. Cobb "went down" 13 times and reached his goal on eight different occasions. Old Terry Turner succeeded eight out of 11 attempts, while Jack Graney of the Naps was flagged only twice in eight tries.

In the following table, the first column, FP., indicates how many times the batter "faced the pitcher," with the "bases occupied," which is shown in Column No. 2. Runs driven in (RDI) are then shown, followed by "runners advanced." The percentage is found by dividing the combined third and fourth columns by the total found in the second column. "AS" stands for attempted steal, the last column showing the number of successful steals.

SPORT SALAD BY T. C. Davis

His Willow.

ON a bench in a ball yard a ball player sat
With his willow, his willow, his willow;
Said I to that ballplayer, "What do you bat
With your willow, your willow, your willow?"
With a sob and a sigh that young busher replied:
"I am having a slump, there's a stitch in my side,
But I'll pickle that pill when I'm back on my stride
With my willow, my willow, my willow."

He made up his mind that some noise he'd create
With his willow, his willow, his willow:
So he hitched up his trousers and strolled to the plate
With his willow, his willow, his willow
That youth was determined the pellet to kill,
So he hammered the plate with a royal good will,
But he just couldn't manage to hammer the pill
With his willow, his willow, his willow.

He couldn't get on to the major league tricks
With his willow, his willow, his willow,
So he packed up his grip and went back to the sticks
With his willow, his willow, his willow
Now he's leading his league in a class double Q
Where he wallops the pill for .402—
In fact he is raising a hullabaloo
With his willow, his willow, his willow

Easy.

IN spite of his excess baggage, Wilbert can still do his hundred in even time—10 minutes flat.

Robbie is not very strong, though, at the pole vault or running high jump.

Abe Attell wants to box Benny Leonard 10 rounds. His only stipulation is that the rounds be cut to a minute and a half. Which is quite some stipulation.

• • •

If Abe could box for three minutes without getting tired he would be as good as he ever was.

• • •

Wasted Speed.

DOUGLAS BAIRD beat Hickory Bob Harmon in a 100-yard sprint race in Pittsburg the other day. Bob and Doug are fast boys. But the Pirates are still running last.

Roger Bresnahan turned down Branch Rickey's offer to sell him a couple of Browns. Were they that bad?

There is no truth in the rumor that Lord Byron has been engaged to sing in "Siegfried" at the Robison Field open-air grand opera festival.

Questions and Answers.

How do you pronounce Youghiogheny?—Dick Chinery.

I don't pronounce it.

How old is Miller Huggins?—Nosey.

Ask him yourself.

Who is the best umpire in either league?—O. U. Skinner.

There is no such animal.

Who is the greatest player, Tris Speaker or Ty Cobb?—I. Gottit.

A great many think so, while others think the other way. Personally we think there is no doubt about it.

How do you remove grease spots from green paint?—E. Raser.

What do you think this is, a "Household Hints" colyum?

The Uplift.

CONNIE MACK has released Shortstop Crane. Shortstop Derrick, however, is still trying to lift Indianapolis up in the race.

It is now conceded that Wilbert Robinson has a fat chance to cop the pennant.

We may have said that before. But our circulation is increasing so rapidly that there are probably thousands of new readers who didn't see it.

Barge Race for Block Trophy Is Today's Feature

St. Louis Rowing Club Is Fourth in Local Harbor to Stage Revival Event.

The fourth of the local rowing clubs will stage its revival day races this afternoon, when the St. Louis Rowing Club will stage its forty-first annual opening day program. The feature event will be an open barge race of 1½ miles downstream for the Senator Ed Block trophy. Western, North End and Mound City are the other clubs in the local harbor that have staged their revival events.

Every club here is expected to enter one or more crews in today's event. These revival day races are good training for the paddle-tippers in preparation for the Central States and Southwestern regattas to be staged during July.

While St. Louis last season had the champion crew here, the Chouteau avenue outfit has done nothing startling this season. Western, North End and Century have been returned winners in the races held to date. Johnny Lang, who is coaching the St. Louis oarsmen, expects to have a good crew before the season is many more weeks old. The absence of Rud Rietschie, the club's coxswain, has been a severe blow.

Lang wants to develop a good junior barge crew with the idea of again cleaning up at the Central States. For the past four years the junior crew of St. Louis has captured leading honors.

The race this afternoon is scheduled to start at 4 o'clock.

KAYSING FAVORED TO WIN 10-MILE RUN NEXT SUNDAY

Tangled C Star Picked to Fight It Out With Probst, Mathews and Biel.

C. A. C. IS AFTER MEET

Willing to Pay Expenses and Buy Medals for Western A. A. U. Championships.

Four runners—Jake Kaysing, John Probst and Bill Mathews of the C. A. C. and Irvin Biel of the M. A. A.—are expected to fight it out next Sunday for leading laurels in the annual 10-mile run to be staged by the Columbian A. C. This quartet, without a doubt, embraces the best distance men St Louis can boast of at the present time.

Biel won the annual cross-country jaunt of the Missouri A. A. several weeks ago and is picked by many to repeat in the Tangled C grind next Sunday. But C. A. C. contingent, especially Coach Paddy Fitzgerald, figures Biel will have his hands full against the trio of South Siders.

The runner the Tangled C followers are relying upon most is Jake Kaysing. This boy is one of the best distance men in the city. He has copped nearly all the races from 11 to 15 miles, staged hereabouts, and also has copped his share of five milers. But only once has he been able to show the field home over the 10-mile route. That was two years ago, when he copped one of the M. A. A. grinds over that distance.

Kaysing Is Favorite.

Kaysing has been training faithfully every night for the past few weeks and is in great condition for the event. Probst, Mathews and the other Tangled C entrants are in shape. Burns, Edwards and Luxum will be other starters for the Tangled C.

"All my boys are in good shape," said Fitzgerald yesterday afternoon. "They are out to win and they are fighting each other all the time. That's the spirit I like, though, and there are going to be some lively doings when that race is held next Sunday."

Besides Biel, the Cherry Diamond will be represented by the Bantle brothers and Henry Levinson.

The route for the race is as follows: Start at C. A. C. clubhouse at 3 o'clock, west on Utah to Spring, north on Spring to Arsenal, west on Arsenal to King's highway, north on King's highway to Magnolia, east on Magnolia to Grand, north on Grand to Sidney, east on Sidney to Seventh, south on Seventh to Cherokee and west on Cherokee to clubhouse.

Want A. A. U. Title Meet.

Whenever the officials of the Western District of the A. A. U. get together to decide on what date the Western championships shall be decided the C. A. C. is willing to stage the meet. This was the announcement made yesterday by Fitzgerald.

"We are willing to foot all the expenses of the athletes, buy the medals if we are allowed the gate receipts," said Fitzgerald. "We will be in shape to hold the events the latter part of August on our new field. It is now up to the officials of the A. A. U. to decide on the date."

What's more, Fitzgerald is confident that his athletes will again land the championship. He has Irwin Mahl, Gus Aronson and several other stars to shoot against the others, who will participate in the events.

Cornell Is Looking for Rowing Coach to Fill Place of Veteran Courtney

NEW YORK, May 27.—"There is a seemingly well-founded impression among Cornell men in this city that Charles E. Courtney will not attempt to serve even as titular head coach of the Cornell crews after this season, and that the rowing authorities at Ithaca have been looking about, at Courtney's suggestion for a man to succeed him in the active work of coaching. It is even said that one or two men have been approached with tentative propositions. In the meantime Courtney makes himself useful about the boathouse, but infrequently goes out with the crews and in large part the workout on the lakes is under the supervision of John Hoyle. It is perhaps because he could be with his men at all times that Courtney suggested the election of a captain at once, instead of 10 days before the Poughkeepsie race—in accordance with a decision made last summer. The coach's proposal was accepted, and John L. Collyer, the stroke, was elected as one of the best oars in the East. In his preparatory school days he stroked the Cascadilla School eight; he stroked the 1917 freshman boat and carried his varsity crew to victory on the Hudson last year. He is the son of a Cornell oarsman.

Alton Blues Make Debut in the Interstate League Against Belleville Today

The Alton Blues, admitted to the Interstate League, when Ed Brock of the Alpen Braus lost his franchise, will make their debut in the circuit at home this afternoon, when they are scheduled to tackle the Hustlers of Belleville. Alton is said to have a strong team and is expected to give a good account of itself. Belleville has captured its last two games by shutouts.

With the Hustlers away from home, the Ben Millers and Southerns, two traveling clubs, will furnish the attraction at the Belleville park.

Another home team, the Wabada outfit, is on the road. The former champions go to East St. Louis for a contest with Dick Slack's Giants. The Brockmeyers and Manewals will furnish the attraction at the C. B. C. campus.

Kansas Tennis Team Wins.

DES MOINES, Io., May 27.—Teachenor of Kansas today won the singles in the Missouri Valley tennis tournament, defeating Williams of Missouri in 6—1, 6—2, 6—1. Catt and Linn of Nebraska defeated Teachenor and Cowgill of Kansas in the doubles, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5, 0—6, 6—2. Kansas won the tournament with seven points. Missouri and Kansas tied for third.

Notre Dame Athletes Win.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., May 27.—Notre Dame's well-balanced track team won the Indiana Intercollegiate Association meet here today with 43¼ points. Purdue was second with 40. The others finished as follows: De Pauw, 20¼; Wabash, 20; Indiana, 14; and Franklin 5.

Rain Halts Big Nine Games.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Rain interfered with college sports here today. The baseball game between the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois was called in the third inning because of the downpour and probably will not be played. The tennis match between Becker, Illinois and Lindauer, Chicago, was postponed until Monday.

Campi Defeats Shubert.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Eddie Campi of San Francisco outfought Al Shubert of New Bedford, Mass., in a 10-round bout in Brooklyn tonight. Campi weighed 120 pounds and Shubert 122.

WRAY'S COLUMN

"Pennant or Bust" a Costly Slogan.

WHEN Phil Ball smashed his way through the major league fortifications for a permanent place in the citadel, he started out with the slogan: "Pennant or bust." Sitting on the outside, a-lookin' in, on the baseball arena, Phil gathered the notion that business brains plus a robust bankroll would accomplish anything.

Philip is a sadder and wiser, if none the less determined man, this May morning.

Thus far the drive which carried him into the major league fortification has cost Ball about $550,000—and a lot of short, gray hairs. Nor has this expenditure enabled him to land a pennant, although last year he came close.

Browns Not Breaking Even.

ON the contrary his club is in last place. In addition it is costing him money, instead of recouping him. It is just another version of the story so many magnates have had to find out by experience—That in baseball pennant winners must be made, not bought.

Yesterday the Browns played Detroit before less than 4000 persons In the East the club played fourteen games to an average attendance of little over 2000 per game, notwithstanding two of these affairs were on Saturday.

One Sunday Crowd 19,539.

If it is true the Browns' daily average expense during the season is about $700, the club has not paid expenses since leaving St. Louis, notwithstanding one crowd, at Detroit on a Sunday, of 19,539 and two exhibition games that netted $500 each.

As near as can be estimated the Browns, for the 21 days they have been away, have taken in close to $15,000, with alleged expenses of $16,800 for the same period.

Would you like to be a magnate, Bo?

PENNANT HIGHWAY, in the baseball world, is in a sadly deteriorated condition. In the American League this year the road to the top is full of bumps. Thus far, none of the drivers has been shaken loose from his place; but many a machine that looked for smooth running has suffered a severe shaking-up.

One-fifth of the course has been traversed. It is the worst fifth, and henceforth the chauffeurs may expect to encounter smoother going.

The 30 or more games that have been played thus far represent the least significant part of the season. In some instances the showings of certain teams can be taken with considerable salt.

June Will Tell the Story.

THOSE who are in the habit of supporting teams with more substantial arguments than verbal ones, are the least perturbed over the topsy-turvy condition of the Johnson circuit. These are the men who base their views of probable pennant results on the performances of the clubs during the month of June.

April and May showing are discounted by this sector of so-called wise ones. And to those who have seen May showings utterly reversed in July, early "dope" goes for little.

What the Season Has Brought Forth.

NEVERTHELESS the play has shown certain things that cannot be discounted by subsequent developments. In the American League the following facts may be considered as having been definitely established:

That Cleveland is a vastly stronger club.

That Connie Mack has made good his boast that he would show an improved team.

That Boston's loss of Tris Speaker has deprived it of its margin of superiority.

That Detroit has not materially improved its weak pitching staff.

That combining two clubs doesn't necessarily make a pennant winner, as in case of the Browns.

In the National League the "form" has been better subserved; but the following points of difference from expected conditions may be noted:

The loss of Bill James' services and the silencing of J. Evers have kept back the Braves.

New York has assembled the most powerful attacking team in either league.

Philadelphia has fooled the predicters who thought it would sink to the second division and remain there.

The combined Cubs and Whales have yet to show their combination is invincible, as some predicted.

The Cardinals have a fighting chance.

Those who want to get a fairly safe line on the outcome of the races can do no better than to note the progress made in the month to come—June. The teams which show the most advance then, will be the clubs that will be knocking at the door next October.

• • •

Mr. Anderson May Be Lucky.

NOT many persons believe the Cleveland team will stand the hot weather drive during the summer and remain close to the top. But there is one man in St. Louis who is probably pulling for them rather strongly.

He is T. T. Anderson of the Racquet Club, who "bid in" the Cleveland and Philadelphia chances combined for a total investment of $225. For this venture he stands to receive back some $2300 if either should win.

A comparison of the Racquet Club bids with the present standing of the two leagues' teams may prove interesting. Here it is:

CLUB	Bid	Standing, 1916
AMERICAN LEAGUE
Boston	$850.00	Fourth
St. Louis	725.00	Last
Chicago	500.00	Fifth
Detroit	500.00	Sixth
New York	450.00	Third
Washington	300.00	First
Philadelphia	112.50	Seventh
Cleveland	112.50	Second
NATIONAL LEAGUE
Philadelphia	$500.00	Third
Boston	500.00	Fourth
New York	425.00	Second
Brooklyn	400.00	First
Chicago	350.00	Fifth
St. Louis	325.00	Seventh
Cincinnati	225.00	Sixth
Pittsburg	100.00	Last

This shows that the National League guessers were pretty close to form and that the clubs are running nearly to expectations, while the American form is all awry.

Nevertheless, if anyone wanted to risk a few meal tickets on a club with a professional layer of odds, he would be shocked to learn that, in spite of the uncertainty of the races in both leagues, the prices are prohibitively short.

Another "Miracle Man"—Perhaps.

CLEVELAND scribes are already beginning to figure out their Miracle Man stories, appended to the name of Lee Fohl, manager of those surprising Indians.

Bill James and Johnny Evers provided the "miracle" for George Stallings; if Cleveland should come through, the miraculous stuff will have to be blamed on Tris Speaker and not on Lee Fohl. Tris is the spark plug and the punch to this outfit.

In Washington I asked Fielder Jones what was needed to make his club a pennant contender.

"One first-class player," was the prompt response.

"Which would you prefer, Ty Cobb, a batting demon, or Walter Johnson, the fireball hurler?"

"Tris Speaker," was Jones' astonishing reply.

He explained that Speaker had every requirement on attack and defense, as well as the right temperament.

• • •

What Speaker meant to Boston may be shown by that club's slowness in getting a start. Boston finished but two and one-half games ahead of Detroit last season, and Speaker alone figured to be responsible for 10 victories or more.

Outside of Cleveland at least, Fohl will hardly be credited with the success of the Indians. Speaker will come in for it all.

The Cheapest Manager.

FOHL is probably the most inexpensive big league boss that has been on the payrolls of either organization in many years. Fohl, according to unofficial information, is getting $3500 per season for handling a club that Saturday morning was leading the league.

Few leaders have been paid as low as $5000 in recent times.

M'KINLEY TRACK TEAM FAVORED TO WIN SENIOR TITLE

Interscholastic Championship Honors Again Likely to Go to South Side.

SOLDAN JUNIORS STRONG

West End Athletic Team Appears to Own Best Local Junior Performers.

A real struggle between McKinley, Yeatman and Soldan for the point trophy at the annual interscholastic track and field meet, which will be held at Francis Field tomorrow afternoon, seemed certain, following the qualifying events which were held at the Pikeway campus, yesterday morning, during a downpour of rain.

Preliminaries were held in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, high and low hurdles, and the pole vault in the senior class and the 50 and 220 yard dashes, low hurdles, running broad jump, and shot put in the junior division. The heats for the 440 yard dash in both classes were run earlier in the week.

Soldan qualified with the greatest number of athletes, 28 West Enders being eligible for the finals competition. 25 Yeatman performers qualified, 22 from McKinley, 10 from Central and 8 from Cleveland.

The Yeatman team will have the greatest number of seniors in the meet, 11, while McKinley and Soldan each will be represented by 10. Soldan's junior hopes will rest on 18 youths, while Yeatman will depend upon 14 and McKinley 12.

In considering the events of Monday, only the senior division will be considered. There have been no junior meets held this season, and the athletes are practically all newcomers.

First place in the sprints apparently may be conceded to the crimson squad, unless something unforeseen happens to Murchison before tomorrow. The South Side youngster seems to be the class of the schools in the 100 and 220 yard dashes. He has stepped the century event in 10 2-5 consistently, and his time in the 220 has generally been 23 3-5. His main opposition will probably come from Cox of Yeatman, who has also showed well in the early games. Kershaw of Central, Murphy of Cleveland and Thompson of Soldan look like the first men to represent the other schools.

As in the shorter sprints, Coach Castleman's squad looks sweet in the 440 yard run. The qualifying runs for this event have been held and, although six men are eligible to run Monday, Schuster and La Mont of McKinley and Osborne of Central had but little trouble in leading the rest of the field in the trials. This trio looked best. The times were: La Mont, 53 3-5; Osborne, 54, and Schuster, 54-1-5—all of them good. Wood of Yeatman, Kimmell of Soldan and Dougherty of Cleveland will be the other contestants in the event.

O'Connor Figures in Half-Mile.

Schuster and La Mont of McKinley and O'Connor of Central look like the real cream of the half-milers. Schuster owns a 2m. 9s. time, which is better than anything else done in competition in the high school set this season. O'Connor stepped a neat race against Principia and is figured to give the crimson-hosed athlete a real struggle. Shelby of Soldan and Bailey and Von Lehster of Yeatman are the others who may be figured to place. Cleveland is weak in the distance runs.

O'Connor of Central again figures strongly in the mile, with a time of 5m. 1 2-5s. to his credit. Reed of McKinley will be a tough customer, while Lowey of Soldan, Schneiderwind of Cleveland and Bailey of Yeatman may not be snuffed at.

The hurdles will not be won in any record time this year if the dual marks presage the outcome. In the high sticks, Haase of Central, Leffler and Ronat of McKinley, Schnauss, Shuster and Hagee of Soldan; Cox, Winwelman and Sinz of Yeatman and Kinsey of Cleveland are the entrants.

There is no logical basis for the choice of a winner, as but few competitive hurdle events have been held this season.

The low sticks will bring onto the track Kinsey of Cleveland, Taggert of Central, Schwerdtmann of McKinley, Cox and Sinz of Yeatman and Schnauss and Shuster of Soldan. Another event in which dope can't figure.

McKinley Weight Men Best.

The weights point to more McKinley victories, with Deeds and Feuerborn doing the strong-man stunts. Deeds is the best weight man in the scholastic circuit. He is the only high-school athlete who can consistently hurl the discus 110 feet and put the shot over 40 feet. He should land both events, with Feuerborn also figuring with the disc. Lippert of Cleveland looks good with the shot, while O'Connor of Central, Cox of Yeatman, Shuster of Soldan, will complete the real competition. Good men with the disc are few, but the same field as was in the shot, with the exception of O'Connor, who will be replaced by Wood for Central, will compete in the contest.

Cox of Yeatman is the best choice for the running board, while Suycott of McKinley is the pick for the high. The little Yeatman star has consistently leaped 21 feet this year, while the South Sider is hoping over from 66 to 68 inches.

The pole vault has not brought out any stars this year and it is thought that the event will be closely contested between the 9½ and 10 foot mark. Taggert of Central, Kinsey of Cleveland, Nathan of Soldan, Cox of Yeatman and Childs of McKinley are the entries. Cox is the favorite.

Following are the names and schools of the boys who qualified yesterday for Monday's finals:

JOHNSON IS IN FORM

Fireball King Holds Connie Mack's Outfit to 6 Hits in Closing Game.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Washington went into first place again today by defeating Philadelphia twice, 5 to 3 and 3 to 1, while Cleveland was idle. Gallia outpitched Bush in the first game in which Jamieson drove in three of the locals' runs and scored once himself. In the second game, Washington scored all its runs in the fourth inning on a pass to Foster, hits by Milan and Jamieson, an infield out and a wild pitch by Nabors. Johnson held Philadelphia scoreless until the ninth inning, when a pass and out, a single produced a run. Score:

Suggestion for King Free.

Sporting Editor Post-Dispatch.

I move that if the Hon. Mr. King Free and Mr. Emperor Gratis don't like the pass gate service at Robison Field let them try the gate that reads thusly: BOX SEATS ONE BUCK. Who seconds the motion? All right, Mr. Britton; now who thirds the motion? A SIX-BIT FAN.

P. S.—I notice Free and Gratis do not complain of the club's showing. Oh, well! you can't expect something for nothing.

Pat Is No Knocker, but—

ST. LOUIS, May 26.

Sporting Editor Post-Dispatch. Dear Sir: That Probono Pub or whatever his name is must think he is a funny guy. Like all these self-considered smart persons he is always knocking St. Louis. I'll bet if both the teams were fighting it out for the World's championship he would be there in the grandstand making so much racket with his hammer you couldn't hear anybody else. If there is anything I hate it is a knocker and these fellows who are always knocking in the paper give me a pain.

As far as I can see, the Browns are all right except that one or two of the pitchers have a spavin and the catching department is weak. I don't think much of Deal on third, but he's better than Jimmy Austin. It seems to me, too, that Fielder is trying to come back with that old hitless wonders stuff, which is no good. But let's wait. The season is young yet and if they get these matters straightened out, get a good .300 hitter for the outfield and strengthen the infield they will be right up there in first division.

The Cards aren't so bad as the knockers paint 'em either. All Huggins has got to do is to quit monkeying around with the line-up and get about three good ball-players. And then if we can get ride of the hammer-thrower good Old St. Louis will be on the baseball map.

PATRIOTIC.

Beat You to It.

St. Louis, May 27.

Sporting Editor Post-Dispatch.

Dear sir: Why not figure stolen bases, the same as batting averages? For instance: Kauff attempts four steals and is successful in two of them. His average would therefore be .500.

This would show the ability of players in the stolen base branch of the sport. It would also give fans a line on the catchers. Twenty-five attempts to steal, unsuccessful in 10, gives the catcher an average of .400 in the branch. What do you think of it?

MAIER.

(Editor's note: We think so well of it that we beat you to it. See next page.)

18-Karat Stuff for Ball.

ST. LOUIS, May 27.

Sporting Editor Post-Dispatch.

Dear Sir: I am a loyal Brown rooter and think that a few of the grandstand managers ought to lay off for a while. If they knew how to manage a team better than Jones, Phil Ball would now be paying them more than the $15,000 a year Jones receives. Let's show the team we are rooting for them and they will gain confidence and win games. Let's fill the ball park when they come home on May 30.

SHAW AHEAD 5—1 WHEN RAIN PUTS STOP TO CONTEST

Principal Refuses to Allow Boys to Finish Game for Post-Dispatch Trophy.

Because Lewis M. Dougan, principal of the Shaw School, last year a finalist in the Public School League for the Post-Dispatch trophy, refused to allow his nine to play in the rain, Shaw was robbed of a sure victory in the game with Harrison yesterday. At the end of the fourth frame when rain started falling Shaw was ahead, 5—1. The Harrison principal was willing to let his boys finish, as only half a frame was needed to make it a game, but Dougan would not stand for it.

In all probability the contest will be decided next Tuesday afternoon. The Shaw-Harrison game was the only one staged in the elimination series.

Shaw scored two in the first yesterday, when after two were out, Doustine was hit and English reached first when Weinel dropped his third strike. Both tallied on Daveggia's triple. Three were added in the fifth on a single by English, doubles by Daveggia and Lodja and Steffen's single.

The lone run for Harrison came in the fourth. In this round Jimmy Gallagher got the lone hit off Daveggia. Gallagher later was nipped at the plate. Jolly counted the lone run when Daveggia threw wild to second trying for Ellerbrake.

LEE MAGEE'S BAT HELPS YANKS TO VICTORY, 4—2

NEW YORK, May 27.—New York again defeated Boston here today, the score being 4 to 2. It was the sixth consecutive victory of Donovan's men over the world's champions, including three in Boston. Keating won his first victory of the season for New York and held Boston to three hits. The batting of Magee, former Federal League star, featured, as he hit Ruth for two singles and a double. Rain fell during the early part of the game, but the contest was not stopped. The score:

Kentucky Rosebud, a 61-Year-Old Fighter, Loses to Rival, Aged 56

John Henry Johnson (aged 56) had the better of a bout with another old fellow in Philadelphia last week. The other old fellow was "The Kentucky Rosebud" (aged 61), the hero of hundreds of hard-fought contests, among them an exhibition with George Dixon feather-weight champion of the world, in which he knocked out "Little Chocolate," as Dixon was known, in two rounds.

Johnson and the "Rosebud" are not the only two "old fellows" who hear the "call of the wild" and find it hard to resist, as evidenced by the following challenge which recently appeared in the London Sporting Life:

"Sergeant Patsey McCoy would like to box any veteran in the army over 55 years of age at 10st 8lb (148 pounds) for 10 pounds ($50) a side. A reply will meet with prompt attention."

D'Arcy a "Heavy" Champion.

Les D'Arcy, the great Australian, middle-weight champion, is now the holder of the heavy-weight title, too, having defeated Harold Hardwick at the Sydney Stadium and caused his retirement in the seventh round.

It was a hard fight and Hardwick was down for three times in the final round before he gave in. D'Arcy did not escape unscathed, as Hardwick, who took his grueling gamely, knocked out two of the champion's front teeth with a couple of uppercuts.

Hardwick was the Empire amateur swimming and boxing champion in 1912. He has now retired and entered into the practice of his profession as a chartered accountant.

Jack Dillon, the light heavyweight "bearcat" of Indianapolis, has consented to appear as a headliner at the smoker and stag of the Union Printers' Baseball Tournament, to be held in Indianapolis the first week in August.

The appearance of Dillon will give the printers an opportunity of seeing in action one of the leading fighters of the country, and one who has been seriously mentioned as an opponent for Jess Willard, champion of the world.

Eddie Randall's gymnasium, 611 North Broadway, has become the most popular rendezvous in St. Louis for boxers in training. Every afternoon, between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock they go through their practice stunts, and their impromptu bouts are greatly enjoyed by the gallery present, no admission being charged by Manager Randall. Very frequently the latter "works out" with some of the good ones.

Among the boxers who will be training there next week, according to Randall, will be Jimmy Hanlon, Frankie Russell, "Tickle" Sanders, Tommy Burke, Matty Smith, Billy Cole, Jack Clements, "Young" Leach Cross, Jimmy Curtis and Joe Connolly.

Jimmy Clabby and Eddie McGoorty, the well-known middleweight boxers of America, are now following the races in Australia as bookmakers, and are said to be so successful that it is doubtful if they will return to their native land and the boxing game for a long time to come.

Cy Young, looking in better condition than he has been for some time, is matched to box "Young" Otto Wallace 15 rounds at Drumwright, Ok., during the coming week.

SUPERBAS TAKE LEAD, BEATING PHILS TWICE

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Brooklyn won two games from Philadelphia today, 8 to 3 and 6 to 0, and took first place from the home team. In the first game, after Philadelphia got three runs through Pfeffer's wildness in the opening inning, he settled down and pitched in grand style. Chalmers was taken off the rubber in the third inning and McQuillan did good work until the ninth, when three errors and five hits gave Brooklyn six runs and victory. Brooklyn landed the second game by hitting Demaree's delivery hard, while Coombs permitted only one player to get past first base and none beyond the second sack. Scores:

WILLIAMS' BAT HELPS CUBS BEAT REDS, 3—2

CINCINNATI, May 27.—Timely hitting and bases on balls enabled Chicago to take the third game of the series with Cincinnati here today, 3 to 2. In the first inning Flack was given a pass. The visitors scored their last run in the third inning when McCarthy tripled and scored on Williams' sacrifice fly. Jones, With .423, Is Best Swatter in "Prep" League

Fries of McKinley Right on Heels of Star of Central High Team.

John Jones, the clever shortstop of the Central High School nine, threatens to lead the Interscholastic League batters again this season, although Fries, the slugging outfielder of the McKinley nine is right on his heels. Jones, who showed the way to the high school hitters last year, is at present leading with a .423 mark. The South Sider is but 23 points behind him. Leschen and Olin of the league-leading Soldan team and Kilpatrick and Murphy of Cleveland are also well up to the fore. Thirteen high school tossers are batting .300 or better.

The Measure of Value in a Tire

VALUE in a tire must be measured by the service that tire renders. The fact that more G & J 'G' Treads, which are thoroughly effective anti-skid tires, are giving better service than do ordinary casings, proves their value.

Knowing this fact, we unhesitatingly recommend that the next tire you purchase be a G & J 'G' Tread.

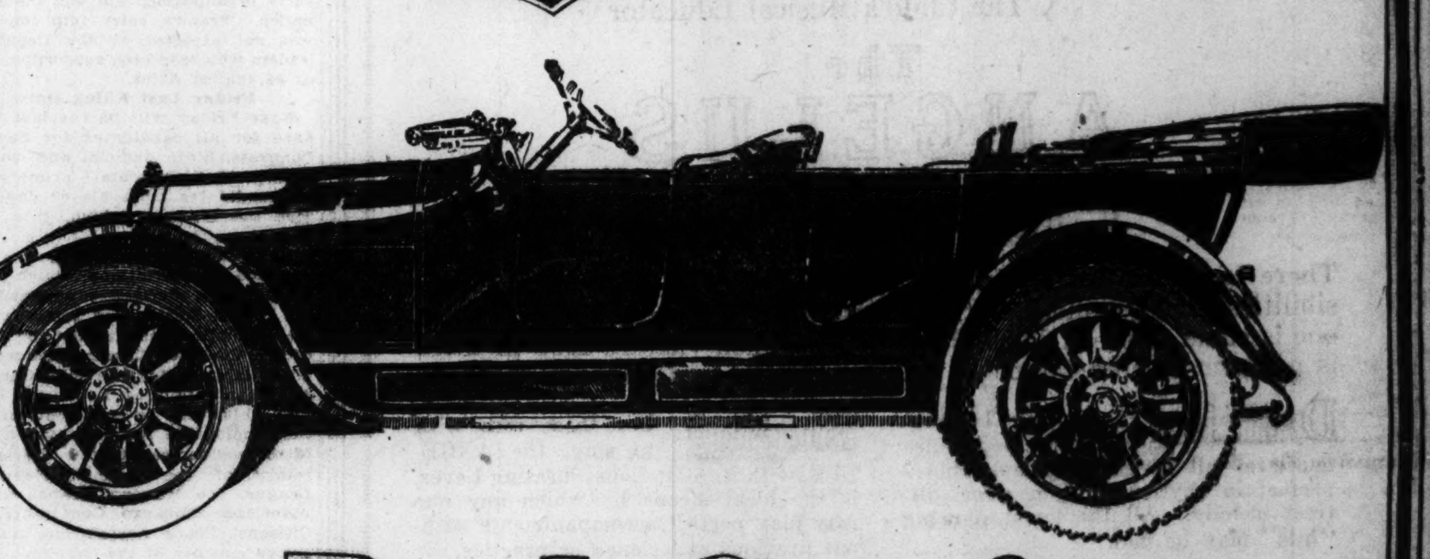
Overland



Real Comfort for Seven

SIX $1145
Model 86—f. o. b. Toledo

Canvass the world and you will not find as big a car as the Overland Six at anywhere near so low a price, $1145.

You who prefer seven passenger capacity, must pay a heavy excess in price to get so much real seven passenger comfort in any other car.

And to back up its big roomy seven passenger carrying capacity there is the powerful six cylinder Overland motor.

Take your full quota of seven big passengers and see how smoothly and easily, without a sign of effort, your powerful motor speeds away with even an overload.

Slow down to a crawl—don't touch the gear shift—keep it in high—but just touch your accelerator.

Without a tremor, smoothly, easily, swiftly, you acquire any desired speed.

That's genuine six cylinder pick-up—a big outstanding Overland Six fact.

And it's that big fact about this big car that makes its price, $1145, so small in comparison.

Overland four cylinder models will "pick up" with many another six.

Our only purpose in building a six at all is to supply with genuine Overland finality and economy that extremist demand for the luxury of bigness and lightning fast pickup.

Overland production—double that of any other builder of cars of like class—makes possible the unapproached value which you get in so big and exceptional a car at so low a price—$1145.

Have the Overland dealer overload the six and demonstrate its comfort and lightning fast pickup.

You cannot equal it for anywhere near the price.

FORMER ST. LOUIS WRITER DIES IN PHILADELPHIA SANITARIUM

Dispatches last night told of the death of John Lathrop Mathews, a writer on the subject of waterways, in a sanitarium near Philadelphia. He went to the sanitarium after suffering a nervous breakdown. He was 42 years old.

Mathews was known to many St. Louisans as the author of books and magazine articles on the proposed Lakes-to-the-Gulf deep waterway. He made his home, for a time, in Normandy, St. Louis County, and it was while they were living there that he separated from his wife, who was formerly Miss Gertrude Singleton of Evanston, Ill. She filed suit for divorce in Clayton in June, 1914.

He was a Harvard graduate, in the class of 1896, became a reporter on Chicago daily papers, and later was editor of the New Orleans Item. His books include "Remaking the Mississippi" and "Conservation of Water."

NATHAN FRANK IS IN RACE AGAINST DICKEY AND AKINS

Latest Candidate for U. S. Senate Favors Preparedness, Neutrality and Firm Mexican Policy.

DICKEY EXPECTED TO WIN

Hans Wulff Files as Candidate for Judgeship of Court of Criminal Correction.

Nathan Frank, formerly owner of the St. Louis Star and a member of Congress several years ago, yesterday entered the contest against Walter S. Dickey of Kansas City and Thomas J. Akins of St. Louis for the Republican nomination for United States Senator. It is not expected there will be any other candidates.

Frank declared himself for adequate military and naval preparedness, a tariff commission, strict neutrality as between the European belligerents, a firm policy toward Mexico, with intervention if that should fail to bring peace among the Mexicans, and a rural credit law affording the farmer the same opportunity for financial aid as the business man now enjoys.

On the subject of neutrality he said, in a written statement, that the United State should demand of all belligerents that it should not be interfered with in the exercise of its rights as a neutral, no matter to what lengths we should be obliged to go to maintain those rights.

Frank said that he would rely largely upon the vote of the cities to win the nomination.

The Republican leaders generally concede that Dickey, on account of his complete organization, his wide acquaintance throughout the State and the practically unanimous support of the party organization, will win the nomination. Frank's entry into the fight was not expected by the Republican leaders who have been supporting Dickey as against Akins.

Friday Last Filing Date.

Next Friday will be the last filing date for all candidates for Senator, Congress, State, judicial and country offices. Under the State primary law all candidates must file 60 days before the election, which, this year, will be on Aug. 1.

Hans Wulff, who recently has represented organizations which have conducted a German propaganda in the United States, filed yesterday for the Republican nomination for Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction. Wulff is expecting the solid German-American vote of St. Louis, and hopes that this will be sufficient to win the nomination for him over a field of three other candidates. He is secretary of the German Neutrality League, the Missouri branch of the American Embargo Conference, the Citizens' Peace Association, and an active member of the German-American Alliance. He lives at 1360 Union boulevard.

Clarence H. King of 78 Vandeventer place, son of Goodman King, wealthy jeweler, has filed as Republican candidate for Congress in the Eleventh District, at present represented in Washington by Congressman Igoe. Two years ago King was elected to the State Legislature from the Sixth St. Louis District. King said that while in the Legislature he tried to oppose needless legislation. He believes there are too many laws enacted without proper consideration, and that if he is sent to Congress he will make it a point to oppose needless legislation.

G. H. Foree of Wellston filed as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Tenth district. He is connected with the manufacturing department of the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., and is a member of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union. The Tenth district is normally Republican by 22,000 majority.

MRS. KELLOGG LOSES WILL SUIT

Jury Decides Society Woman's Mother Was of Sound Mind.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Mrs. Lois Kellogg, divorced wife of Pierpont Isham, today lost her fight to break the will of her mother, Mme. Sarah H. Kellogg, when a jury returned a verdict that her mother was of sound mind when the instrument was drawn. The trial lasted three weeks and attracted attention because of the social prominence of the Kelloggs and the size of the estate.

The will of Mme. Kellogg provided that her daughter should receive a life interest in the estate. Three attendants were made beneficiaries of trust funds amounting to $120,000. Mrs. Kellogg charged that her mother was unduly influenced by attendants.

BLOW PAINTINGS IN CURIO SHOP

Oil paintings of members of the Blow family of early St. Louisans, of which track had been lost by surviving relatives, were discovered last night at the store of Morris Damson, a dealer in curios, 6502 Delmar boulevard. Damson bought them March 22 at an auction of unclaimed household goods at a storage warehouse.

Miss Hope Fairfax Loughborough of Little Rock, Ark., niece of the late Mrs. Julia Blow, widow of Dr. William Blow, had written to the storage concern about them. Damson said he had not received any communication about them from Miss Loughborough.

ADMIRAL TELLS WHY NAVY OPPOSES OIL LAND BILL

Leasing "Joker" Threatens to Rob U. S. of Source of Supply for Battle Cruisers.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—To make a maximum speed of 35 knots an hour, as provided in the naval bill now pending in the House, the five proposed battle cruisers, if required to burn coal, would consume 400 tons an hour. This would require not only enormous storage space, but it is doubtful if sufficient space could be provided for the men required to handle the coal.

In order to maintain a speed of 35 knots the battle cruisers would consume about 250 tons of oil per hour. This fuel could be stored almost anywhere on board, since it is handled by automatic pumps. All that the crews are required to do is to keep the oil feeding properly and the burners uniform.

These are some of the reasons advanced today by Rear Admiral R. S. Griffin, Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering of the Navy Department, in explaining the anxiety of Secretary Daniels and other officials to prevent the passage of the oil land leasing bill, as reported to the Senate. A "joker" placed in the bill threatens to rob the navy of the oil reserves in California which former President Taft created by executive order.

Court Sustains Coal Case Demurrers.

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—The United States District Court here today sustained the demurrers presented by the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Co. to three indictments charging it with violating the Interstate Commerce law in failing to file tariffs on coal freight and with violating the Elkins act in granting concessions to certain coal shippers through failure to fix and collect demurrage charges. The court declared that the indictments were defective because they did not show with sufficient particularity that violation had been committed.

POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF REAL ESTATE NEWS

BUNGALOW PLANS GIVE AN IMPETUS TO SALE OF LOTS

All Sections Reflect New Building Movement, but Subdivisions Adjacent to Forest and Tower Grove Parks Are Chief Centers of Activity.

SITE FOR 10 MODERN HOMES IS PURCHASED

Plans for Building on Yale Avenue; General Interest in Improvements on Lafayette Avenue; Houses Sold Before Completed.

Plans for bungalows have given decided impetus to sales of lots in the outlying districts. While all sections reflect the new building movement, subdivisions lying within the city limits and adjacent to Forest Park and Tower Grove Park are the chief centers of activity.

Although the subdivision was placed on teh market only a week ago, the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co., agents for the property yesterday announced sales of 17 lots in Oakland Terrace, adjoining Forest Park on the south.

As a site for 10 modern bungalows, Richard Weisenborn and O. Kubatsky have purchased the entire block on the east side of Fairmount avenue, between Oakland and Berthold avenues. Each bungalow will occupy a lot 30x150 feet, and will cost $6500, or a total of $65,000. Plans for the bungalows are being prepared by Kubatsky. Kubatsky has just completed a number of bungalows in the vicinity of Fairgrounds Park.

Ground for the Oakland Terrace bungalows will be broken tomorrow, and construction probably will be completed before the close of the summer.

The subdivision is improved with streets, sewers, water and gas mains, and is accessible by the Market street car line.

South Side Operations.

The Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. is repeating at Oakland Terrace its record of successes in South St. Louis, where it has subdivided and sold many desirable tracts which are now flourishing home centers.

Two lots on the south side of Berthold avenue, in Oakland Terrace, were purchased by David F. Doubt, a client of William S. Drozda R. E. Co., who will erect bungalows. It is understood that other purchasers have bungalow plans.

Plans are being made by clients of J. H. Farish & Co. for a set of six bungalows to be erected on Yale avenue, just west of Forest Park.

The Yale avenue bungalows will have six and seven rooms and will occupy lots ranging from 37½ to 75 feet frontage.

There will be hardwood floors and massive brick fireplaces in the living room, while the woodwork on the first floor will be in Mission finish.

Yale avenue is improved with asphalt and concrete curbs and the space between the curbs and sidewalks is parked with trees and shrubbery.

The subdivision occupies a picturesque site in Forest Park Hills, and has the advantage of the Market street car line.

The company is completing six bungalows in this subdivision and the new installment will be of the same type.

On Lafayette Avenue.

The bungalows in the block on Lafayette avenue, between Klemm and Tower Grove avenue, being erected by Sam Koplar Real Estate Co., are exciting general interest.

Both sides of the street, extending from Klemm to Tower Grove, will be solid rows of bungalows, 21 on the north and 21 on the south side, each of different design and arrangement.

The building operation on the north side is practically completed, while that on the south side is under full headway, the indications being that by August the buildings will be completed.

Hundreds of visitors to Shaw's Garden last Sunday inspected the bungalows and as a result several sales were closed during the week. Several of the bungalows on the north side are now occupied by persons who made their purchases from the plans before construction was completed.

The Koplar Real Estate Co., of which former Mayor Kreisman is president, and Sam Hamberg Jr. vice-president, is erecting these bungalows at a minimum cost, owing to the magnitude of the operation.

De Tonty Street Flat Sold.

The Anderson-Stocke-Buerman Realty Co. reports the sale for Jacob Rubin to George Acton, who was represented by the Mercantile Trust Co., situated in Shaw's Lafayette Avenue Addition, at 4215-15A-17-17A De Tonty street, consisting of four flats, each of three rooms, kitchenettes, sun parlors, hardwood floors, indirect lighting system throughout, on lot 40x125, renting for $1380 a year, which was purchased for investment. This is the fifth flat which this agency sold for Rubin in the Shaw tract in the last 30 days.

STRODTMAN & STRODTMAN.

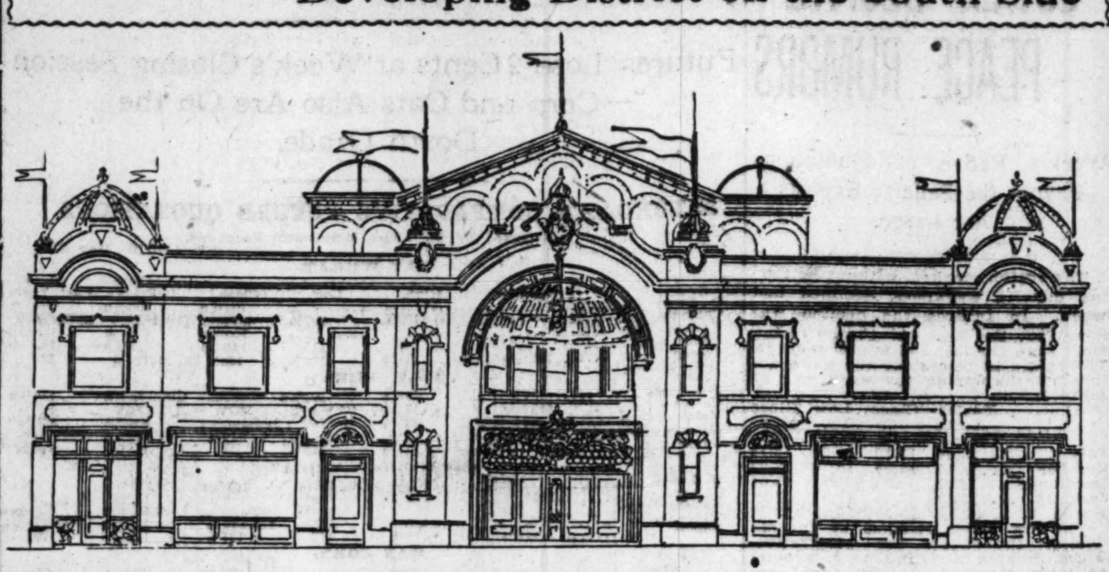
Strodtman & Strodtman report the following sales this week:

[illegible] Berthold avenue, a seven-room bungalow, lot [illegible] feet, from H. W. Hamilton and wife to William H. Packard and wife.

5118 Morgan street, an eight-room brick residence, for Mrs. Elizabeth Walker to Mrs. Louise Glockner.

3715 Beacon avenue, a three-room frame cottage, from Barth Realty Co. to Peter [illegible].

New Moving Picture Theater for Rapidly Developing District on the South Side



H. C. KOENIG, president of the Missouri Press Brick Association, has completed financial arrangements for the erection on the east side of Grand avenue, south of Meramec street, of a motion picture theater to cost $30,000.

The building will occupy 90 feet on Grand avenue and 135 feet on Kingsland court, and will have a seating capacity of 3000.

A feature will be an organ with chimes located in various parts of the house.

The site is in the heart of the most rapidly developing districts of the South Side.

The theater will be under the management of N. H. Treft, who has had wide experience in the moving picture field.

BUILDINGS FOR BUSINESS USES IN LARGE DEMAND

Lease of Second Home for Stone Company a Feature of Past Week—Clothiers, Printers and Automobile Concerns Among Those Taking Quarters.

The inquiries for buildings for both retail and wholesale purposes which have been marked throughout the current month, constituted the feature of the past week.

The E. Heinz Stove Co. yesterday leased, through the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co., the four-story and basement building at Nos. 7 and 9 North Second street. The lease is regarded as noteworthy because of its indication of the rapid growth of the stove industry in St. Louis, this being the second building that the Harris Realty Co. has obtained for Heinz Stove Co. since January 1 last.

The latest lease gives the company a total of 100,000 square feet for factory occupancy, double the area required by it two years ago.

The Houchin Clothing Co., a connection of the Star Clothing Co., formerly of Jefferson City, but now a St. Louis concern, leased, through Cornet & Zeibig, space in the building at 817 Washington avenue. The company will give employment to about 100 hands.

Perrin & Smith Printing Co., represented by Cornet & Zeibig, leased quarters in a building at Eighth and Walnut streets.

This building, which is owned by the John F. Meyer Investment Co., formerly was known as the Ely-Walker building. The printing company, now located at 217-219 Olive street, has been in business for 30 years or more. The quarters will give it an area of 127x127 feet on each floor.

Both leases were negotiated by J. B. Krieger of the leasing department of Cornet & Ziebig.

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. effected a lease to Abe Susman of a store at 709 Washington avenue, which is to be occupied as a suit and cloak emporium. The store will be equipped with a mezzanine floor and elaborate fixtures and otherwise made attractive.

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. also leased to Isaac Thorn a store at 616 Washington avenue, to be occupied as a millinery shop.

The Martin-Breitt company, representing the Gibbs-Brown Oil and Gasoline Co., also leased a one-story and basement building at 5841-43 Delmar boulevard to Gottlieb Riegert and G. W. Wood. The building will be used for a high-class garage and for automobiles and trucks for hire.

This is the second building on that block leased through the Martin-Breitt company for automobile purposes.

T. P. Plumridge, secretary of the Holland Building, reports increased demand for space in downtown office buildings. Offices in the Holland Building are in especial demand, according to Plumridge, and outside concerns are conspicuous among the Lessees, he says.

OLIVE STREET ROAD FARM SUBDIVIDED INTO SMALL TRACTS

O'Reilly Company Offers Parcels of Land to Persons Wishing Country Homes.

The M. B. O'Reilly farm of 100 acres on the Olive Street Road at Spoede Road, has been subdivided and will be sold in tracts of one and two acres each. The farm has been a landmark in that part of St. Louis County. It has been held intact for almost a century.

The land was granted in April, 1831, by patent signed by President Andrew Jackson to Larkin Deaver. In 1865 it passed into the possession of Eugene Porcher, a restaurateur, and from it he supplies produce for his restaurant, then at Ninth and Olive streets.

The Olive Street Road intersects the farm, leaving 40 acres to the south and 60 acres to the north. The ground on the south side of the road has been divided into tracts of one-half to two acres, and the other 60 acres have been divided into tracts of from six to 21 acres. The old farmhouse is on the north side of the road, about midway of the property.

Gerald B. O'Reilly, of the M. B. O'Reilly Realty and Investment Co., said yesterday: "There is a growing demand on the part of the city man of moderate means for land in the county where he can get part of his living off the land and at the same time give his family the advantage of growing up in the open with clean and wholesome surroundings and a closer acquaintance with nature. The majority of those who want to go 'back to the land' want only small tracts which they can cultivate before and after a busy day in the city. It has been very hard for this class of buyers to get what they wanted in the past for the reason that most owners of farms in St. Louis County were not willing to cut them up into one and two-acre tracts. It was to meet this demand that we have subdivided the farm and laid out 'Olive Crest.'"

Olive Crest is 679 feet above sea level and 266.27 above the St. Louis city directrix. It is at the apex of the watershed. Part of the surface water finds its way into the Missouri River to the north and part through various channels to the Mississippi River. The St. Louis County reservoir is located about a half mile east of Olive Crest on the Olive Street Road.

The Olive Street Road is one of the most important thoroughfares of the County and will undoubtedly be one of the first to be improved as soon as the $3,000,000 voted for good roads by the County is available.

The best development of St. Louis has been for some time directly west into the County and it will undoubtedly continue to follow this general direction along the Olive Street Road.

The O'Reilly Co. has published a booklet entitled "Olive Crest, the Story of An Acre," which explains the purposes of the subdivision. It is a record of the producing power of a trial acre of Missouri land.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

RAILROAD STOCKS ADVANCE, THEN REACT VERY SHARPLY; PEACE TALK IS A FACTOR

Reading Is Active Issue in Week's Trade in Wall Street.

LONDON MARKET FIRM

Foreign Trading Shows a Better Tone Than in Some Time.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Last week's advance of the railway shares was rightly interpreted as expressing doubt over the sweeping conclusions which had gained so wide a hearing since the present year began, that all American industries would be plunged into severe reaction with return of peace.

"The market's movement served to some extent the further purpose of stimulating discussion as to whether the ending of the war would be an unmixed evil to American finance and industry, even in other directions. For the notion that peace negotiations would be a calamity, from the point of view of our own situation, had gained a curiously wide vogue in business circles of this country.

"Incidents of this week have disclosed one other reason for the advance in railway shares, and for the subsequent halt in them. How many of our securities still remain in the hands of English investors available for sale at New York, with the purpose of offsetting England's purchases of American munitions, is a question more or less debatable. The probability is that the sum total is still very large, even when the present holdings of Holland, France and Germany are deducted from the aggregate balance left after the war-time sales of perhaps $1,500,000,000.

England to Tax Holdings.

"But that the private owners of good American securities do not particularly wish to sell, is made perfectly evident by the British Treasury's very unusual step of proposing actual coercion, through an extra 10 per cent income tax, to be imposed on interest and dividends derived from those securities.

"Such Governmental action would be wholly inconceivable unless it had been found that investors owning American securities were not disposed to part with them. In fact, unwillingness to do so would be quite in accord with financial instinct. Investors, large or small, two-thirds of whose capital was placed in English war loans and the rest in American stocks and bonds, would usually hesitate, in any case, before converting also that remaining third into war loans. When such investors learned of the great prosperity of American industry and the record-breaking earnings of the railways whose securities they owned, the impulse to sell would at least not be encouraged. When they found the British Gvernment bidding for the stocks and bonds on the explicit ground that these were the only securities certain of a profitable market, one can easily imagine the thrifty Englishmen shaking their heads and locking up their safe boxes. They, as well as their Government, might like to keep an anchor to windward in Americans.

The Future Position.

"What the result will be of this new coercive policy we shall see in time."

"Doubt as to the outcome may have had a part in checking the rise on the Stock Exchange. But the general market hesitation may have also arisen partly from the new perplexity which has this week surrounded the question of peace itself.

"There have been intimations enough of willingness to negotiate; in fact, the German Government's desire to end the war has, so to speak, been proclaimed of late from the housetops. So far, the position was satisfactory to the most humane observer—even when he found a singular element of incongruity in a belligerent, whose past attitude and recent practices in regard to war are matters of well-known record, talking now about 'this terrible war,' the 'great doom which threatens the entire civilized world,' and the 'responsibility which could not be borne' if the conflict were to be extended.

"But the difficulty seems to be not only that the German Government seems to think that the terms of peace ought to give it some tangible advantages as a result of this wicked and wanton attack by it on the rest of Europe, but that the aggressor in the conflict is the only party who is asking that the war be stopped. Rumors of peace negotiations, which circulate under such conditions, aro never wholly convincing—least of all to the cool and experienced financial markets."

LONDON REVIEW.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, May 27.—The extraordinary outburst of predictions of peace is apparently based on the belief that the German Government's repeated public statements of its wish for peace really reflects the Government's conviction that economic exhaustion is in sight in Germany. As a matter of fact, our highest financial circles, while conceding that the newspaper reports of German distress are exaggerated, nevertheless, consider that the economic aspect of the war will become very important in the next few months.

But the predictions of peace are disregarded in the best-informed financial quarters, and there is no question but that both political and financial authorities are proceeding on the assumption of a greatly protracted war. 'Mobilizing' of our prosources is being conducted on that basis of expectation. This explains, for one thing, the new scheme to impose an extra income tax of 2 shillings in the pound, or 10 per cent, on income from all such foreign securities as have not responded to the Treasury's appeal to sell them or deposit them with the Government.

An Unusual Step.

This unusual step does not necessarily indicate that supplies of American securities here are running low, but simply that while bankers and financial institutions have hastened to respond to the Government's appeal, the general public, as usual is lethargic, and persuasion which approaches coercion is required to bring the remaining millions out of private strongboxes. It is not a sign of nervousness over the exchange market, for London's resources, available to obtain further credits in your markets, are enormous.

"We still have extensive unreported reserves of gold. But having learned their lesson by the experience of last summer, and appreciating the magnitude of Europe's autumn imports from America, the authorities here and in France are steadily making their preparations in advance.

It is impossible to follow the movement of loans at the Bank of England, which has now reduced that account, excluding loans to the Government, from £191,000,000 last July, and £124,000,000 even at the opening of last January, to £76,000,000 this week—the lowest figure since August, 1914. There has been, for instance, a constant succession, first of advances by the bank to the allies, and then repayment by our Government to the bank.

Daily Sales of Bonds.

"The daily sales of exchequer bonds and treasury bills are still having excellent results, and the forthcoming option to take three, as well as five-year exchequer bonds, is likely to popularize them further.

"There may also possibly be some small concession in the income tax on Government securities, though no actual remission. In fact, the determination of the Government to maintain high taxation in spite of its large borrowing has had extremely good effect on the national credit.

"Much money is at hand here awaiting investment, and this partly explains the recent Stock Exchange optimism."

COTTON DRIFTS LOWER DESPITE PEACE RUMORS

Week's Range of Quotations Favors the Sellers; Exports Are Large.

The cotton market, without betraying definite weakness, declined last week. In futures the decline was irregular, the near months suffering more than the fall and winter months. The range in prices for the more active months during the week was as follows:

	Yesterday's Close	Close for Week.	Low for Week.	Close May 27
July	13.06	13.10	12.66	12.78
October	13.10	13.09	12.76	12.89
December	13.25	13.24	12.91	13.06
January	13.30	13.28	12.91	13.11
March	13.43	13.39	13.11	13.25

The low levels reached by futures during the week are suggestive. These figures may indicte a ground on which traders think it safe to stand. Whether or not that is true, it is interesting to note that on Wednesdy, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the low figure for October on each day was 12.76c, 12.76c, 12.78c and 12.77c. For December it was 12.92c, 12.91c, 12.93c, 12.92c. January 12.92c, 12.91c, 12.93c and 12.92. March 13.13c, 13.11c, 13.16c and 13.14c.

The market seemed to be largely a weather market, and declined in expectation that more favorable weather would affect the condition report which covers the growing cotton crop up to the night of May 25. This report is to be issued June 1.

Private Report Bearish.

A private crop condition estimate during the week was taken as bearish, and may have helped the decline somewhat. The average condition for 10 years on May 25 was 79.3; the average condition on May 25, 1915, was 75.3; in 1914, 74.3; in 1913, 79.1.

There seems to be no further effect from peace rumors. Last week they were plentiful.

There is a peculiar scarcity of guesses as to the condition this year; usually everyone takes a shy at the condition report, but at present there are few who are willing to put their opinions in writing. For this reason, should the condition report prove radical, there may be some strange doings in the future markets. The fact that the market has made a substantial decline just before the report puts it in rather a healthy position to advance should the report be bullish.

Spot markets declined from the level of the previous week, losing in quotations from ⅛c to ⅜c. Sales were small, and holders of cotton are rather inclined to hold off for the present. So far there has been no cotton pressed for sale.

Quotations in the principal markets at the close of the week were as follows: Galveston, market quoted steady; middling at 13.10c; New Orleans quiet, 12.63c; Mobile quiet, 12.63c; Savannah firm, 12⅝c; Charleston quiet, 12½c; Norfolk steady, 12.63c; Wilmington steady, 12½c; New York quiet, 12.90c; Boston quiet, 12.90c; Philadelphia quiet, 13.15c; Houston steady, 13c; Augusta steady, 12.63c; Memphis steady, 13c; Little Rock steady, 12.88c; St. Louis steady, 13c.

Exports Are Liberal.

Exports during the week were large, and made up for the deficiency of the previous week, the two averaging over 100,000 bales per week. During the past week exports were as follows: To Great Britain, 51,152 bales; to France, 10,795; China and Japan, 10,398; other countries, the Continent, etc., 55,124 bales, a total of 128,009 bales. The total for the season is 4,901,256 bales, with nine more weeks before the end of the season. The present rate of movement will carry exports well up to 5,750,000 bales.

Some rumors circulate of purchasing of large lots of spot cotton and future contracts for European account, Austrian particularly. These rumors have been foundation for fact, in all likelihood, but are too indefinite to affect the market substantially.

According to the Weather Bureau summary of weather and crop conditions in the cotton region, the week ending May 24 was as follows: "The temperature of the week was too low for the best development of cotton and the growth was considerably retarded. Rains were beneficial, but cultivation and replanting was delayed in some places. Plant lice are reported on cotton in Southeastern Texas."

Wheat futures declined 2 cents in yesterday's trading on the Merchants' Exchange, owing to rains where needed in the Southwest and Kansas to relieve drouth, and more definite assertions that peace in Europe is near.

After a rather firm opening, values melted rapidly, with the only actual buying power coming for profit-taking shorts. Large receipts, bearish foreign and statistical news and perfect weather for the spring wheat crop were influences in the decline.

Corn lost 1 cent, in sympathy with wheat, and on perfect crop weather, bearish cables and a slack cash trade in the face of liberal receipts and large supplies in primary markets. Oats were quiet.

Week's Price Movements.

While price movements of wheat during last week were highly irregular, with the market at times looking like a runaway advance was in order, only to turn weak and appear as if the bottom was about to fall out, news generally favored the bears.

In the early trading prices advanced sharply on reports of high temperatures without rain in Oklahoma, but the official weather map showed maximum temperatures in the State below 87 degrees, which is not warm in Oklahoma at this season of the year. Then the bulls asserted that the crop was going back fast from lack of rainfall, but this was remedied in the late week, and values dropped sharply with reports of good rains in sections of the State, and a forecast for lower temperatures over Sunday.

Kansas also came in for considerable attention from the "crop killer," although the reports of damage were usually qualified in some manner, as the Chicago Board of Trade has placed a "censor" over damage reports sent in by so-called experts, and if their market forecasts are found out of line in the fall, the exchange will bar their messages over commission house wires.

Spring wheat reports were ideal, and although the acreage is reduced as compared with last year, even the "experts" had to admit that the new crop is starting under most favorable growing conditions.

Statistics Are Bearish.

Statistical news is decidedly a drag on values. The domestic visible supply of wheat still is about 20,000,000 bushels over last year's stock, and cutting of wheat will begin in the Southwest and Texas in the next 10 days. The world's visible of wheat is 100,000,000 bushels more than last year, not counting 66,000,000 bushels which Broomhall says are in Australia for export, against nothing last year. Canada has a visible supply nearly three times as large as last year, and receipts are rolling into Winnipeg at the rate of 600 to 800 cars a day, against 150 to 300 last year. These enormous arrivals are amply sufficient to supply the immediate demands of England and her war allies, and are reflected in practically no exports of United States wheat, which is shown in the official figures of total exports from last July to date, of 160,000,000 bushels less from this country than was sent out a year ago, during the same period.

Many traders are asserting that peace in Europe would mean high-priced wheat, but after all great wars low values nearly always prevail for at least a year, as the buying power of the nations at war invariably is reduced by poverty and loss of men, and strict economy is necessary until the next crop of the countries involved in the conflict has been harvested.

From the light foreign demand shown for wheat and the continued talk of peace, it would seem that supplies abroad are such that little if any export buying of United States wheat will be necessary until the new wheat is on the market. Should peace come, all channels of trade would be open, and there is no doubt wheat in large amounts tucked away in bins where shipping facilities have forced it to stay while supplies were bought in more available markets like America, Argentina and Canada.

This wheat, with the surplus of two Russian crops cut off from export markets by the closing of the Dardanelles, might prove a decided load on values should the war end, especially as England and her allies would have large war supplies of wheat on their hands, which they would have to find a market for.

Investing With an Eye On the Melon Patch

¶ Many corporations have adopted the policy of quietly allowing excess profits to accumulate, or else put them back into the business, to the enhancement of investment values. Thus a melon patch is cultivated for the enjoyment of stockholders.

¶ From time to time the accumulated profits are distributed in the shape of extra dividends. Or the added values are capitalized in new stock, which is divided among the shareholders in proportion to their holdings.

¶ Right now there are several big corporations which will shortly distribute stock dividends of from 50% to 200%, to their stockholders.

CATTLE PRICES REACH SHARPLY HIGHER RANGE

Week's Level Shows Gain of 25c to 40c; Sheep Also Are Strong.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS TABLE.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	13,677	11,667	12,575
Hogs	46,665	55,194	47,200
Sheep	24,099	16,696	18,407
Horses and mules	4,275	4,404	4,784

Cattle receipts were slightly heavier last week than the previous week. Steers made up the major portion of the receipts. There were lots of steers to choice steers on sale, but not a bullock bordering on the prime order was available. These were the kinds buyers wanted most. Good, bad and indifferent grades sold practically the same. Buyers wanted the beef and it was a good market. The common steers advanced fully 25c, while the good to choice grades showed 25c to 40c improvements, according to the quality. Good fills were weighed up, which also helped push up prices. The market closed at the high point of the year. Best steers sold at $10.25; these were yearling grades, while heavies topped at $10.20, with the bulk of the steers going from $8.25 to $9.35.

Butcher cattle also advanced. Yearling grades of steers and heifers were in good request. Market advanced 15c to 25c on these classes. The top was $10.25, with the bulk from $8 to $9. Cows sold strong to 10c higher. Top was $8.75, while the bulk of the good cows went from $6 to $7.50. Canners and cutters sold strong. Bulls were in good demand and sold strong. Top was $8.50. There was a fairly good assortment of vealers on sale. Market showed a 25c improvement. The top was $11.50 for the week, with a spread of $10.50 to $11.25 getting most of the vealers. Stockers and feeders were scarce. The demand was poor. Not many buyers were in the market. There are no bargains in these grades at present and only those feeders who absolutely need them are buying. The market was weak to 15c lower for the week.

Southern Cattle Market.

Texas steers featured the runs of Southern cattle last week. The offering was the heaviest in the past two months. New records were made. Few steers sold up to $9.25, with a string at $9.05. Grassers sold as high as $8.80. There were lots of good fed Texans at $8.75. Market was strong and active and sellers found opportunity to add around 25c to the previous week's price quotations. It was one of the best weeks in the department in some time. Prices at the close were at the top point in the history of the market on Texas steers.

Mixed stuff from the Southeast also sold strong and prices were 10c to 15c higher. Canner cows sold from $4.75 to $5, mostly with cutters from $5.25 to $5.50. Bulls sold as high as $7.25, with the bulk from $5.50 to $6.50. Good cows sold up to $8. Yearlings displayed an advance of 10c to 15c also. The bulk of the common heavy kinds went from $4.85 to $5, with lights around $6.25. There were good clearances each session.

The hog trade was on the decline the greater part of the week, although there was but a small number of hogs on the market. Just why prices were on the downward trend was strange under such light receipts, but prices have been on an extra high basis and buyers do not hesitate to break them at all opportunities. Heavy hogs with quality were extremely scarce.

The top of the market the fore part of the week was $10.15, and the bulk of the hogs sold at $9.80@10, but later the top was down to $9.90, and the bulk went at $9.65@9.85. The market was rather slow the greater part of the week on all kinds but the poorer grades. Pigs and lights suffered more than the good hogs. Rough packers as a rule went well, and showed but little or no loss.

Good hogs at the close of the week were going at $9.80@9.90, fair to medium grades $9.50@9.75, rough packers $9.35@9.65, best grade of lights under 165 lbs. $9.25@9.65, fair $8.75@9.15, best quality pigs under 125 lbs. $8.40@9, fair to medium grades $7.75@8.35, and the common ones around $7.50.

Sheep in Good Supply.

A much better supply was received than any previous week this year. Besides a right good representation of clipped Western lambs fed in local territory, there was a good representation of native sheep and spring lambs offered. A good share of the spring lambs were from Tennessee, and most of them were good quality, and the sheep offered were also pretty good, as a rule.

The fore part of the week prices were on the highest basis in the history of the trade, the best clipped lambs bringing $11.15, spring lambs $13.40, mutton sheep $8.70 and bucks $7, but later there was a break of 50c on all kinds, so that at the close of the week best springers were selling at $12.75, sheep $8.25, clipped lambs $10.65 and bucks $6.50.

Stockers, choppers, canners and culls sold pretty well all week, and the trade in general has put on new life, and the summer season is now on in earnest. Choppers and stockers sold at $5@6.50, canners and culls at $3@4, with some fair grades of thin sheep at $4@5. Heavy ewes, the latter part of the week, sold at $7.50. The demand from killers is for handy weight sheep and heavy ones are mighty hard to place on a satisfactory basis.

The inferior quality of horse stock was accountable for market conditions last week. A good many horses arrived of types which were undesirable. Any animal that could be classed as a draft, wagon, express or chunk type sold well, but there were many in-betweens that sold badly. Hig-priced big horses and chunks were a shade lower. Mediums were steady throughout. Foreign trade was a stimulating feature. For the first time in six months British, French, Italians and Belgians were out, together absorbing around 1000 head, which is getting back close to normal again.

Mules performed badly, the very best of miners only holding their own. The trade was confined to these and war mules, although the latter did not sell as they have heretofore. Big mules took another slump that cost shippers around $5 per head, and mediums were much lower.

NEWS AND FEATURES OF THE POULTRY WORLD

CAPONS ARE GOOD FOSTER MOTHERS: QUISENBERRY SAYS

Practice Common in England and France and Successfully Demonstrated in This Country.

By T. E. QUISENBERRY.
Former Director Missouri Poultry Experiment Station, Mountain Grove.

Nearly everyone who reads the poultry and farm papers, as well as hundreds who have tried it, are familiar with the fact that capons can be trained to brood and raise chicks. Not as many, however, know that capons can be made to successfully take the place of the hen and the incubator in actually sitting upon the eggs and hatching the chicks. Yet the practice is said to be quite common in England and France, and has been successfully tried in this country.

The method of procedure is as follows: A low, roomy nest is prepared in a quiet and sheltered spot in very much the same manner as for a turkey hen, then you are ready for your capon. For this purpose the capon should be gentle and more than a year old.

Having selected your bird, pluck a considerable number of feathers from his breast and rub the bare breast with weak mustard water, the purpose of this operation being to set up enough irritation so that the eggs will feel cool and comforting to the breast when placed under him. Then place the capon on the nest and shut him in. It will not be long until he will settle down in the proper positions. About dark place the eggs quietly under him.

The next morning he should be removed from the nest, fed, watered and put back. In order to avoid danger of breaking the eggs, for the first two or three mornings it is well to remove the eggs from the nest until the capon has been put back on it. In two or three days he will usually be taking on all the attributes of a broody hen.

When it is desired to use capons for brooding incubator chicks, somewhat the same method of procedure as above outlined will need to be gone through with. George Beuoy, whose word is authority along this line, thus tells how he uses capons for brooders.

Are the Best Brooders.

"Rightly handled, we have never seen a capon that would refuse to 'mother' a brood of newly-hatched chicks. In connection with the incubator, they have proved to be the best method of brooding the little chicks which we have ever tried. They are always ready to take the little fluffy balls of down and care for them until they are matured birds, if not weaned from them sooner. Where it is advisable to change the 'mother' capon from a bunch of older chickens to a brood of younger ones, it is, of course, necessary to wean him from the larger ones. This is accomplished best by shutting the capon up in a rather dark place for two or three days, entirely away from the older chicks. The younger chicks may then be placed under him some night and left with him the following day, after which he will usually take up with them and no further trouble will be experienced.

"It is no trouble to start a capon with little chicks in the first place. It is important that the capon be quite gentle, otherwise he will be more difficult to handle. For best results have a small yard with a coop in it. Place the capon in this yard a few days before you intend to give him the chicks. It will then give him time to get located and at home in his new quarters. If the capon has ever raised chicks before it is best that they be about one week old to start him in with.

As the brood coop has no perches in it, the capon will go to roost squatting on the floor. Just about dark, take the chicks out and place them under his wings, one or two at a time, until they are all under. The capon will not object to it, but will rather like it. Should he for any reason seem to be restless, tickle him under the chin a little and talk to him in a soothing voice, and all will soon be well.

"You will have to be up good and early the next morning to see how things are going. Usually the next morning the capon will be talking, scolding and hovering the chicks the same as an old hen. Sometimes one will seem to be in doubt—will hold up one foot in his feathers and not say much. Where they perform in this manner, take the chicks entirely away from them and try it again the second night, in the meantime keeping the capon in the coop, and the coop as dark as possible. By the second morning the most obstinate of them will be clucking and fighting for the brood. After they have once learned how to do it right, newly hatched chicks may be given to them with perfect safety. In warm weather one capon will care for 30 chicks, but as a general rule we think 20 is enough for one capon.

"Put the hen back to work on the laying job and let her fill the egg basket while 'Mamma Capon' scratches for the young chicks."

Poultry Paragraphs

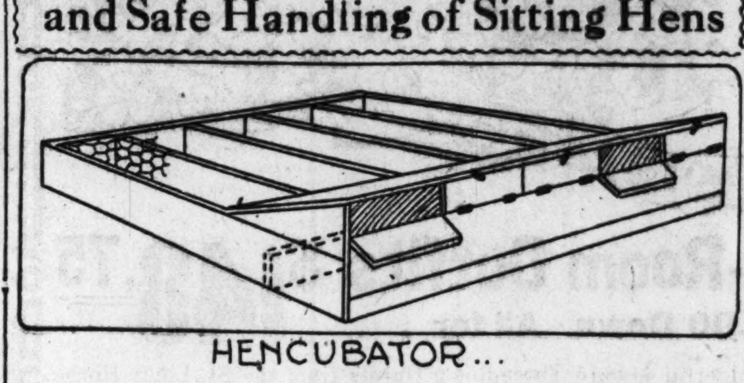
Keeping broken charcoal before the flock will go a long way towards keeping the birds in condition.

Guinea hens are the most persistent bug eaters of all the poultry tribe. This fact would be considered by anyone in doubt as to their farm value.

It is poor policy to use a long, gangling rooster for breeding. It is almost impossible to fill him up with feed.

Hens will relish bran better when scalded. A little linseed oil will make it stick together.

'Hencubator' That Affords Easy and Safe Handling of Sitting Hens



HENCUBATOR...

The man or woman who is "handy" in making appliances for the poultry house and yard, such as feeding troughs, nests, roosts and labor-saving devices, has decided advantage over other poultry raisers.

Everything should be plain and simple around the poultry house and yards and there are some common-sense appliances that will save money and labor and that will produce results. Of course, everything should be easily accessible and easily cleaned. A good rule in the poultry house is to have nothing that cannot be picked up and removed. Some of the metal appliances made for sale are inexpensive, light, durable, easily cleaned and convenient in arrangement.

A problem to many poultry raisers, especially to those who have limited quarters, is that of handling the sitting hens. They seem to be in the way. Often there is not a separate place for them, or such a place is provided with difficulty. Of course, they should be kept away from other birds of the flock.

A simple device, illustrated here, consists of a series of nests and runways all in one structure. The boards used for the four sides are 12 inches wide 7 feet long. The compartments are 18 inches square in one end under the roof, while the remaining 5 feet 6 inches of their length forms an open runway covered with chicken wire netting. A door at the back of each nest gives easy access for the examination of nests or eggs. At the further end of the runways feed and fresh water are supplied each day. There is room also for grit. If the ground is suitable the hen has a chance to dust herself when she gets off the nest. If the hen is rid of vermin before being put in such hatching quarters she is likely to keep so. Each hen is by herself undisturbed. She is easily cared for.

This "hencubator" is inexpensive. Such a five-compartment device will cost, for material, about $3.50. If eggs are good, satisfactory hatches may be expected from such a device as this. One breeder, who has incubators but prefers to raise the chicks with hens, uses two of these five-compartment hencubators. Ten hens and the incubator are "set" at the same time. After hatching the 10 hens can usually care for all the chicks if the hatch is not too good or the weather not too cool.

If the land is well drained this "hencubator" may be used out of doors under all weather conditions except those of cold winter.

Quisenberry's Answers to Poultry Problems

Breaking Up Broody Hens.

I have a flock of Rhode Island Reds which is doing very well, with the exception that every hen wants to set. What can I do to break them from it?—W. B. T., Bonne Terre, Mo.

It is a very easy matter to break broody hens of the desire to set. The best method I have ever used has been a broody coop, with a slatted bottom. The roof is made waterproof, two ends and one side are made of ordinary poultry netting, with a door in one end. The other side is made of lathes or slats run up and down so the hens can get their heads between the cracks to eat the food and drink the water which are placed on the outside of the slatted side. As soon as you find that your hens are becoming broody, if you will place them in this coop, in four days' time they are ready to go back to laying. The longer you delay placing the hen in the coop after you have discovered that she is inclined to broodiness, it will take you just that much longer to break her from the habit, and it will also take longer for her to begin to lay again. If you break the broody hens promptly, the hen organs remain in a laying condition and the yolks in the ovary will not be reabsorbed. Put the hens in these coops and feed them all you can get them to eat and rink. When a hen becomes broody she is usually in a laying condition, having the different parts of the egg partly developed. Because of remaining on the nest, lack of exercise and nourishment and because of loss of appetite, the hen takes the egg material back into her own system and uses it as nourishment. These coops should not be smaller than two feet wide and about three feet long. If you have a great many hens you can make the coops larger, but they should not be so large as to prevent you from reaching and picking out the hens when they are wanted.

Hens Walk Like Ducks.

I have some thoroughbred Plymouth Rock hens one year old. Three of them walk like ducks. What is the trouble? They weigh about seven or eight pounds. Combs are healthy looking, but they are very poor feeders. Please let me know through the poultry page in next Sunday's Post-Dispatch what I shall do for them.—Mrs. F., 3633 Cook avenue, St. Louis.

You do not state how your hens were being fed or housed, but unless you have them in a dry, comfortable place, the probabilities are that some of them have contracted rheumatism. If your birds are overcrowded or kept in close and poorly ventilated quarters, or if you have been feeding them too freely on egg-forcing foods or tonics, your birds might show symptoms similar to those which you mention. The treatment in any of these cases consists chiefly in removing the cause. Do not feed fat-producing foods, such as too much cornmeal or corn, etc. The weak birds should be removed to a pen to themselves. Substitute bran, wheat and oatmeal for corn or cornmeal. Give milk if possible and plenty of green food. If you have an overly vigorous male running with your hens, they may be suffering from an injured back. After examining the hens, if you feel that the trouble is due to rheumatism, I would advise rubbing the legs with tincture of arnica. Give them a dose of epsom salts, one-half teaspoonful to each hen. Dissolve this in water and feed it in a mash.

Young Chicks Dying.

Will appreciate any advice you can give me on the trouble I am having with my little chicks. I had a number of White Wyandottes and Buff Orpingtons. Part were hatched in an incubator and part under a hen. They were apparently lively, and when they were 3 or 4 days old began to die. What we have left are a little over 3 weeks old, but we are still losing two or three a day. They show no signs whatever of any disease. They eat heartily in the morning and I go out later and find them dead. We feed Conkey's buttermilk food at first and then bran, some hard-boiled eggs and chick food. They also have buttermilk and a nice run, with plenty of green stuff. The parent stock are all healthy, strong chickens.—G. T., Dallas, Tex.

Before writing this inquiry I wish you had taken the trouble to make a postmortem examination of some of the chicks and reported the condition of the various organs as you found them. Are you sure that the buttermilk you are using is of good quality? If it is being obtained from a creamery the milk might be at fault in this case. Examine your chicks for head lice. Also examine for lice under the wings. Chop some onions fine and mix them with your feed, feeding them from the first. Dissolve one level teaspoonful of epsom salts in a little water and mix this with some mash, giving one teaspoonful to each eight chicks that range in age from one to five weeks old. There is nothing else that I could recommend to do in addition to what you are doing, without more definite information as to the condition of the various organs. Perhaps your method of brooding is responsible for the trouble which you are having. You failed to state how your chicks are being brooded.

Mash to Produce Weight in Broilers

The main object in producing broilers is to force them for weight by giving plenty of fattening feeds. The birds will do best if they are kept in separate lots of not more than 50 each.

A good mash to produce weight rapidly is made of six parts by weight of corn meal, four parts low grade wheat flour, two parts bran or middlings, mixed with skimmilk or buttermilk to the consistency of oatmeal porridge. If no milk is available one part of beef scrap should be added to the mixture, moistening it with water, just enough to make it crumbly. This mash should be fed liberally through the day, but for the last feed in the evening it is better to give them all the cracked corn they will eat. They should have green feed daily. During the last two to three weeks of the feeding period it is a good plan to keep this stock confined in small pens.

The most profitable broilers are those that are ready for market early. March and April hatched chicks are best for this purpose, as they also are for layers. The production of broilers offers an excellent opportunity to dispose of the cockerels and undesirable pullets in these early hatches. As soon as the sex can be distinguished the pullets wanted for layers should be removed and the remaining chicks fed for rapid growth, either for broilers or fries. Young birds weighing from ¾ pound to two pounds are designated as broilers, while those over two pounds are known as fries. Then general purpose breeds, such as Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island reds and orpingtons are best for the broiler market. The chicks from these breeds should reach two pounds in 10 to 12 weeks. White chickens make the most attractive and most easily dressed broilers, as their pin feathers are not so apparent when prepared for the market. They are marketed alive as well as dressed. If dressed, considerable care is necessary so that they will reach market in a neat, attractive condition.

Good Egg-Tester From Old Shoe Box

Any poultry raiser can make a very useful egg-tester out of a large shoe box, or any other cardboard box that is large enough to be set over a common kerosene lamp. One end of the box should be taken out, which makes it easier to set it over the lamp.

In one side, opposite the flame of the lamp, a hole a little larger than a quarter should be cut. Another hole about the size of a dollar should be cut in the top of the box to allow the heat to escape. An electric light bulb on the end of a cord is generally considered more satisfactory for egg-testing than a lamp, and a smaller box may then be used. The bulb is simply suspended in the box so that it will be opposite the smaller hole. The testing should be done in a dark room.

In thus testing the eggs they are held in front of the small hole and, if necessary, turned around once or twice to enable one to get a full view of their contents. A fresh egg will look perfectly clear, as will also an infertile egg from the incubator or from under a hen. A fertile egg in which incubation has begun will have a small, dark spot in it. This is the embryo chick, and if it is living many little blood veins will be seen extending from this embryo to all parts of the egg. If the embryo is dead and the egg has been under incubation at least 36 hours, the blood will have settled away from the embryo toward the edges of the yolk. In some cases this will form an irregular circle, and this is what suggested the name of "blood ring" for this condition. Not all eggs with dead embryos will show this ring. In some of them only a streak of blood will be visible.

This method of testing is useful not only in ascertaining the fertility of eggs after hatching has started, but it may also be put to use in testing eggs for freshness when bought from the store, or when selling them, whenever a nest containing eggs of doubtful age is found.

Many Advantages in Colony Houses

Although found on the large commercial poultry farms for years, colony houses are coming to be more generally used by the average poultry raiser as their value is appreciated.

There are several advantages in the use of this house that appeal to poultry raisers with enough ground space to make their use possible. Most important of these is the fact that they enable the poultryman to keep broods of different ages and sizes separate, where they will have plenty of room. Any procedure that will prevent overcrowding, whether the birds are young or old, is an advantage. If the chicks are hatched in an incubator, each hatch may be put into a separate colony house, where they may make their home until mature or until disposed of as broilers, fries, etc. In case the hatching is done by hens, three or four may be set at one time and the resulting hatches turned loose in a colony house, with one of the hens to mother them. Many poultry raisers have found that this plan makes it possible to bring a considerably larger percentage of chicks to maturity than with the small brood coops.

Building the colony houses on runners makes it possible to move them about, thus providing fresh range whenever desired. An excellent location for colony houses is the orchard, where the presence of the chicks serves a double purpose. While getting fat on the vegetation and bugs and worms to be found there, they are destroying countless numbers of injurious insects. The ground being partially shaded by the trees is another advantage on the hot days of late spring and early summer. Farmers also have found colony houses with broods of chickens, moved about in fields where no crops could be injured, a very good means of reducing the number of crop-destroying insects, especially grasshoppers.

Humane Way to Stop Hen's Sitting Desire

A variety of cruelties practiced upon broody hens to break them of the sitting notion are neither effective nor advisable for any other reason. We have known farm poultry raisers to duck them in water in the belief that this would cool the feverish condition of the bird and cause her to forget her desire to hatch. Others will shut them up without food or water in the belief that the broodiness will be starved out of them. Still others, not wishing to go to any trouble in the matter, merely throw them off the nests from time to time, but this neither breaks up the habit nor saves the eggs.

These drastic measures are effective only to the extent that leaves the hen exhausted and sometimes half dead. Naturally, this sort of treatment also is a detriment to a bird's laying ability. While a hen's desire to sit is merely nature asserting itself, this desire may be humanely and effectively broken up by very simple means. The most important feature of this treatment is that the hen be kept in an enclosure where it will be impossible for her to sit and feel body heat under her. This may be accomplished by putting her in a coop or box with a slated or wire bottom. If the entire coop is made of slats to allow the free passage of air, so much the better. By hanging this coop to the limb of a tree the feverish condition will soon be allayed and the desire to sit will be forgotten. Feed and water should be supplied regularly, as the keeping away of food and water is no cure for broodiness except, as stated before, in weakening and exhausting her. Plenty of grit and green food, as well as animal food, will help to soon get them to laying again.

CHILDREN DANCE "IN TOYLAND" FOR PURE MILK FUND

Boys and Girls' Campaign in Conjunction With Post-Dispatch Is Anticipated.

Anticipating the demand for funds with which to meet the cost of pure milk and free ice for babies in the congested districts of the city, and the early inauguration of the summer campaign by the boys and girls in conjunction with the Post-Dispatch, pupils of Miss Cecile Lowenstein gave a benefit performance for the Fund at the New Grand Central Theater yesterday afternoon and last night. It was a dance pantomime constructed around "In Toyland." The entertainment was witnessed and thoroughly enjoyed by large audiences.

The initial number, given by 10 little misses, ranging in age from 4 to 14 years, under the leadership of Ruth Freund as Queen, served to bring the audience into enthusiastic sympathy with the little people. The costuming was dainty and appropriate, and the movement of the "fairies" gracefully poetic.

The little ones thus serving to arouse active and kindly interest of the spectators were Hester Mayer, Hannah Morris, Frances Sandperl, Bernice Wise, Marian Sherman, Henrietta Freund, Sylvia Levy, Virginia Wise, Ruth Gram and Estelle Engel, with their Queen, Ruth Freund.

Baby Bumps Dance.

This number was followed by the "Baby Bumps" doll dance, in which Virginia Sankey, Rosalind Franklin, Myra Littman and Marion Freund fully maintained the standard of grace and skill. Then came three solo dances, by Nathan Gutfreund as a "Sailor Boy," Sylvia Levy as an "Old-Fashioned Doll," and Ruth Gram as a "Japanese Doll," each of them dancing into the affection of the audience. These were followed by a captivating number, the "Kewpie Dance," to which the six smallest members of the company gave a swing and dash irresistable in charm. The principals in this feature were Ruth Allina, Bernice Jacobson, Constance Lowenstein, Emily Lou Garthhoeffner, Myra Gram and Hortense Golluber. The enthusiasm aroused by these tots was not diminished by the two solo numbers which ensued, a "Peasant Doll" dance by Estelle Engel, a "French Doll" dance by Marian Sherman, and the "Teddy Bears" by Bernice and Virginia Wise.

During the intermission there was an exemplification of the English country or folk dances, which were presented by older ones among Miss Lowenstein's pupils, including the Misses M. O. and O. A. Baier, Irene Gibson, Norma Hurl and Kate Adams, and Messrs. Charles Cooley, G. Overstreet, Arthur Beyer, G. T. Moss and Jerome Fattman. The impression made was distinctly favorable.

Dance by Miss Lowenstein.

The final section of the program included a "bird" dance by Frances Sandperl, "Boy Scout doll" dance by Lewis Lowenstein, a "butterfly" dance by Hannah Morris, "top" dance by Henrietta Freund, a "balloon" dance by Hester Mayer, a duet dance, "The Rag Dolls," by Norma Schwarz and Pauline Levy, a "Russian" dance by Miss Cecile Lowenstein, and an impressive finale by the entire company of children. The number by Miss Lowenstein was a strictly heroic creation, calling for the utmost expenditure of physical endurance and mastery of technique, and both these requirements were abundantly met.

"CINDERELLA" IS GIVEN BY CHILDREN TO HELP THE BABIES

The charming fairy tale of "Cinderella" was dramatized and cleverly produced by girls and boys of Maryland avenue, netting $10.30 for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund.

The familiar fable lost none of its beauty and instructiveness in the production, and in this stood as notable evidence of the well-directed ingenuity and industry of the young people. Even the costuming, dainty in effect and correct in design, was the work of the children, made of tissue paper. The performance was marked by admirable grace and finish and delighted an audience of more than 50 persons.

The entertainment was given on the lawn of Beatrice Van de Marks, 4384 Maryland avenue. Those who participated were Marie Boggiano, 4300 Maryland, Cinderella; Beatrice Van de Mark, 4384 Maryland, stepmother; Rhoderick Weiman, 4327 Maryland, Prince Charming; Marie Lechinsky, 4326 Maryland, king; Bernice Weimann, 4327 Maryland, fairy godmother; Mabeth Gerber, 4335 Maryland, and Martha Gail, 4350 Maryland, stepsisters.

At the close of the performance ice cream and other dainties were sold by the children, proceeds from which reinforced the sum obtained from ticket sales.

W. P. Boynton was elected president; J. B. Hastings, vice president; Sidney Gaskins, secretary, and George E. Root, executive officer.

Upper Alton Woman, 77, Dies.

Mrs. Margaret Sinclair, wife of Alexander Sinclair, died on West Brown street in Upper Alton yesterday. She was 77 years old.

Horse Electrocuted by Fallen Trolley Wire.

A horse driven by Charles V. Leady of 2300 Locust street, St. Louis, a baker at the Alton Baking and Catering Co., was electrocuted early yesterday morning by a trolley wire knocked down by a maple tree blown down on Washington avenue yesterday morning.

WOMEN AS ELECTION OFFICERS

Volunteers to Serve Free of Charge at Alton, to Hold Down Expense.

Women may serve as judges and clerks of the special election to be held in Alton the latter part of July to set aside a park district in order that funds may be regularly assessed for the upkeep of parks. The opinion that they could so serve was given by Attorney-General Lucey of Illinois.

In order to keep down the expense of holding the election, men and women interested in civic improvement work have volunteered to serve as judges and clerks free of charge.

Gospel Tent Blown Down by Storm.

The high wind storm of yesterday morning blew down the large gospel tent in which meetings were being conducted at Wood River by Evangelists Bauer, Johnson and Whitehall. A large number of worshipers gathered on the grounds during the morning and volunteered their services to clear the grounds and raise the tent for the services last night.

SMALL INVESTORS MAKE FORTUNES
Do You Want a Share in These Rich Fields?

OUR PROPERTY IS SITUATED IN THE Famous Bald Hill District

We will develop this property for oil. You can secure an interest in the land and share in all wells to be drilled by our company on investing as little as $15 on easy payments. Your interest in land may prove to be worth thousands—to say nothing of any profits you may get from oil. Our co-operative plan offers small investors wonderful opportunity. Others have made fabulous profits—why not you? Oil is worth $1.55 per barrel—some wells produce many thousand barrels daily.

The map below shows the location of our property in the Bald Hill district. The dots represent oil wells in this district.

Women's Relief Corps and Other Auxiliaries to Help in Commemoration.

Preliminaries to the formal observance of Memorial day Tuesday at Jefferson Barracks by the G. A. R. will begin today in accordance with plans announced by the General Committee of the G. A. R., of which Charles F. Vogel is chairman. The various posts of the G. A. R. and other organizations today will decorate the graves of their comrades in virtually all the cemeteries of the city. In addition special details will decorate the statues and monuments in the public parks.

Blair Post will have charge of the decoration of Gen. Frank P. Blair's statue and Gen. Franz Sigel's equestrian statue in Forest Park, and of Gen. John McNeil's monument and of the graves of Gen. Blair and other comrades in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

The Gen. Lyon Post and the Gen. C. D. Wolff Camp will decorate the Lyon monument in Lyon Park and the monument to former Gov. Thomas C. Fletcher in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Women at Grant's Statue.

The statue of Gen. Grant, at the city hall, will be decorated by the Woman's Relief Corps, the Ladies of the G. A. R. and other women's auxiliaries. Graves of comrades also will be decorated today by Hassendeubel Post and Rassieur Camp, Harding Post and Fremont Camp, Ransom Post, Meumann Post and Shaw Post. Bailey Council 961, Knights of Columbus, will assemble at Cavalry Cemetery, Florissant avenue gate, at 10 a. m. to decorate the graves of its former members. This council will hold memorial exercises Tuesday in Glennon Hall, Knights of Columbus Building. Memorial sermons will be preached in many of the churches today.

Arrangements have been made for the exercises at Jefferson Barracks Tuesday, when the graves of 16,000 soldiers in the National Cemetery will be decorated. The veterans will go to the barracks on a special train leaving Union Station at 2 p. m. and will assemble on the parade grounds at 2:45.

It is planned to have in the line of march, in the following order, members of United Spanish War Veterans, Sons of Veterans, Army of the Philippines, United States Naval Veterans, National Indian War Veterans, Army and Navy Union, National Birthday Association, Committee of Women's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans Ladies' Auxiliary, Ladies' Union Veteran Legion, Committee of the Ladies of the G. A. R., Ladies' Auxiliary of United Spanish War Veterans, Army and Navy Union Ladies' Auxiliary, and of the various G. A. R. Posts.

Rassieur Grand Marshal.

Major Leo. Rassieur will be Grand Marshal. Each veteran will carry a basket of flowers and a small flag to place on the soldiers' graves. There will be music by the United States Army Band and salutes by detachments of troops. The Rev. Thomas Hagerty, himself a veteran, will offer a prayer from the G. A. R. ritual. Lincoln's Gettysburg address will be read by William T. Niccolls and the Rev. Samuel Cole will offer the benediction.

Other memorial exercises planned for Tuesday are those of the St. Louis Lodge No. 9 of the Elks. These exercises will be held at Elks' Rest, Bellefontaine Cemetery, at 3:00 p. m. The program includes ritualistic services and a memorial address by the Rev. Edmund Duckworth.

The holiday schedule of mail deliveries and collections will be observed Memorial Day. There will be only one delivery, in the morning, in the residence section, and only about half the usual deliveries in the business section. There will be three collections in residence sections.

PRIEST QUOTES POET IN BEHALF OF AN ASSAILED VICE FILM

Judge Shields to Decide Motion to Enjoin Police From Interference This Week.

Whether the Police Department should be permanently enjoined from interfering with the management of the Central Theater, at Sixth and Market streets, in showing a motion picture which reveals scenes in various vice districts will be determined by Circuit Judge Shields after he finishes hearing testimony this week.

Application for an injunction was filed by the Grand Central Theater Co., of which City Collector Koeln is president, alleging that the police had threatened to seize the film on the ground that various scenes in it are objectionable. Pending termination of the suit a temporary restraining order was granted.

The plaintiff called as witnesses in favor of the picture the Rev. C. F. O'Leary, pastor of Notre Dame Church, William Sievers, secretary of the theater company; Walter B. Laumann, a jewelry salesman, and two newspaper reporters.

Father O'Leary testified he had seen the picture and that he thought a moral lesson was taught by it. "Vice to be hated must be seen," he quoted. "But seen too often, familiar with her face, we first endure, then pity, then embrace," interrupted Judge Shields, finishing the quotation.

The picture is based upon the report of the Illinois Senatorial Vice Commission. Lieutenant-Governor O'Hara of Illinois and Mayor Beall of Alton are shown in the film.

MANAGER DEPARTS TO ARRANGE FOR TOUR FOR THE SYMPHONY

Conductor Zach Is in the East, Making Up the Programs for Next Season.

Arthur J. Gaines, manager of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will depart Thursday on a three weeks' tour of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi and Kentucky, to make arrangements for a concert tour of the orchestra immediately at the close of the 1916-1917 season. He has been in communication with several of the largest cities of the South and Southwest, and the prospects are favorable for a full booking for a month's concerts.

Max Zach, director, is in the East working on the program for next season. The Executive Board is spending double the amount of the past season for its soloists. The last one obtained was Leopold Godowsky, the Polish pianist, who played here about a month ago. Among the vocalists who have been engaged are Mme. Schumann-Heink, Alma Gluck, Frieda Hempel and Emilio de Gogorza, the Spanish baritone; two composer pianists, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach and Percy Grainger; Efrem Zimbalist and Mischa Elman, the Russion violinists, and Josepf Hofmann, the pianist.

The Board of Government of the Symphony Society is working to obtain the $50,000 guarantee subscription. At the present time the seat sales amount to two-thirds of the entire receipts of last season.

The Associated Press News Service is received and printed exclusively by the Post-Dispatch in the St. Louis evening field.

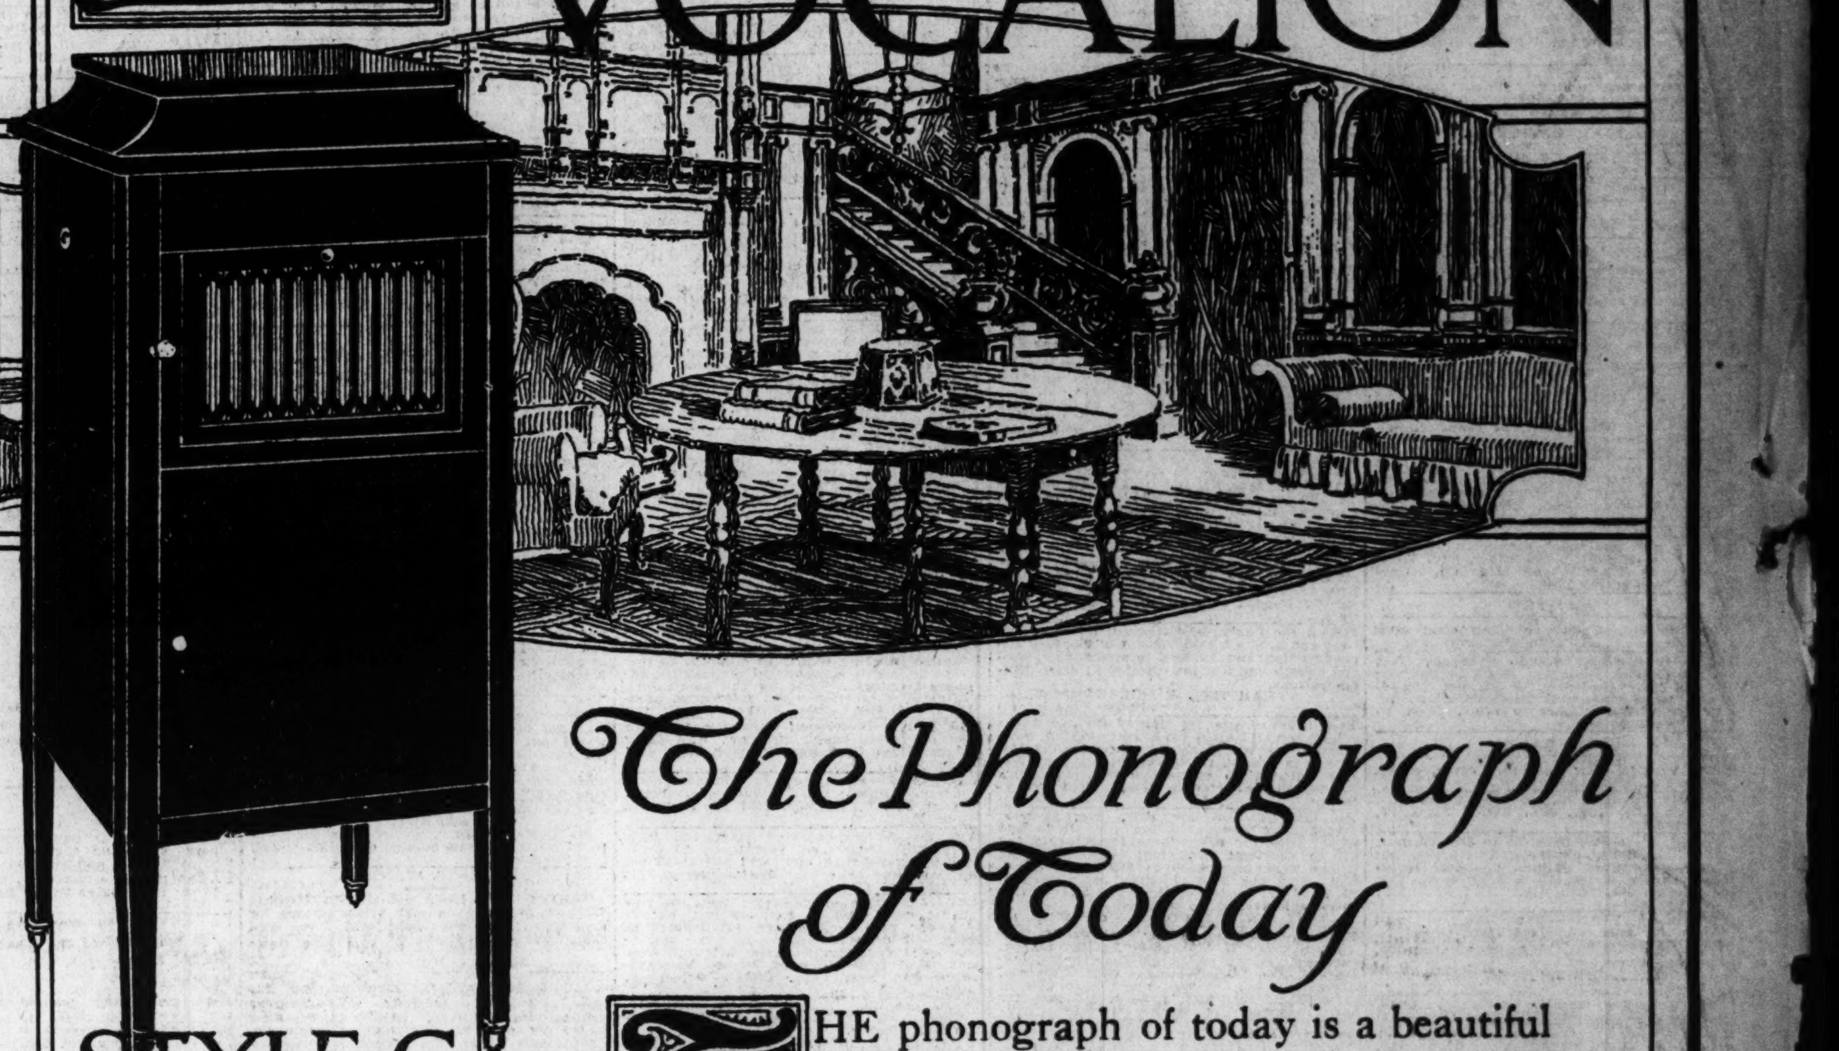
AEOLIAN-VOCALION



The Phonograph of Today

STYLE-G
Price
$100

Delivered to you for an Initial payment of

THE phonograph of today is a beautiful instrument—beautiful to look at and beautiful to hear. Its fine lines, its delicate proportions, its rich case-woods, no longer reflect the conventional art of the cabinet designer. Instead, it is the unmistakable production of the artist and the atelier.

Its tone is no longer typical of the phonograph. Gone is the effect of stridency hitherto apparently inseparable from that instrument. Instead, this great, new phonograph holds a mirror to nature itself. Natural tones—vocal and instrumental—come from it, now rich and deep and strong, now soft and sweet and infinitely delicate.

And above all, the phonograph of today is no longer simply a machine of stereotyped performance. Instead it has become an instrument of personal musical expression. Playing automatically like other phonographs when desired, it offers in addition, the priceless privilege of self-expression in music which only those who play, or sing, have hitherto enjoyed.

The home of the "Phonograph of Today", which is now available to everyone, is at Aeolian Hall. Its name, already famous throughout the entire country, is the Aeolian-Vocalion.

No musical instrument ever made has met with such immediate and unbounded success as the Aeolian-Vocalion. The public and the musical world were waiting for just such a phonograph—nearer to nature in its reproductions, less stridency in its tone, more real beauty in its looks. And something else, which had not been anticipated, a phonograph which could be used when desired, as a real musical instrument for the expression of each one's instinctive musical emotions.

Let no one think that the Aeolian-Vocalion, because of its distinguished superiority, costs more than other phonographs of relatively comparable styles. For while its magnificent Art Styles cost more than phonographs ever have before—because there never have been phonographs like them before—prices of Aeolian-Vocalions in regular or conventional cases, are the same as phonographs of other make.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear husband and our father, John Keller, who departed this life May 29, 1912.

Time rolls on, it will not stay,
How I felt since that sad day,
With one so loving, kind and true,
How hard it was to part with you.
In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one I loved so dearly
In his lonely, silent grave.
All the world is gray with shadows,
Clouds have dimmed the sunset glow,
Just four years, dear, since you left me,
Yet it seems so long ago.

Have You Learned, as Many Others Have, How to Use This, the Most Tireless Force That Man Has Harnessed?

Most persons have a pride in being "modern" in dress, in information, in home-surroundings, and in their mode of living, nor are they slow to make use, in their daily lives, of the most "modern" things in the world—the most "up-to-date" convenience of nowadays' life—the most tireless force that man has yet harnessed and impressed into his service—"want advertising."

For instance, last month the Post-Dispatch printed 68,000 want ads, 12,000 relating to employment, 16,000 to homes, rooms and real estate, 14,000 to buying and selling, 3000 to business opportunities and financial, leaving nearly 23,000 for miscellaneous business notices, lost, found and personal.

Phone your want. Call 6600—Olive or Central. Or leave the ad with your nearest druggist.

Can You Beat These Prices?

Leave quality out of the question for just a moment.

Forget about a perpetual Park at your doorway, never mind about restricted property all around you, neglect superfine internal improvements, blind yourself to handsome homes already built or building. Think of just one thing—

Can You Get Anything Else You'd Have at $60 a Foot?

You can't. There isn't any more. St. Louis residence property like this is not for sale anywhere else at these figures.

So much for Price. As to Quality, take the University car to Trinity and Berlin and let our salesman show you

BEAUTIFUL

SOUTHMOOR

—BRENTMOOR DISTRICT

Offers Ideal Home Sites at Moderate Prices

SOUTHMOOR has every advantage anyone could wish for in the way of location, exclusiveness and improvements.

Southmoor is on Pennsylvania avenue—300 yards south of Wydown avenue—immediately south of Brentmoor and Forest Ridge. It overlooks Forest Park, Washington University and Hillcrest on the east and the broad valleys of Webster Groves and Kirkwood on the west. It is from 60 to 80 feet higher than Lindell boulevard at Skinker road. Southmoor is convenient to schools and churches.

Southmoor's restrictions and improvements are practically the same as Brentmoor's. The owners either live in Southmoor or Brentmoor or expect to build homes there. Naturally they are interested in securing the best conditions, and not being forced to sell, purchasers are assured of protection, and that lots will be disposed of only to desirable home-builders. Under no circumstances will Southmoor lots be auctioned. Streets, sidewalks, gutters, sewers and gas are all in and paid for, and are of the best—the lasting kind.

Lots are of generous width, with an average depth of about 200 feet, but not large enough to be burdensome. As a special inducement to early buyers, we are authorized to make very low prices.

Go out to Southmoor and see for yourself what an attractive homesite it is. Take the Clayton car to Pennsylvania avenue and walk 300 yards south to the entrance, or drive out Lindell boulevard and Wydown avenue.

IT IS FORESIGHT

Not hindsight, that lays the foundation of a great fortune in the undeveloped lands in the Little River Drainage District, Southeast Missouri, present a rare opportunity for investment at present prices, which are ridiculously low; I can sell you as good unimproved land as can be found in the district at $40 to $65; the drainage tax will average under $15; it can be cleared for $20, and much of it is $300 land; I have inspected every tract listed with me and none of the soil looks under the $200 class; I have 28 tracts, aggregating nearly 12,000 acres, to offer, and am satisfied I will sell them all before snow flies. Are you to be one of the lucky purchasers? Box Y-239, Post-Dispatch.

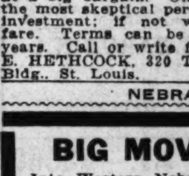
Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co., largest land owners in Southeast Missouri, now selling their rich, mellow, alluvial, cut-over corn land, that will double and triple in price as sure as day follows night, on most liberal terms, 10 per cent cash, 10 annual payments, with only 5 per cent interest. Where else can you equal it?

From Feb. 1, 1915, to date, we have sold 29,830 acres to 230 different people. Does not that record prove that it must be a bargain?

Write us for sales record sheet showing names of purchasers, also for booklet containing full information. Address Department 3,
HIMMELBERGER-HARRISON LAND SELLING CO., Cape Girardeau, Mo. (c)



Southeast Missouri corn, alfalfa and wheat farms. We have several thousand acres of improved and unimproved rich black soil located in Stoddard and Mississippi counties, which are known to be one of the most fertile sections of the country. Corn, 70 to 90 bushels; wheat, 24 to 34 bushels; alfalfa, 4 to 5 crops per year. It will pay you to investigate, as it is the coming section and being settled very rapidly by Illinois and Iowa farmers. The same land will be worth from $125 to $200 per acre within a few years. We offer this land at a big bargain. One trip will convince the most skeptical person that it is a sure investment; if not will refund railroad fare. Terms can be had from 5 to 10 years. Call or write for list of farms. E. E. HETHCOCK, 320 Third National Bank Bldg., St. Louis.

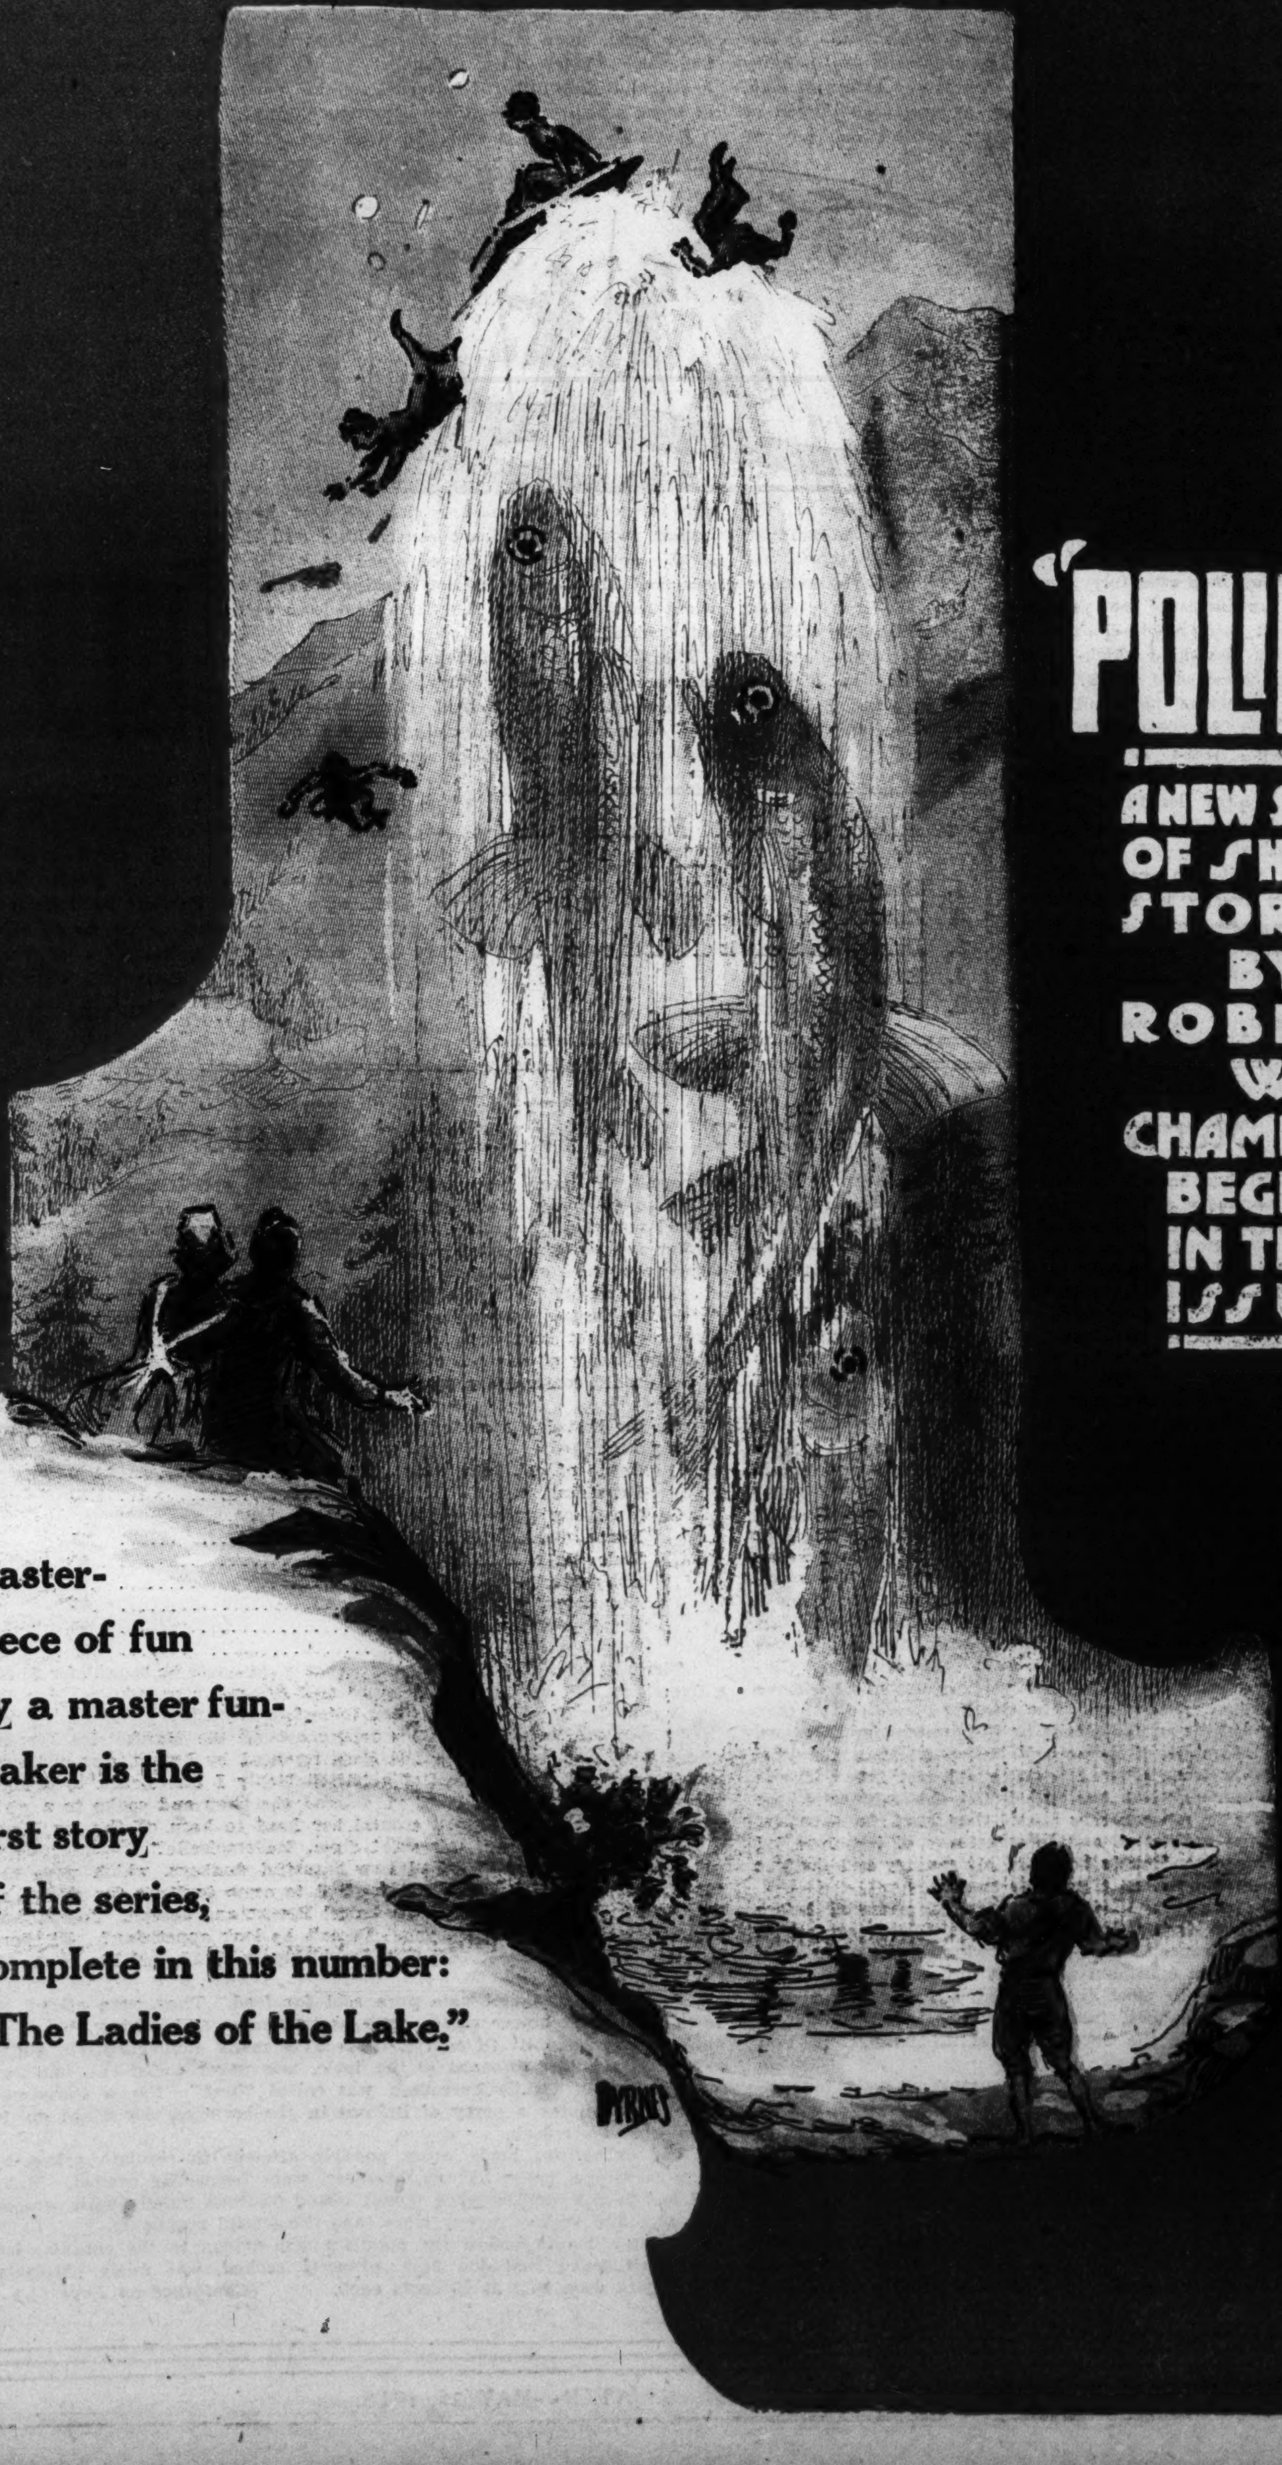
ST. LOUIS, MO., MAY 28, 1916

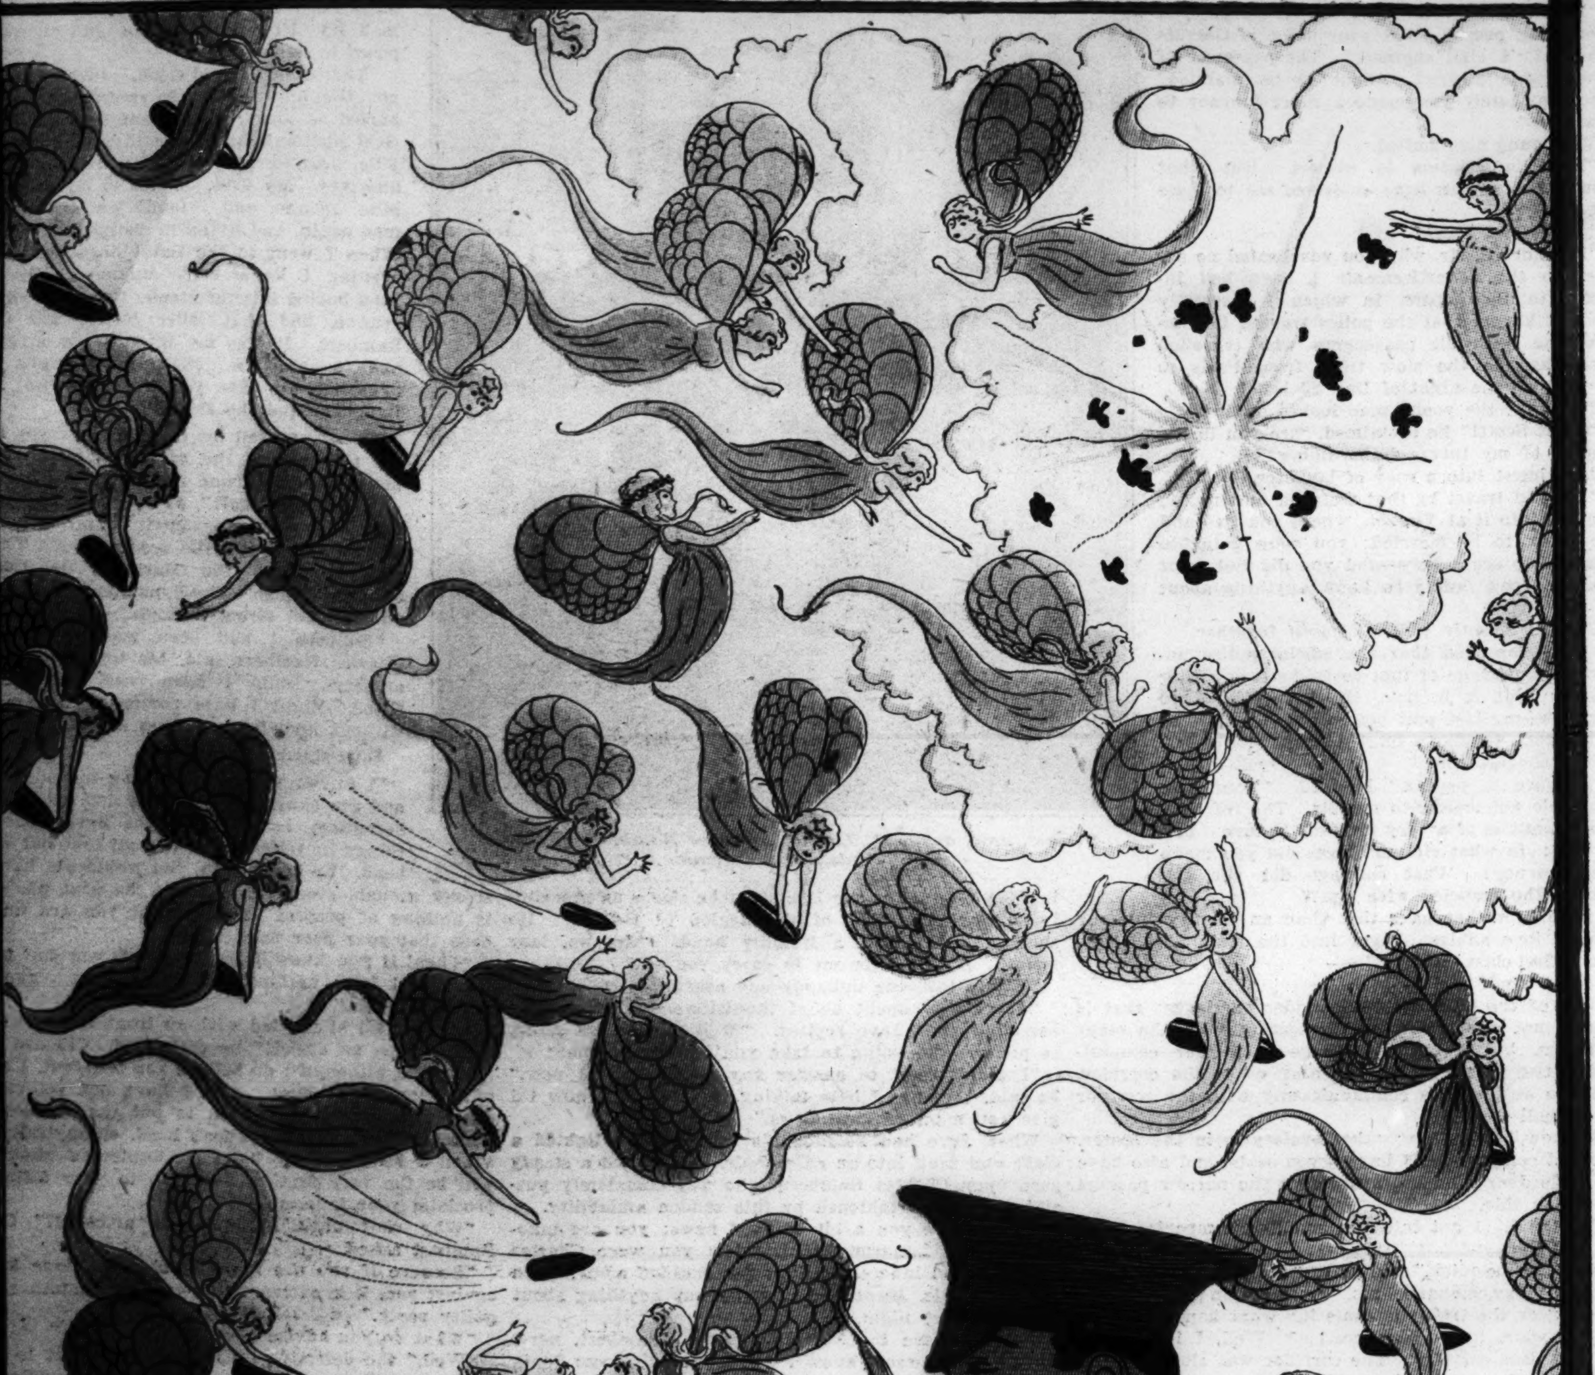


"POLICE!!!"

A NEW SERIES OF SHORT STORIES BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS, BEGINS IN THIS ISSUE.

A master-piece of fun by a master fun-maker is the first story of the series, complete in this number: "The Ladies of the Lake."

A Fairy Story From the Trenches



HERE is a delicious little fairy story that was born in the trenches of France. A British soldier wrote it for his niece, aged six, at home. It was published anonymously in a London publication and is herewith reproduced:

"You know, 'or'nery' people who don't know nuffin and who think reason explains everything would just tell you the reason why most bullets don't hit anybody is just that they miss 'em. But people who really understand—I mean people who have imagination to get up in their dreams and go out and see the fairies dancing on the dewy sward when the sunbeams twinkle on the crystal globules—these people know better. And I can tell you just how it is.

"You see, the fairies have eyes like marigolds and as keen as eagles'. They see 10,000 times as quick as mortals do, and they move just as speedily as thoughts do. They see the bullets coming out of the rifles; and as it comes, each bullet is bestridden by a fairy, who tweaks its nose and guides it harmless along and the fairy sings sweetly all the time.

"That is why when a bullet whizzes past your head you hear it humming like a bee, or droning like a bumblebee, or maybe whistling or whining or singing. But sometimes you don't even hear that, and yet the bullet doesn't hit you. You just hear it pass with a breathing whisper or a gusty noise. That is when no fairy has seen it in time to get astride and guide it, but all the fairies near a soldier just gather round and blow it past."

"Sometimes the bullet gets so white hot on its way that the fairy has to jump off, and then perhaps somebody gets hurt, so now all fairies are getting asbestos pants for their spring costumes. Don't you think this is jolly?"

HERE ARE ROCKEFELLER'S LIFE RULES

GOOD FOR 100 YEARS

By Dr. H. F. Biggar Sr.

(John D. Rockefeller's physician, who says the oil king will live to be 100 years old.

DR. HAMILTON F. BIGGAR SR., who has been John D. Rockefeller's private physician for the last quarter of a century, has often declared that the oil king will live to be a hundred years old, barring accidents, of course. Mr. Rockefeller will be 77 July 8 and his splendid physical condition speaks even louder for Dr. Biggar's claims than the physician himself.

This magazine recently asked Dr. Biggar how it is possible to live to be 100 years old. The following article explains his theory to attain that age—a theory that John D. Rockefeller is following:

HUMAN life upon the earth has been subjected to change since the ape-man of Java appeared some 5000 years ago. Looking at this Java man we are rather glad that human appearance can change for the better. The variations that we are more familiar with are the differences in bodily proportions between the ancient Greeks and ourselves. The stature of man in the time of Phidias was nine times the length of his head. In our own time heads have increased in size with a more general mental activity and bodies have decreased in size with the more sedentary habits of man, so that today your body is seven times the length of your head instead of nine. Recent excavations in Hungary show that Attila's company of adventurers were frequently magnificent giants of seven feet. So simple and healthful have the Hungarians been during the last 1500 years, that it is not uncommon today to see, back in the mountains where the race is pure, men seven feet in height who are vigorous at 100.' During the evil days of the dark ages the height of man increased. At the beginning of the Reformation we find that the most favored class wore armor that would crowd a man today; the reason for the long rows of squat looking armor in the British Museum is that men were actually four inches shorter 500 years ago. Far more interesting than these physical changes is the fact that the average span of life has lengthened. Three hundred years ago it was less than twenty years, today it is over forty; in the last 40 years the average length of life of man has increased four years and of woman over five years.

To attain age without being aged—don't worry. I am inclined to think it is the tranquility of the Slav mind which has as much to do in keeping him young at 90 as his much-talked-of Bulgarian buttermilk. Not that I decry diet or the soothing effect of buttermilk upon one's arteries; but even before diet eschew the American fretful habit of mind, and achieve mental poise and joy. Much is being said about diet. The chief thing to remember is not to acquire overweight if you would also acquire length of years. Underweights live longer than overweights. Escaping consumption in early life the underweight is fairly safe, while the overweight seldom attains old age; usually he succumbs to some disease of the heart, brain, stomach or to diabetes. The accepted standard of weight of a man at 40 is 150 pounds, and his height is 5 feet 6 inches. For every inch above 5 feet 6 inches add 3 per cent of the weight. The standard of weight increases with age in little men up to 45, in middle-sized men up to 50, and in tall men up to 60.

In keeping your weight at the average, be sure you drink enough water between your meals to keep clear of eye and pink of skin with no lurking yellows. Fresh, pure water, two or three quarts of it a day will do it, and make that brave little machine, your heart, rejoice in having good, clean fluid to work upon; in fact, "the entire organ recital of the man wonderful" will be grateful. The savages and our furred brother attend to this matter better than we do. If people drank more good, plain distillata there would be fewer journeys to Marienbad and French Lick. Faithful is the word the poets use for the heart and faithfully it attends to the pumping of over 15,000 tons of blood a year, so give this trusty little engine all the water it desires.

Exercise, by all means, so that every muscle can throw off its waste and keep in useful running order. Mr. Sanford Bennet's scheme of exercising in bed is far better done every day than 36 holes of golf on a Saturday and a swivel chair the rest of the week.

More energy is stored up in sleep than in any other way. The conditions of sleep have improved vastly. It is customary now to sleep with fresh air, whereas a century ago only supposed freaks risked exposing themselves to the night air. Where we have gained in quality, with the coming of gas and electricity we have lost in quantity. Washington was nothing if not conventional and it was his custom to retire at 9. Jefferson must have turned in early, because he never let the sun find him in bed in the morning. There is something in the adage about beauty sleep, for sleep after sundown carries you farther than sleep after midnight.

The increased height of men and the lengthening span of life are largely due to improved methods of living, eating, sleeping, pure foods, outdoor exercises and better sanitary conditions. If we continue to improve our habits of eating, take outdoor exercise and cease worrying, the span of life should be lengthened to a hundred years or even more.

The principles of life that Moses taught the former slaves of Egypt were so thorough and far-reaching that they might have been founded upon all that we now know of sanitation and bacteriology. Moses stands a picturesque figure himself; exiled from Egypt at 40, he returned at 80 to take up his life work amid the hardships of camp life. Moses was "120 years old when he died, yet his eye was not dim nor his natural forces abated."

ROCKEFELLER RULES OF LONGEVITY.

1. Don't worry.
2. Don't acquire overweight.
3. Drink three quarts of water every day.
4. Exercise.
5. Sleep in fresh air.

Starvation as an Ally in Winning Wars

A GREAT deal has been written and said since Aug. 1, 1914, about blockades and the rights of neutrals, of contraband and conditional contraband, of prize courts and of submarines. Questions appertaining to these things have drawn our own nation so closely to the vortex of war that even the most optimistic have at times despaired.

The essential thing back of all these controversies is the military matter of starving an enemy into submission. All other things being equal, the nation which can shut off food supplies from its enemy must inevitably win. Yet the rights of humanity, especially of the peaceful humanity within the belligerent countries, must be safeguarded.

International law has admitted the right of a country to starve its foe and at the same time has placed restrictions upon the exercise of that right. These restrictions are part of the intricate question of actual blockade, constructive blockade and contraband of war. The questions arising therefrom are so complicated as to bewilder the casual inquirer and when one learns that there are so many conflicting usages and diverse interpretations of the law there is little wonder that the talk of reconciling them is stupendous enough to perplex the chancelleries of all the world.

What an effective weapon starvation is can be ascertained from a study of the Union blockade of the Confederacy in our own Civil War. A more brilliant and more easily grasped illustration, however, is the story of the siege of Paris by the Germans in 1870. Starvation and Germany then were indeed allies and so powerful were they that the backbone of French resistance was utterly broken. The ensuing operations of that struggle were merely a picking up loose ends by the triumphant Germans.

The overwhelming disasters of Sedan and Metz earlier in the year had given the Germans a tremendous advantage and yet the war was far from won. The French capital was intact and the capture of the French Emperor by the enemy had rather helped than hurt the situation, for it is largely upon the vacillation and incompetency of Napoleon III that historians have blamed the speedy defeat of his country and the loss of his throne. Paris was France, in a peculiar sense.

Moving with characteristic rapidity, the Germans appeared before the city Sept. 19, and, two days later, had drawn a cordon around it. Within that iron ring lay France's last chance of winning the war. It is true that Gambetta escaped in a balloon and went into the rural district, where he levied new armies to meet the invader, but, poorly officered, badly equipped, wretchedly financed, insufficiently directed, these forces could never seriously threaten the ascendancy of Bismarck and Von Moltke.

Paris was then, as it has remained, one of the most strongly fortified cities in the world. Within it were some 400,000 soldiers and a vast civilian population. Indeed, the soldiers far outnumbered the besieging forces, but they were for the most part raw levies, half-trained and their equipment was sorry in comparison with that of the Germans.

There were no 42-centimeter guns in those days. An attempt to carry the city by storm would have been madness. There was one way and one way alone that it could be taken and that was by starving it into submission. It was a game well worth the prize, so the Germans sat down and let time and hunger fight for them. No food of any kind was allowed to pass their lines. When request was made to permit the civilian population to get away, the Germans refused. It was a certainty that every morsel consumed by the civilian would be that much food lost to the soldier and the more mouths there were to consume the sooner the stored supply would be exhausted.

There was in Paris at that time a restaurant which catered to persons with long purses. Its cuisine had been celebrated throughout the world. This restaurant kept open during the siege, still catering only to those who had plenty of money. A bound volume of its menus for that period is a splendid commentary upon the way that hungry Paris tried to feed itself.

On the first day recorded in this volume the only unusual dishes appearing are:

Saute of cat with roots	$1.00
Horseflesh stew	1.20

On the following day other novelties were:

Horse steak with macaroni	.65
Mule steak	.60
Ass saute, bourgeoise style	.65
Asparagus, portion	.65
Plum pudding, portion	.25
Pears, each	.25

The card also informed the public that a cat could be bought for $1.20, a live sheep, $30, and mule flesh was worth 35 cents a pound.

A survivor of the siege tells the following anecdote:

"I was wandering one dull morning around the Marche des Ternes, where beef, veal and mutton had been replaced by horses, dog and cat, which were sold at the price of gold. Suddenly I was struck by a sign which said 'Ass flesh for sale.' I entered the shop and spoke to a girl, whose red cape was wrapped around her head to keep off the icy blast.

"'Where do you get this meat from, Mademoiselle?'

"'Alas, Monsieur. We had two beautiful donkeys, which were the admiration of all Suresnes. But we had to come to Paris for safety, so they had to be killed. They were called Ernest and Joseph. Joseph was sold. This is Ernest before you. Doesn't he look appetizing? All there is left of him is tail, $3; this filet, $4; his brain, $3.25, and his heart, $2. Very cheap, too.'"

On Dec. 20 the first rats were sold for food. They were offered at much less than choicer meats, such as cat, horse and donkey, but they were eagerly bought. Of course, there were many euphemisms in polite society. Cat, when brought to the table, was never called cat, but was termed "rabbit," while horseflesh was called "beef." For a Christmas dinner that winter a party of Britons in the besieged city dined on 10 pounds of camel flesh.

The authorities made every possible attempt to regulate prices by fixing maximum rates. These, however, were frequently evaded. Many who had food to sell secreted it and talked business quietly with persons both able and willing to pay more than the official maximum.

About a month before the populace was driven to the consumption of rats, it found that dog flesh, properly cooked, was fairly palatable. Dog cutlets were sold at 40 cents each, being inconvenienced when it was a question of co-operating in a work of justice."

The visitor, a man perhaps 30, of fashionable appearance and careful though quiet dress, manifested surprise.

Juve smiled.

"Is it the fact," he inquired, for he enjoyed mystifying people, "that your name is Gervais Aventin? A civil engineer? The possessor of considerable means? About to be married? And that lately you made a short journey to Limoges?"

The young man smiled.

"Your information is correct. But what crime of mine can have subjected me to these inquiries?"

Juve smiled again.

"I wondered, sir, why you vouchsafed no answer to the advertisements I have had inserted in the papers, in which I discreetly made it known that the police wanted to communicate with all passengers who travelled first class, in the slow train from Paris to Luchon, on the night of Dec. 23 last."

This time the young man looked anxious.

"Great Scott!" he exclaimed, "are you in the employ of my future father-in-law?"

Juve burst into a roar of laughter.

"You did travel by that train on that night; you got into it at Vierzon, where you live and are going to be married; you were going to Limoges to see a lady—and you did not want your fiancee's family to know anything about it."

Gervais Aventin pulled himself together.

"I had no idea that the official police undertook espionage of that sort," he said rather dryly. "But it is true, sir, that I went to Limoges—my last post before I was appointed to Vierzon—to take a final farewell of a lady."

Juve checked him.

"A truce to jesting," he said. "Your love affairs do not matter to me, sir. The information I want is of a very different nature. Tell me this: in what circumstances did you make that journey? What carriage did you get into? Who traveled with you?"

"I would rather have that than an inquiry into my defunct love affairs. I got into the train at Vierzon, into a first-class carriage"——

"What kind?"

"One of the old-fashioned corridor carriages; that is to say, not a corridor communicating with the other carriages, but a single carriage with four compartments, two in the middle opening on to the corridor, and two at the ends communicating with the corridor by a small door."

"I know," said Juve; "the lavatory is in the center. The end compartments have seven seats, and also have the little door communicating with the narrow passage down one side.

"That's it. I got into the smoking compartment at the end."

"Don't be too quick," said Juve. "Tell me whom you saw in the various compartments. You were on the platform, waiting for the train; it came in; what happened?"

"You want to be very precise? Well, I looked for the first-class carriage. The corridor was alongside the platform. I got in and wanted to choose my compartment. I remember clearly that I went first to the rear compartment, the last one. The door opening into it from the corridor was locked."

"That is correct," Juve nodded. "I know from the guard that that compartment was empty. What did you do then?"

"I turned back and, passing the ladies' compartment and the lavatory, decided to take my seat in the one next it communicating with the corridor. But a pane of glass was broken and it was bitterly cold there; so I had to fall back on the smoking compartment toward the front of the train."

"Were there many of you there?"

"I thought I was going to have a fellow traveller, for there was some luggage and a rug arranged on the seat. But the passenger must have been in the lavatory, for I didn't see him. I lay down on the other seat and went asleep."

"When you woke did you have any impression that the luggage on the seat opposite yours had been disturbed?"

Gervais Aventin made a gesture of uncertainty.

"I can't answer in the affirmative, M. Juve. I did not notice. When I got in the shade was pulled over the lamp and the curtains were drawn across the windows. I hardly saw how the things were arranged. And when I got out I was in a hurry. But I do not think the other fellow did take his place while I was asleep. I did not hear a sound."

"So you travelled first class in the slow train from Paris to Luchon on the night of Dec. 23, and in your compartment was the luggage of a traveller whom you did not see—who may not have been there?"

Juve was wondering inwardly why the dickens Etienne Rambert was not in that compartment when, according to the depositions of the guard, he must have been there; but he said nothing of this. Instead he said:

"Your information is most valuable. You have told me everything I wanted to know."

Gervais Aventin displayed surprise.

"Well," he said, by way of return, "tell me something which puzzles me. How did you know I travelled by that train that night?"

The detective produced a first-class ticket.

"That is very simple," he replied. "Here is your ticket. I wanted to know who traveled in that compartment, so I sent for all the first-class tickets given up by passengers who left the train at the different stations. Yours had been issued at Vierzon, so I interrogated the clerk at the booking office, who gave me a description of you; when an inspector got me all the information I required."

CHAPTER XIX.

Jerome Fandor.

WHISTLING a quickstep, sure sign with him of a light heart, Juve opened the door of the little room where he had left Charles Rambert, and looked at the sleeping lad.

"It's fine to be young," he remarked to the man he had left on guard; "that boy shaves the scaffold by an inch, and yet after one late night he sleeps as peacefully as any chancellor of the Legion of Honor!" He shook the lad with a friendly hand. "Get up, lazy bones! It's time for me to carry you off."

"Where to?" the unhappy boy asked.

"There's no doubt about inquisitiveness being your besetting sin," Juve replied. "Well, you're not going to prison; I'm going to take you home with me!"

"I didn't want to answer any questions just now," he said, "because I hate talking in cabs. But now I'll give you a bit of good news."

When Juve had finished his breakfast he lighted a cigar and sank into an easy chair. He turned a steady gaze upon Charles Rambert, who was completely puzzled, and half frightened by this sudden amiability.

"I will give you a bit of good news; you are innocent of the Langrune affair when you were Charles Rambert, and innocent also of the Danidoff affair, when you were Mlle. Jeanne. I need not say anything about the scrap last night."

"Why tell me that?" asked Charles Rambert, nervously. "Of course I knew I did not rob Princess Sonia Danidoff; but how did you recognize me last night, and how did you find out that I was Mademoiselle Jeanne?"

Juve smiled.

"Listen, my boy: do you suppose that thundering blow you dealt the excellent Henri Verbier when he was making love to Mlle. Jeanne, could fail to make me determined to find out who that young lady was who had the strength of a man?"

The allusion made Charles Rambert most uneasy.

"But that does not explain how you recognized me in Paul tonight. I recognized you in Henri Verbier at the hotel, but I had no idea that it was you last night."

"That's nothing," said Juve. "When I have once looked anybody square in the face, he needs to be uncommonly clever to escape me afterward."

"What makes you believe I did not rob Princess Sonia Danidoff?" Charles Rambert asked. "Everything points to my having been the thief."

"Not quite everything," Juve answered gently. "One or two things you don't know. I'll tell you one. The Princess was robbed by the same man who robbed Mme. Van den Rosen. Mme. Van den Rosen was the victim of a burglary; some of the furniture in her room was broken into, and the tests I made this morning with the dynamometer proved that you are not strong enough to have caused those fractures."

"Not strong enough?"

"No. I told you your innocence would be proved if you were strong enough. I said that to prevent your playing tricks and not putting out all your strength. Your comparative weakness saved you."

Again the lad reflected.

"But you didn't know who I was when you came to the hotel? And, therefore, had no suspicion I was Charles Rambert? That's true, isn't it? How did you find out? I was supposed to be dead."

"That was a child's job," Juve replied. "I got the anthropometric records of the body buried as yours, and I planned to get symmetrical photographs of you in your character of Mlle. Jeanne, as I did of you today at headquarters. My first job was to lay hands upon Mlle. Jeanne, and I found her, turned into a man again, and living in disreputable company. When I went to the Saint Anthony's Pig last evening I knew some unknown person had been buried in your stead; that Paul was Mlle. Jeanne, and that Mlle. Jeanne was Charles Rambert. It was my intention to arrest you, and to ascertain definitely by means of the dynamometer that you were innocent of the Langrune and the Danidoff crimes."

"What you tell me explains how you know I did not commit the robbery, but what clears me of the Langrune murder?"

"Bless my soul!" Juve retorted, "you are arguing as if you wanted to prove you were guilty. Well, it's the same story. The man who murdered the Marquise de Langrune smashed things. The dynamometer has proved you are not strong enough."

"Suppose I had been mad at the time," Charles Rambert said, his tone betraying his anxiety, "could I have been strong enough then? Might I have committed these crimes without knowing anything about it?"

Juve shook his head.

"I know: you are referring to your mother, and are haunted by an idea that through some hereditary taint you might have done these things in your sleep. Put all that out of your head. To begin with, you would not have been strong enough, even then; and in the next place there is nothing at present to show that you are mad nor even that your poor mother is."

"Then, if you know I am innocent, you can tell my father? I have nothing to fear? I can reappear in my own name?"

Juve looked at the lad with an ironical smile.

"How you go ahead!" he exclaimed. "Please understand that although I do believe you innocent, I am the only person who does. And I have not yet any evidence that would be certain to put the persuasion of your guilt out of your father's head, or anybody else's. When I have put my hand on Fantomas' shoulder, I will be the very first to take you to your father and proclaim your innocence."

"Why wait until Fantomas is arrested?" Charles Rambert asked.

"Because if you are innocent of the charge brought against you, it is extremely likely that Fantomas is the guilty party."

"What do you advise me to do?"

"Well," the detective began, "the first fact is that I am interested in you, and the next is, that while I was having that rough-and-tumble last night in the supper room, your chipping in saved my life. This is what I propose: Change your name. Take a room somewhere. Get into proper clothes and come back to me. I'll give you a letter to a friend of mine on one of the big evening papers. You are well educated, energetic, keen on everything connected with the police. You'll get on as a reporter. Would you like to try that?"

"It's awfully good of you," Charles Rambert said.

Juve cut his thanks short and held out some bank notes.

"Now clear out; it's time we both got a little sleep. Get into rooms, and in a fortnight I shall expect you to be editor of La Capitale."

"Under what name shall you introduce me?" Charles Rambert asked.

"Something arresting, like Fantomas!" said Juve chaffingly. "Choose something not too common for the first name; and something short for the other. Why not keep the first syllable of Fantomas? Oh, I've got it—Fandor; what about Jerome Fandor?"

"Jerome Fandor! You are right, it sounds well."

Juve pushed him out of the door.

"Well, Jerome Fandor, rig yourself out and get ready for the new life that I'm going to open up for you!"

The sixth installment of this thrilling detective story will be printed next Sunday.

Germany's New Dreadnought of the Sky

38.8 knots, 698 nautical miles; total, 1193 nautical miles.

The accuracy of these figures, according to Baron Ladislaus d'Orcy of the American Institute of Aeronautic Engineers, who writes on the subject in the Scientific American, cannot be vouchsafed to the mile; but they seem to be borne out very well in the light of recent Zeppelin excursions, when some of the raiders went as far as Edinburgh and Liverpool.

It should be noted that the raiders were all reported as arriving from the east instead of from the south; that is, across the North Sea instead of from Belgium. This means that they were launched from some of the numerous airship harbors which dot the German coast from Tondern, in Schleswig-Holstein, to Emden, on the Dutch frontier.

The distance between Tondern and Edinburgh is 440 nautical miles and that between Emden and Liverpool is 400 nautical miles; and these distances, doubled, of course, by the return trip, seem to support the estimate of the cruising radius of the new Zeppelins.

The reason why the airships choose the long and perilous voyage across the North Sea to the incomparably shorter one from Belgium is explained by the English as resulting from the incessant vigilance of the allies' airmen and anti-aircraft guns on the Continent.

Baron d'Orcy believes that the new Zeppelins have installed some unexplained system of compensating balloonets for each of the 20 or more gasbags making up the hull of the vessel, and that these are for the purpose of remedying the defect of the old ships when they descended from great heights into the heavy pressure of the lower air levels.

"Such a course should not be astonishing," he remarks, "in view of the several airships the German navy has lost in the North Sea, for the sole reason that when they came down from a great height the gas, after having expanded, contracted through the increased atmospheric pressure and proved insufficient for insuring the necessary buoyancy. It was this phenomenon which caused the loss of the L-3 and L-4, not to speak of others."

"It is common knowledge," continues this authority, "that for some time past a new type of Zeppelin, far more powerful than any of its predecessors, has been commissioned with the Air Service of the German navy. The recent destruction, by the agency of the allies' anti-aircraft artillery, of two of these vessels has now afforded the long-sought opportunity for getting a closer view of this type of Zeppelin.

"It is a matter of discussion whether there exists but one new type, or whether the Zeppelin works still turn out a large, long-range type for naval raids; and a smaller, but faster, one for military reconnaissances."

What It Means to Become Blind Suddenly

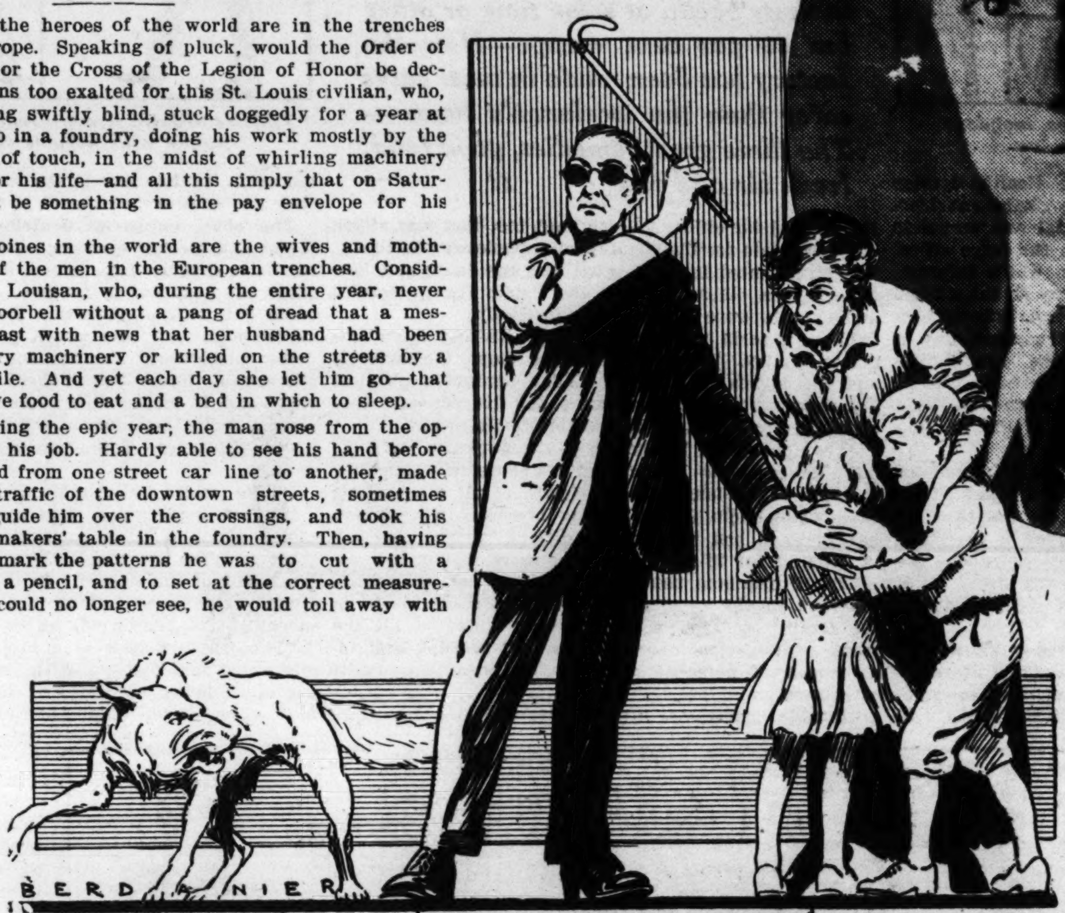
Here is one of those life tragedies the public seldom hears about—Pluck of St. Louisan who worked to the last while eyesight swiftly faded and now struggles to keep his little family together while learning trade at which sightless man may earn a living :: ::

SUPPOSING that you—a man earning good wages, with a wife and two bright children, with nothing to depend on but your wages—were swiftly to lose your sight?

What would you do?

Here is the story of the actual experience of a man to whom this tragedy befell.

GORDON DAVIS.



NOT all the heroes of the world are in the trenches of Europe. Speaking of pluck, would the Order of Merit or the Cross of the Legion of Honor be decorations too exalted for this St. Louis civilian, who, growing swiftly blind, stuck doggedly for a year at his job in a foundry, doing his work mostly by the sense of touch, in the midst of whirling machinery hungry for his limbs or his life—and all this simply that on Saturday night there might be something in the pay envelope for his wife and children?

And not all the heroines in the world are the wives and mothers and sweethearts of the men in the European trenches. Consider the wife of this St. Louisan, who, during the entire year, never heard a ring at the doorbell without a pang of dread that a messenger had come at last with news that her husband had been mangled in the factory machinery or killed on the streets by a street car or automobile. And yet each day she let him go—that the children might have food to eat and a bed in which to sleep.

More than once during the epic year; the man rose from the operating table to go to his job. Hardly able to see his hand before his face, he transferred from one street car line to another, made his way through the traffic of the downtown streets, sometimes getting a newsboy to guide him over the crossings, and took his place at the pattern makers' table in the foundry. Then, having persuaded someone to mark the patterns he was to cut with a scratch-awl instead of a pencil, and to set at the correct measurements the calipers he could no longer see, he would toil away with only the tips of his skilled fingers for eyes.

And all around him machinery was roaring. Once, right behind him, his keen ears caught a suspicious sound. Almost sightless though he was, he groped for the lever and stopped the machine. Then he helped extricate a fellow worker, whose hand had been crushed between the rollers. "Every morning," says he, "I feared I would not return home whole that night."

The man and his wife are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Davis of 2300 South Twelfth street. Since last October he has been barely able to distinguish between day and night. And since last October, when he was finally compelled to give up his work in the foundry, he and his wife have struggled desperately to keep the family together while he is learning a new livelihood, that of Braille stenography, which he is studying at the Missouri School for the Blind. So far they have succeeded. He is 38 years old and she is. Their children are Edward, 9 years old, and Catherine 7.

When the Spanish-American War began, Davis, whose home was in Augusta County, Va., but who was living at Huntington, W. Va., enlisted in the First West Virginia Volunteer Infantry. He was already a skilled pattern maker, a work requiring the exactest eyesight, and he had won medals as a sharpshooter in the militia. Although his regiment did not reach Cuba, he saw several months of service in the training camps at Chickamauga, Knoxcille and Columbus, Ga. Whether it was the effect of the brilliant sunlight of the South upon eyes accustomed to indoor use, whether it was the smoke of the campfires or insanitary conditions in the camps, he emerged from the service with weakened eyes. A few months later he donned his first spectacles. As time went on, he found that the lenses had to be made stronger and stronger, but, like many other persons of similar experience, he did not worry greatly. In 1906 he married, and in 1910 he came to St. Louis to work for the American Car and Foundry Co., where he was reckoned one of the most expert pattern cutters in the shops.

A pattern cutter makes from blueprints designs in wood which are used by the molders. The designs are of all sorts of things—car wheels, journals, locomotive parts, cylinders for automobile engines, etc. It will be seen that these tasks call for the utmost precision of workmanship. The patterns are cut partly by machinery and partly by hand. In this work wood alcohol is used in considerable quantities; and it is well known that wood alcohol has a most deleterious effect upon the optic nerves.

He first became deeply alarmed over his eyes at the time of the Missouri Athletic Club fire, in the early part of 1914, when he discovered that he could read only those parts of the newspaper accounts of the catastrophe which were printed in large type. Returning again to his oculist for more powerful glasses, he learned that he was then using almost the strongest lenses made. He went to an eye specialist, and was told that he was suffering from atrophy of the optic nerve, which must inevitably result in total blindness.

By October of that year the sight of his right eye was completely gone. He lost the ability to see his children's eyebrows; then their hair vanished, and then their faces. If he met a man wearing a dark suit and hat, he could perceive the body and hat, but the vision would appear headless, for he could not see the face.

Physicians urged him to give up his work in the foundry. They said he was in danger of being caught in the machinery or injured on his way to or from the shop. The strain on his eyes would result in hastening the process of blindness, they pleaded. But there were two children at home to be fed, and Mrs. Davis could not aid in supporting the family because an attack of infantile paralysis when she was a baby had crippled her right arm. It was all she could do to take care of the children and the house.

So Davis would turn a deaf ear to the physicians and make his way through everlasting twilight to his work. He held his job by what he calls "stalling," but there has hardly ever been a finer demonstration of pluck. Some of his fellow workers helped him; when he could no longer trust himself at the machines, one of them would do the work for him. They marked out his patterns with an awl, when he could no longer see pencil marks, but could feel the scratches on the surface of the wood. With hand tools, guided almost solely by the sense of touch, he did his work; and how expert an artisan he was is shown by the fact that his output continued to be acceptable, although it was done much more slowly than formerly.

"Sometimes he walked the floor all night, in too great pain to sleep," says Mrs. Davis. "Sometimes he was too sick to eat. But always, on Saturday night, he brought home something in the pay envelope."

He soon found that he could not work every day, for with growing frequency, his eyes were worse than ever. Sometimes he could work every day in the week; then again he would have to lay off for two weeks. He estimates that during the year he averaged three days a week in the shops.

But all the courage in the world could not put off the final day of evil, and last October Davis was compelled to admit that he would never be able to work again in the foundry. His employer gave him a month's extra wages when he left, but the trade in which he had trained himself to a high state of efficiency would forever be useless to him.

So, at the age of 37, he sat down to plan out a new life for himself—one in which a sightless man could support his family and himself. For there never was a question with him and his devoted wife of breaking up the family. This must be kept together against all odds.

From persons interested in the education of the blind he learned that there are blind persons who earn a living by means of a little machine with six keys which mark on a strip of paper the dots of the Braille alphabet. This machine can by a trained typist be operated swiftly enough to take down conversation, and the system is called Braille stenography. Afterwards the blind typist can transcribe his record on an ordinary typewriter, if he is skilled in the use of this device by the touch system.

This was the profession for which Davis determined to train himself. Through the influence of friends he was admitted to the Missouri School for the Blind despite its rule against accepting students more than 20 years old, and there he spends three hours each day, receiving his tuition free. The minister of the church at which the family attends got a typewriter for him, and his little boy taught him the keyboard. He memorized the position of each key, and can now write slowly a letter of 16 lines with little more than half a dozen errors.

During all last winter Mrs. Davis went with him each day from their home to the school and back, although the trip and return is a matter of about fifty blocks. They walked usually, because they could not afford carfare. This was a severe strain on her strength, but although Davis was certain he could find the way alone, she would not permit him to go without her, for fear he might meet with an accident.

How they have managed to live in the meantime is a subject upon which they do not willingly talk. They say proudly that they have kept out of debt, and hints dropped in their talk show that this has been accomplished by prodigies of economy. Davis has earned nothing since he quit work, and his little savings and the extra month's pay did not last beyond Christmas. Their sole income has been pittances in cash sent them by relatives of Mrs. Davis. Yet they have kept up their home—two rooms in a boarding house—fed themselves and the children, and kept them both in school.

In a recent conversation with a Post-Dispatch reporter, Mrs. Davis remarked that her average bill at the butcher's, providing meat for two adults and two growing children at three meals each a day, is 15 cents a day. She has helped pay the grocer with cigarette coupons, given to her by friends, on which the grocer allows half a cent each.

On last Thanksgiving day, Davis related, they had only $1 in the house. He took the children to a restaurant and bought them a dinner costing 25 cents each. On the way home he purchased a nickel can of potted beef and 5 cents' worth of crackers. This was the holiday banquet for his wife and himself. The children have mostly had enough to eat, but the parents, as they say, have more than once known what it is to be hungry.

Both have determined to be cheerful always in the presence of the children. "They must have their childhood," says the mother, "and we try to seem happy before them to make up some of the things they have to miss." But sometimes one of their simple requests precipitates a crisis in the household. Other children at their school bought ice cream cones at luncheon time, the lake last night. And furthermore, she told me that I was perfectly suited for a eugenic marriage."

"When did she tell you that?" I demanded.

"When she had—fainted—in my arms."

"How the devil did she come to say a thing like that?"

He became conspicuously red about the ears.

"Well, I had just told her that I had fallen in love with her"——

"Damn!" I said. And that's all I said; and seizing a paddle I made furiously for shore. Behind me I heard the whirr of the piano wire as Brown started the electric reel. Later I heard him clamping the hood on the hydroscope; but I was too disgusted for any further words, and I dug away at the water with my paddle.

In various and weird stages of morning deshabille the heavy artillery came down to the shore for morning ablutions, all a-row like a file of ducks.

They glared at me as I leaped ashore:

"I want my breakfast!" snapped Mrs. Batt. "Do you hear what I say, guide? And I don't wish to be kept waiting for it either! I desire to get out of this place as soon as possible."

"I'm sorry," I said, "but I intend to stay here for some time."

"What!" bawled the heavy artillery in booming unison.

But my temper had been sorely tried, and I was in a mood to tell the truth and make short work of it, too.

"Ladies," I said, "I'll not mince matters. Mr. Brown and I are not guides; we are scientists from Bronx Park, and we don't know a bally thing about this wilderness we're in!"

"Swindler!" shouted Mrs. Batt, in an enraged voice. "I knew very well that the United States Government would never have named that puddle of water for me!"

"Don't worry, madame! I've named it after Mr. Brown. And the new species of gigantic fish which I have discovered in this lake I have named after myself. As for leaving this spot until I have concluded my scientific study of these fish, I simply won't. I intend to observe their habits and to capture one of them, if it requires the remainder of my natural life to do so. I shall be sorry to detain you here during such a period, but it can't be helped. And now you know what the situation is, and you are at liberty to think it over after you have washed your countenances in Lake Kitty Brown."

Rage possessed the heavy artillery, and a fury indescribable seized them when they discovered that Indians had raided their half-ton of feminine perquisites. I went up a tree.

When the tumult had calmed sufficiently for them to distinguish what I said, I made a speech to them. From the higher branches of a neighboring tree Kitten Brown applauded and cried, "Hear! Hear!"

"Ladies," I said, "you know the worst now. If you keep me up this tree and starve me to death it will be murder. Also, you don't know enough to get out of these forests, but I can guide you back the way you came. I'll do it if you cease your dangerous demonstrations and permit Mr. Brown and myself to remain here and study these giant fish for a week or two."

They now seemed disposed to consider the idea. There was nothing else for them to do. So after an hour or two, Brown and I ventured to descend from our trees, and we went among them to placate them and ingratiate ourselves as best we might.

"Think," I argued, "what a matchless opportunity for you to be among the first discoverers of a totally new and undescribed species of giant fish! Think what a legacy it will be to leave such a record to posterity! Think how proud and happy your descendants will be to know that their ancestors assisted at the discovery of Minnius Smithii!"

"Why can't they be named after me?" demanded Mrs. Batt.

"Because," I explained patiently, "they have already been named after me!"

"Couldn't something be named after me?" inquired that fearsome lady.

"The bats," suggested Brown politely, "we could name a bat after you with pleasure"——

I thought for a moment she meant to swing on him. He thought so, too, and ducked.

"A bat!" she shouted. "Name a bat after me!"

"Many a celebrated scientist has been honored by having his name conferred upon humbler fauna," I explained.

But she remained dangerous, so I went and built the fire and squatted there, frying bacon, while on the other side of the fire, sitting side by side, Kitten Brown and Angelica White gazed upon each other with enraptured eyes. It was slightly sickening—but let that pass. I was beginning to understand that science is a jealous mistress and that any contemplated infidelity of mine stood every chance of being squelched. No; evidently I had not been fashioned for the joys of legal domesticity. Science, the wanton jade, had not yet finished her dance with me. Apparently my maxixe with her was to be external. Fides servanda est.

That afternoon the heavy artillery held a council of war, and evidently came to a conclusion to make the best of the situation, for toward sundown they accosted me with a request for the raft, explaining that they desired to picnic aboard and afterward row about the lake and indulge in song.

So Brown and I put aboard the craft a substantial cold supper; and the heavy artillery embarked, taking aboard a guitar to be worked by Miss Dingleheimer, and knitting for the others.

It was a lovely evening. Brown and I had been discussing a plan to dynamite the lake and stun the fish, that method appealing to us as the only possible way to secure a specimen of the stupendous minnows which inhabited the depths. In fact, it was our only hope of possessing one of the creatures—fishing with a donkey engine, steel cable, and a hook baited with a bat being too uncertain and far more laborious and expensive.

I was still smoking my pipe, seated at the foot of the big pine tree, watching the water turn from gold to pink; Brown sat higher up the slope, his arm around Angelica White. I carefully kept my back toward them.

On the lake the heavy artillery were revelling loudly, banqueting, singing, strumming the guitar, and trailing their hands overboard across the sunset-tinted water

I was thinking of nothing in particular as I now remember, except that I noticed the bats beginning to flit over the lake; when Brown called to me from the slope above, asking whether it was perfectly safe for the heavy artillery to remain out so late.

"Why?" I demanded.

"Suppose," he shouted, "that those fish should begin to jump and feed on the bats again?"

I had never thought of that.

I rose and hurried nervously down to the shore, and, making a megaphone of my hands, I shouted:

"Come in! It isn't safe to remain out any longer!"

Scornful laughter from the artillery answered my appeal.

"You'd better come in!" I called. "You can't tell what might happen if any of those fish should jump."

"Mind your business!" retorted Mrs. Batt. "We've had enough of your prevarications"——

Then, suddenly, without the faintest shadow of warning, from the center of the lake a vast geyser of water towered a hundred feet in the air.

For one dreadful second I saw the raft hurled skyward, balanced on the crest of the stupendous fountain, spilling ladies, supper, guitars and knitting in every direction.

Then a horrible thing occurred; fish after fish shot up out of the storm of water and foam, seizing, as they fell, ladies, luncheon and knitting in midair, falling back with a crashing shock which seemed to rock the very mountains.

"Help!" I screamed. And fainted dead away.

Is it necessary o proceed? Literature nods; Science shakes her head. No, nothing but literature lies beyond the ripples which splashed musically upon the shore, terminating forever the last vibration from that immeasurable catastrophe.

Why should I go on? The newspapers of the nation have recorded the last scenes of the tragedy.

We know that tons of dynamite are being forwarded to that solitary lake. We know that it is the determination of the Government to rid the world of those gigantic minnows.

And yet, somehow, it seems to me as I sit writing here in my office, amid the verdure of Bronx Park, that the destruction of these enormous fish is a mistake.

What more splendid sarcophagus could the ladies of the lake desire than these huge, silvery, itinerant and living tombs?

What reward more sumptuous could anybody wish for than to rest at last within the interior dimness of an absolutely new species of anything?

For me, such a final repose as this would represent the highest pinnacle of sublimity, the uttermost zenith of mortal dignity.

So what more is there for me to say?

As for Angelica—but no matter. I hope she may be comparatively happy with Kitten Brown. Yet, as I have said before, handsome men never last. But she should have thought of that in time.

I absolve myself of all responsibility. She had her chance.

and the Davis children thought they should have them also. Their price was two for only 5 cents, but this sum cost the mother a great deal of thought. She finally solved the problem by buying 5 cents' less worth of potatoes.

In fact, the parents really seem to be cheery without trying, and to look into the future with confidence. Davis had a good laugh, he says, when he discovered that in the Braille system the same characters stand for the letters "T, R." and for the figure "23." He shaves himself with an old-fashioned razor and has never cut himself once. Often he cooks breakfast for the children in the morning while their mother is preparing them for school. With a stick to feel his way, he goes to the grocery. They both take great joy in their children, who are unusually intelligent. The boy, they say, guides his father all over town, and has never made a mistake in transferring from one car line to another. He went with his father a few times to the blind school and listened to the classes. Now, his father says, Edward can read the Braille system at sight.

"I don't like for people to pity us," says Mrs. Davis, "for there are others worse off than we are. I have done all that I could, for there is no one else to take my place."

"Life is too short to worry," Davis sums up his philosophy.

ment of discipline. Upon the pole of each tent hang the "Ten Commandments" and the "Mosaic Law" of the camp.

The things "verboten" and the penalties therefor are numerous. For instance no food of any kind—and this has been construed to cover candy—is permitted in any of the tents. As a consequence confiscated "boxes"—shades of departed boarding school days!—are piling up in the office and the question of what to do with the goodies is becoming perplexing.

Untidiness in person or in tent is made the subject of a reprimand.

If a girl is absent from any of the camp formations her name is posted in the mess hall.

Insubordination is punishable "according to the degree of the offense."

If a girl is absent from camp at "taps" she is subject to dismissal from camp.

In all there are 14 commandments.

One of the most interesting sights of the camp is the spectacle of a big brawny marine, usually a Corporal or a Sergeant, of many years' experience, taking orders from a slip of a girl with perfect gravity—and a twinkle in his eyes. The detachment of marines is on the grounds to relieve us of the heavy work of the camp. They also give a comfortable feeling of "having a man around the house." Naturally they are unaware of inspiring any such sense of security and perform their duties with all due solemnity and respect for their women superiors.

Somehow the girls managed to retain their dignity in the most trying circumstances. More than once did an officer, on giving the command: "Halt! Attention! Right face!" find that her squad had chosen the four points of the compass quite at random. Did she laugh? Not a bit of it. She quietly said: "Everybody turn around and look at me." Everybody did. Nobody laughed.

What do we have to eat? Well, we're too hungry to be critical. We get the regular marine corps rations, prepared by a marine corps cook, under the direction of a marine corps Quartermaster. And Mrs. George Barnett, whose husband is Commandant of the corps, is at the head of the Commissary Department. She says each person's food costs about 40 cents a day as against the 27 cents that the marine corps rations cost the Government.

Starvation as an Ally in Winning Wars

dog leg could be bought at 80 cents a pound. Some of the "luxuries" for sale and the prices they brought at one time were:

Chicken, $3.20 a dish; rabbit, $2.60 a dish; whole chicken, $5.20; whole rabbit, $3.60; a turkey, $12; a goose, $9; one cauliflower, 60 cents; one cabbage, 80 cents; a rat, 20 cents; dog, 40 cents a pound.

A rat market was established on one of the main streets of the city. Rat catchers obtained permission to go into the sewers and baited their traps with glucose, taking thousands of rodents.

By Dec. 27 the price of cats had gone up to $2 each and a bear from the zoo sold for $80. A peacock sold for $6 and one portion of it as served in a restaurant sold for $1. Indeed, it was not long before necessity led to the slaughter of most of the animals in public and private zoos and the people of Paris were able intelligently to discuss the relative merits of elephant, bear, wolf and camel flesh as food.

The prices quoted show that these bizarre articles of diet were available only to those who had plenty of money. The plight of the poorer people of Paris was pitiable. To these the days and nights were continued periods of horror and suffering. To add to their sufferings, the Germans bombarded the city once or twice, inflicting great harm upon the civilian population.

By Dec. 15 the authorities began regulating the consumption of horse flesh and an order was issued allowing each person about an ounce a day. A month later a bread order gave 10 ounces to each adult and five to each child. This bread was a black and indigestible compound of rice, buckwheat, oats and even hay.

The Government did its best to save a milk supply for babies. To the very end 3000 cows were preserved for this purpose, although their milk was entirely inadequate in quantity. By the second week in January an English report said the babies were "dying off like rotten sheep." It was estimated that, towards the end, the deaths numbered 5000 a week.

When, after the siege was lifted a British relief party reached the city with food, many persons were barely able to walk to distribution points and, when provisions were handed to them, were too weak to carry them home.

Finally hunger won even over the proud spirits of the Parisians. Jan. 28 an armistice was concluded at Versailles and two days later the Germans entered the city. The siege was over.

There is no doubt that the memory of that bitter time has done as much to keep alive French animosity against the Germans as the loss of Alsace-Lorraine. Not only Paris, but other towns were made to feel the Prussian hand.

When the Germans entered French towns they not only seized what foodstuffs they needed, but they levied heavy monetary fines. Because a citizen of Orleans attacked a Prussian soldier in a brawl, a fine of $120,000 was assessed against the city. Civilians at LeMans did some sniping and their town had to pay a fine of $800,000.

Rouen was compelled to pay $1,200,000, Lillebonne, $50,000; Dieppe, $200,000; the Department of Seine Inferieure paid a total of $5,000,000 in fines; smaller towns were fined at a rate averaging about $5 per capita.

The bombardment of Paris during the siege drew protests from 16 nations whose representatives were shut up in the beleaguered city. Bismarck himself admitted that his country had laid its hand heavily upon its foe. He accused the French of wrong acts on their part, and in January of that year he wrote: "If, in view of this state of things, we are forced to exercise the rights of war with a severity which we regret and which appertains neither to the German national character nor our traditions, the responsibility falls," etc. He is said to have remarked to V. Beust, "When once we get the enemy in our power it is our duty to crush him."

On the grounds of military expediency these measures were altogether effective. The greatest and proudest Power of Continental Europe at that time was completely humbled. Out of this disaster to the enemy arose the modern German empire. Out of it also, doubtless, arose the beginnings of the struggle which today sees the German empire girdled by a ring of enemies who declare they will not lay down the sword until they have crushed its military power forever.

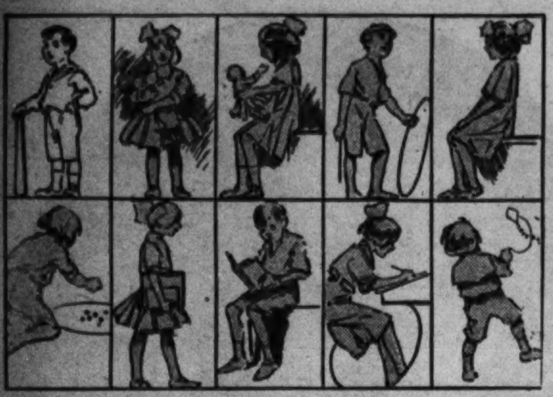
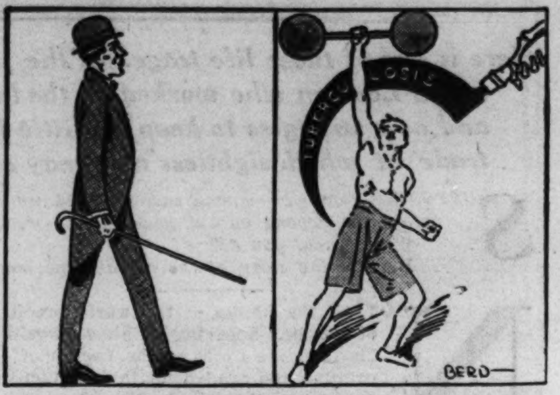
What Uncle Sam Has Learned About Tuberculosis



"Nine out of ten children have incipient tuberculosis."



"Athletes acquire it more readily than thin, weakly people with normal organic vigor."

Government experts have investigated many phases of the white plague and some of their disclosures are surprising—Every adult has been infected with its bacilli at some time or other but 99 per cent escape—How the factory has been made in most cases safer than the workman's home—The three great remedies, good food, fresh air and rest :: ::

THE United States Public Health Service has, for some time, been giving considerable attention to the social and economic aspects of tuberculosis in the large cities. Some of the questions on which information was sought were: Why do some cities show a rising death rate from tuberculosis while others of the same climatic environment show a declining death rate? To what extent has better sanitation in shops and factories decreased tuberculosis? Which is the more fertile field of contagion, the home or the factory? What is the measure of the relation between poverty and tuberculosis?

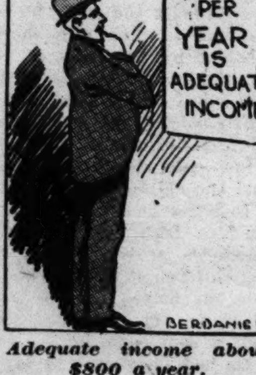
Multiplied Government reports show that satisfactory answers to all of these questions have been found. They contain also information that is rather startling to the lay reader. One of these, for instance, is the statement that 90 per cent of the white children above the age of 12 in this country and practically every adult has at some time or other been infected with the tubercle bacillus.

Most diligent newspaper readers already know that the extent of the white plague in the United States is shockingly great. Notwithstanding that, for the country as a whole, there has been a declining death rate since 1880, it was estimated in 1913 that 1,000,000 persons were suffering from the disease, while the total number of deaths from it in that year was in excess of 143,000. In 36 years the death rate had been reduced from 326 to the 100,000 cases to 147.6. Last year alone $22,500,000 was spent in the various states for the care and treatment of sufferers.

The conclusion is inevitable that the seeds of this dreadful disease are everywhere. Since no person has entirely escaped them, it has become largely a question of dosage. It only remains for one to get a large enough dose of bacilli when the system is sufficiently weakened before he joins the vast army of sufferers. A powerful physique is no safeguard. One authority says "Physically strong people will not resist tuberculosis better than less muscular subjects. Athletes acquire it rather more readily than thin, weakly people with spare musculature but normal organic vigor."

Fortunately, however, these surprising figures carry their own reassurance. Since everybody has been subject to contagion, it follows that only about one out of every 100 persons actually contracts the disease, and of these many get well. Proper feeding, plenty of fresh air, plenty of rest, the avoidance of fatigue to the point of exhaustion, temperance in the use of alcholics and abstinence from vice are the best guarantors of immunity.

Moreover there is no longer occasion for the sufferer to despair when he has tuberculosis in an incipient stage. So long as he can get plenty of rest, plenty of good food and plenty of fresh air, he has an excellent chance of recovery. This providing he learns of his condition in time. Thanks to the wide-spread campaigns against this hydra-headed evil, the public is better educated about it than formerly, while state, national and city governments have already taken many steps towards its amelioration and eventually, its eradication.



$800 PER YEAR IS ADEQUATE INCOME
BERDANIER

Adequate income about $800 a year.

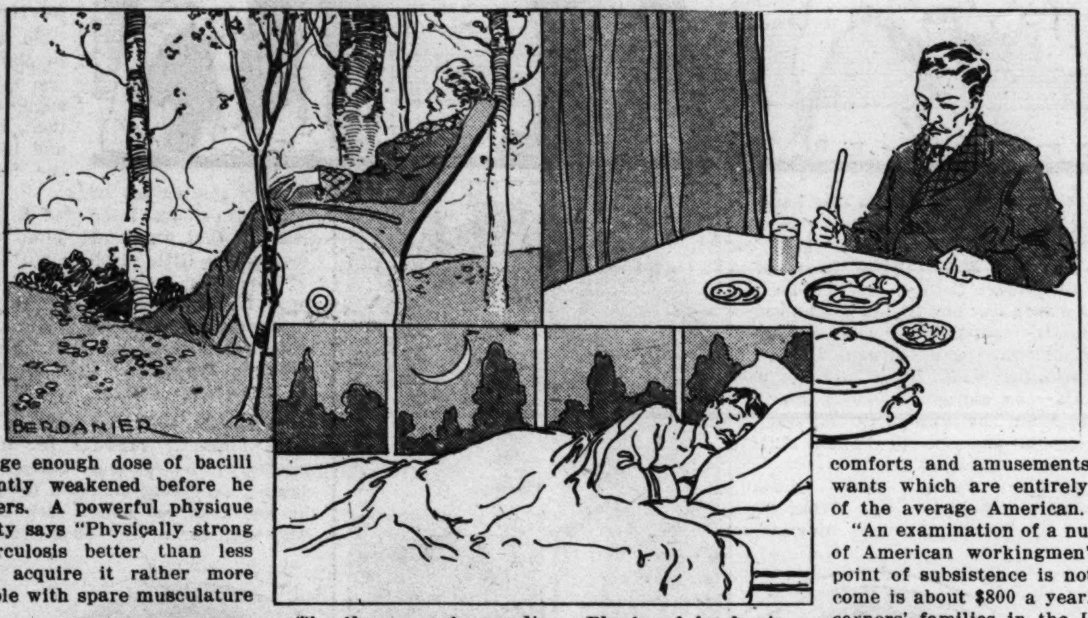
Of all the contributing causes to the spread of tuberculosis poverty is undoubtedly the greatest. Poverty means improper housing, insufficient food, long hours of work and worry, congested dwellings, low income, insufficient rest, inadequate medical attention. All these things in turn mean tuberculosis. Whoever shall eliminate poverty from the world by the same token will eliminate tuberculosis, or practically so.

Not that consumption is a disease of the poor alone. It is no respecter of persons. It is willing, like pallid death in the poem, to stalk with equal footsteps through the palaces of kings and the hovels of the poor. Nowadays, however, the homes of the well-to-do have plenty of sunlight and fresh air and food and these, with proper rest and good sanitation, are the greatest foes of the white plague. Sunlight alone is fatal to the tubercle bacillus, while the other things protect the body against its invasion or provide means for its expulsion.

Of all the Government reports on this subject, none is more illuminating than that which tells of a special investigation in Cincinnati. Cincinnati found itself with a 50 per cent higher tuberculosis death rate than the normal for cities, a death rate, too, that was rising while the rate for the country as a whole was declining. The city wanted to know what was the cause and how to eradicate. It called upon the Public Health Service and experts were detailed for the study.

These experts were not content with any mere academic inquiry. They went into the shops, the factories and the homes of the city. They conducted physical examinations of 19,932 workers and traced each case of tuberculosis as near as possible to its origin.

They found that the homes of the workmen were far more dangerous to health than the shops in which they worked. They found that one-sixth of all tuberculosis cases came from cheap lodging houses. Occupational hazards and bad working conditions were apparently responsible for 20 per cent of the cases, but in the majority of instances these hazards were not necessarily inherent in the occupation. Previous tuberculosis in the family occurred in practically a third of all the cases. Dissipation, overcrowding, bad housing and innate lack of personal responsibility, were also listed as causes.



The three great remedies: Plenty of fresh air, plenty of wholesome food and plenty of rest.

Climatic conditions, including smoke and fog, were found to have little, if any, influence in producing a high death rate from tuberculosis. Floods could not be blamed to any serious extent. The character of the white population as to racial origin has had considerable influence, it was found, in Cincinnati's high death rate. Generally speaking the experts reported (Public Health Bulletin No. 73) that persons of Irish, German and Scandinavian ancestry are more susceptible to tuberculosis than those of other white races, while Italians and Jews are more immune. Cincinnati has relatively few Italians and Jews and relatively many of the other races. It also has more negroes than are usually found in a Northern city and tuberculosis seems to be especially fatal to negroes.

The experts also found that a city of comparatively slow growth has more tuberculosis than one of rapid growth. This is probably due to several things, among them the constant tearing down of old and unsanitary houses and the erection of new and sanitary ones in their stead.

Says the report:

"Bad housing has had a marked influence in the high tuberculosis death rate and this, in turn, is dependent in great part upon:

"Poor economic conditions, the financial status of the people being such that they are unable to obtain better home conditions, as the city is composed, for the most part, of the rich and the poor, with a very small percentage of the middle class.

"Inadequate segregation of advanced cases is an important factor in the high death rate applying especially to the lodging house element.

"The insufficient provision for the care of incipient cases is a great obstacle in the effort to eradicate the disease.

"An inadequacy of financial relief to the families while the tuberculosis wage earner is being cured is also an important factor.

"There is insufficient knowledge of the whereabouts of the persons afflicted and as a result there is inadequate cleansing of houses and rooms vacated by consumptives.

The old belief that tuberculosis is inherited has long been discredited by science. On the other hand, the children of tuberculosis sufferers are frequently predisposed by their very structure to the disease and yield readily to infection. Their bodies may house the bacilli for long periods before there is a sufficient weakening of the powers of resistance to enable them to get a foothold. If they live in the same house with sufferers they are constantly exposed to infection.

The chief industrial contributions to the evil are found in improper working conditions, long hours, dust, excessive fatigue, low income and inadequate rest. Of these the deadliest is fatigue. It is when the body is worn out with overexertion that the bacillus gets its surest hold. For this reason the experts generally condemn "piece work" employment, as more likely to cause overstrain. Every one of these conditions is subject to relief and, in most states, there are laws already on the statute books to compel unwilling employers to take the proper measures. Too often these laws are not properly enforced.

Public Health Bulletin No. 76 says:

"It is well recognized that the unfavorable conditions under which a large proportion of wageworkers and their families live constitute a baffling problem in the treatment of the sick and in the prevention of disease. Under existing conditions, the reason for unhealthful modes of living is largely an economic one.

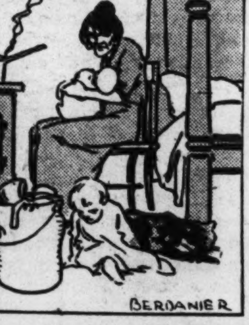
"The frequent lack of a properly balanced and adequate diet is a factor. With insufficient wages, food is cut down below the level of subsistence. In order to meet expenses for lodging and clothing, working women reduce their diet to the lowest possible point. Health inevitably suffers.

"Income statistics indicate that a considerable proportion of the families of wageworkers have not been able to maintain a diet that will provide for proper nourishment. A larger proportion can maintain an adequate diet only at the sacrifice of healthful environment and of other items that go to constitute a reasonable standard of living. There can be no doubt that nourishing food is sacrificed in a large number of instances in order to obtain some of the comforts and amusements and to gratify some of the wants which are entirely natural and to be expected of the average American.

"An examination of a number of studies of the budgets of American workingmen's families indicates that the point of subsistence is not reached until the family income is about $800 a year. Less than half of the wage-earners' families in the United States have an annual income of that size, according to all statistics.

"Between 1900 and 1913 the average increase in the retail prices of foods was about 60 per cent, according to statistics published by the United States Department of Labor. During the same period wage rates increased less than 30 per cent according to the same authority.

"Unfavorable conditions prevailing in the households of the wage earners constitute another important phase of the problem. The absence of sufficient light, the lack of ventilation facilities or, when they exist, continuously closed rooms to secure warmth because of the inability to provide sufficient fuel; the accumulation of filth; the prevalence of insanitary toilets; the necessity for overcrowding in order to reduce the rent to a figure that will permit the household to make ends meet—these are fairly familiar facts. It is apparent that in a household of six or more people living in less than four rooms the conditions described by 'bad housing' are likely to be found."

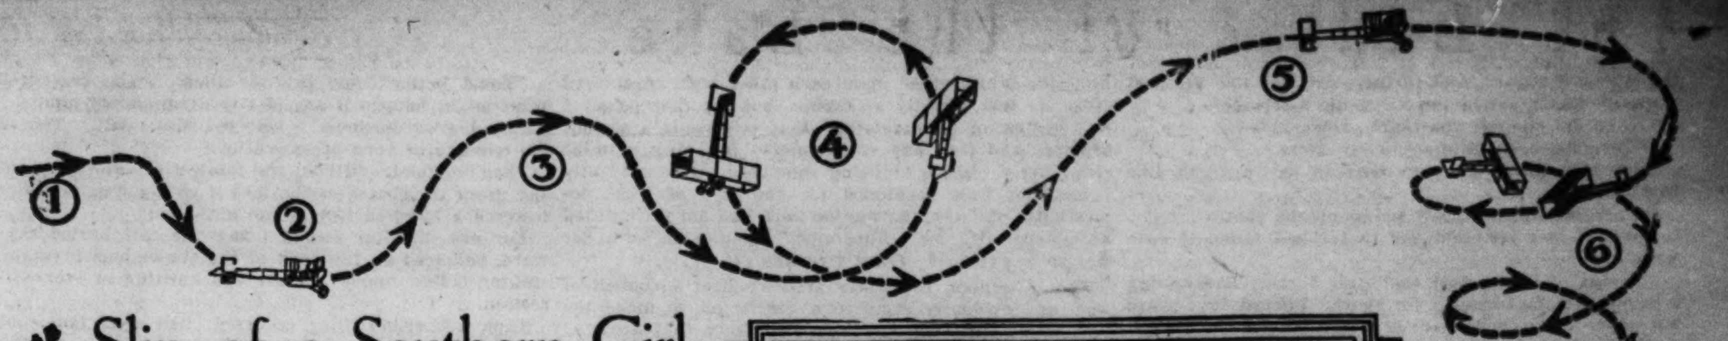


"They found the homes of the workmen were far more dangerous than the shops in which they worked."

"In round numbers," says the Cincinnati report, "we may say that the average size of the families we investigated was four and the average monthly balance, after paying for food and rent, was $20 per family. It requires but little reflection to see that $5 a month is an inadequate sum to supply the individual with clothes, heat, recreation, street car fare, doctors' bills, insurance and the thousand and one necessary incidental expenses of living. The result is that a large number of families are living at the bare subsistence level and thus incur the dangers arising from a lowered resistance the moment that their already meager income suffers the slightest diminution.

"The distribution of tuberculosis bears a direct relation to that of tenements, being at the most conservative estimate twice as great among tenement dwellers as among those living in separate houses."

One Government report advises sufferers that a change of climate is not necessary to a cure in the early stages. The essential thing is fresh air in any climate and complete rest.



Slip of a Southern Girl Who Startled the Country by Her Aeroplane Feats

Miss Katherine Stinson got an ambition to become an aviation expert from reading of the thrilling exploits of daring airmen — How she rivals them all and how her amazing success has prospered her

OF COURSE it had to come sooner or later. Ever since daredevil riding in an aeroplane excited popular interest it has been inevitable that some day there would come along a woman aeroplanist to rival them all. Just as it was in trapeze performing, parachute jumping and all the other hazardous sports in which men risked life for fortune and fame.

If, however, one had set out to find the type of woman who would be looping-the-loop several thousand feet in the air, it is probable that Katherine Stinson would have been the last to challenge his attention. A quiet, bookish, dreamy Mississippi girl, rather frail in person, she would not at all have measured up to the expectations of the coming Amazon of the Air.

Yet Katherine is just that. Not only is she one of the most daring of all aviators today but she has also gone into the practical aeroplane business, with a school for instruction in a Texas city. Her greatest ambition, to be an aeroplane observer for the United States army, thus far has been denied.

Miss Stinson electrified New York City a few weeks ago when she engaged in the competition at Sheepshead Bay. There was infinite grace, daring and versatility in the way she handled her biplane.

In less than 100 feet, she was clear of the ground. She swept over the field in gradual ascent, until she had risen to some 2000 feet. With the whirr of her engines silenced by the distance, she circled over the heads of the crowd, a dark speck against the blue of a clear summer sky.

For a moment she seemed to pause in midair. Then came a sudden swoop, a somersault, and a long trail of magnesium smoke outlined a complete but imperfect curve.

She tried again. Another dip, an upward curve. This time the loop was perfect. She did it a third time.

Then once more she swept round the sky. Suddenly the biplane shot downward. For some 1500 feet it fell in a vertical line toward the earth, while the crowd held its breath from fear. But within 100 feet of the ground it curved into the level, and landed gracefully on the green.

In her next ascent she rose still higher. She dipped, circled, dipped, circled, while the trail of smoke from the magnesium flares outlined a corkscrew in the sky.

Then she dropped bombs on a miniature fort. She raced Dario Resta, the automobile speed demon, now flying low on the ground, now soaring close to the tree tops. In her hands the machine seemed a live thing, spirited but restrained as a blooded horse, ridden under a well-handled curb.

Katherine Stinson is now 20 years old. To talk with her is to get an uneasy premonition of an age which will be still more restless than ours, for she is undoubtedly as typical of the future as the girl motorist is of today.

An extremely sensitive girl, not over-strong, intelligent, clear-headed, and, paradoxical as it sounds, rather cautious—that is how Katherine Stinson strikes one. Conventionally speaking, she could not be called pretty. Her face is too long; her features too irregular and too strongly marked. But she has deep-set, luminous brown eyes, fringed by long lashes, that lend her an elfin charm, and her brows, mobile and delicately penciled, meet now and then in the puzzled furrows that one sees in the face of a child. She is very young, for all her experience.

Miss Stinson was born in Jackson, Miss., and lived there for 16 years. At school she attended strictly to her studies. Her sole amusement was reading, and her favorite subject aviation. How it came to be so, she does not know, unless perhaps she reached it along the route of hero-worship. Two men stand out as the gods of her youthful imagination. They are Hoxsey and Moissant. Her ambition was to rival them in their own field.

She made her mother her confidante, and after much persuasion won her as a confederate in a scheme to leave home and learn aviation. Mr. Stinson was no party to these plans. Fathers are apt to be uncomfortably incredulous. He would need proofs of his girl's fitness for this chosen career. And so far Katherine had not even seen an aeroplane!

Four years ago, however, she left home for Chicago to become a pupil of the Lillie-Thompson school. Soon the fact was strongly borne in on her that fathers have no monopoly on incredulity.

De Lloyd Thompson refused to take her seriously, but so persistent was she that at last Max Lillie, Thompson's own master, took her on, partly in fun. He found himself agreeably surprised, for his pupil made a swift graduation. Thompson henceforth took her in charge.

From now on Katherine is a public character. She began to give exhibition flights. She wanted money. Then she sold machines and made more money. Soon she acquired an aeroplane of her own, and forthwith opened a school in San Antonio. Her brother and sister were soon in the business—the former is 23 years old, the latter 19. Between them they bought another biplane, made after Katherine's own plans. The school became known.

MISS KATHERINE STINSON and diagram showing the various maneuvers of her most brilliant achievement, No. 1 being the position of the aeroplane at the start of the loop, the other numbers showing the successive changes of direction.

Canadians, anxious for fame at the front, came to Katherine for preliminary instructions. She has a few hundred pupils now on the firing line. Many of the men across the Mexican border are graduates of the Stinson School. If Gen. Funston were but a practising feminist, their teacher would be among the pupils. She offered her services to the Government, and Gen. Funston just smiled!

That is why Katherine made her recent visit to New York, to show Eastern girls how to loop the loop. She herself learned last June. She has done it some thousand times since. She has never had an accident, and, with the help of her seven-cylinder Gnome she thinks she never will.

"Of course, if you would like me to," said Katherine in answer to a conventional question, "I'll go all of a-tremble before I go up. But I haven't had much practice, so I may not do it very well."

"What does it feel like, when you volplane?" she was asked.

"Oh, just falling down," was her informative reply. "I don't like people to look for thrills in aviation," she added, in explanation of her sarcastic tone. "I want aviation to become commonplace, an everyday affair. I'm making it so in San Antonio.

"I invite people to visit my school. Every week I have a crowd of girls and boys there, brought by their teachers to whom I send an invitation. Then they select one to go up in a machine. That makes them interested, and takes the sting of danger out of it.

"Why, I have had nuns bring their convent pupils. Indeed, one of the most intelligent visitors I ever had was a sister who had charge of a class in science. We had a regular lesson round the machine.

"Some day, I hope, all those youngsters will ride in their own aeroplanes, and I'll be glad to think I gave them their first taste."

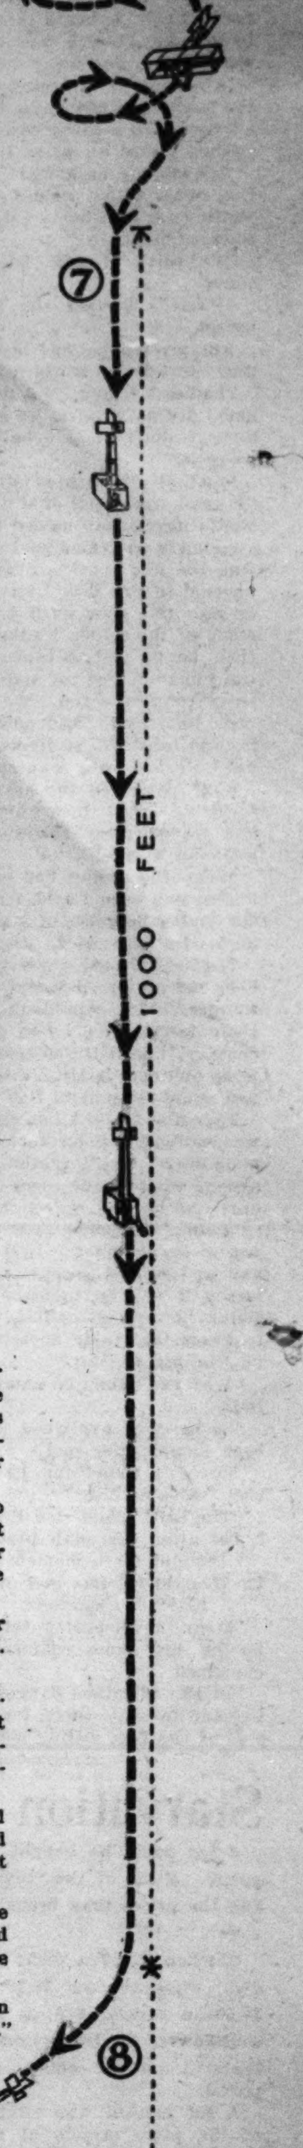
Katherine Stinson spoke with all the fire of a genuine enthusiast. At the moment she was lying back in a railway car which was speeding across the Queensbury Bridge, into New York City. Suddenly she sat up, quite excited.

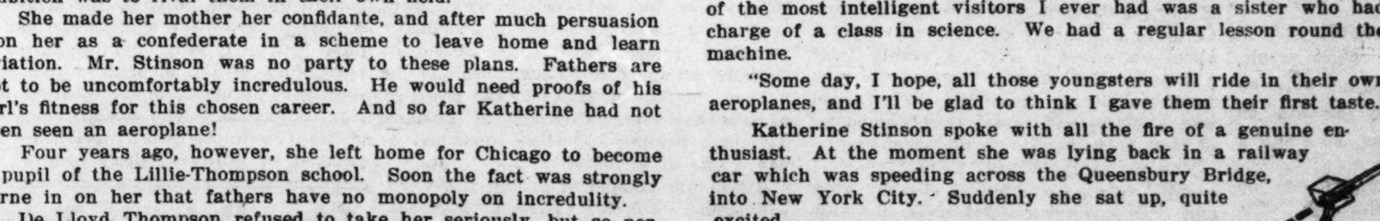
"There's an aeroplane," she cried, pointing over the river, and there it was, a small speck moving across the sky.

"Ah, I'll be happy when I see them everywhere," she said as she watched it cross the river.

And she probably will. For Katherine is the girl of the future, a herald of the day which has dawned and is steadily advancing to its zenith, a day of still more advanced science and still less leisure, when the air will be as cumbered as the earth.

Although the statement that Katherine is an apostle of caution, when she makes so many risky flights, sounds paradoxical, the explanation is found in her confidence in the mechanism on which her life depends.





Lots of Powder (Face) at Women's "Plattsburg"

The day's work begins with setting up exercises before breakfast, at the truly dreadful hour of 7 a. m.

THE second session of the Women's Military Training Camp near Washington, the first of its kind in the history of the country, was completed last week. During the month of May 1000 women—600 of them day students and 400 of them recruits who lived at night as well as in the day at the camp—received instruction in branches wherein women may be useful in war, such as first aid, military cookery and camp sanitation.

The camp was opened May 1 by President Wilson, who made an address. The honorary commandants of the camp were Mrs. Hugh L. Scott, wife of the Chief of Staff, U. S. A.; Mrs. Frank Fletcher, wife of Rear Admiral Fletcher, and Mrs. George Barnett, wife of Gen. Barnett, commandant of the Marine Corps. The recruits were nearly all society women and girls, and one of them, in the following amusing first-person story, tells of the trials and tribulations they underwent while roughing it for the sake of the country.

Scoffers give nickname of "Catsburg" to National Service Camp at Washington, but feminine "Rookie" tells of heartrending sacrifice of fudge and bonbons on altar of patriotism, with only one mirror for five fair ones—No men but marine Sergeants and one or two nice Red Cross doctors. :: :: :: ::

By a Lady "Rookie."

THERE are no small arms in camp, but there is plenty of powder—this seems to be the proper way to begin any yarn about the National Service School. But the powder doesn't do us any good, because our noses are too sunburned to wear it. Incidentally, there are also a few blisters in camp and some muscles that protest. Otherwise we've a clean bill of health, and I think that's doing pretty well for a bunch of girls whose ideas of camp life were originally gleaned from the luxurious hardwood floored and porcelain bath-tubbed camps of the Adirondacks—or from reading about them in books.

Believe me this past fortnight has not been all neglige and bonbons—which is feminine for "beer and skittles." If we had had any such idea it was swiftly and not too gently removed in the course of the first few days we devoted to hard work, simple living and high thinking—I suspect that those who laid claim to blisters were excused from high thinking.

But there! The proper way to tell you about our experiences in roughing it and learning to be "intelligently helpful in time of national stress"—I quote from the perfectly lovely prospectus gotten out by the Woman's Section of the Navy League, which originated the camp—is to begin at the beginning.

It paid to be an early arrival and to take stock of the rookies arriving at the camp in taxicabs, limousines, high-heeled shoes and gay costumes, armed with suit cases and vanity bags, and filled with enthusiasm for two weeks of soldier life. In due time they emerged from the tents in full uniform—khaki skirt and blouse, army shirt and campaign hat.

And right here I achieved modest fame, being the only woman in camp, with the exception of Mrs. George Barnett, whose skirt hung properly. The differences in length and the curious way in which most of these otherwise natty garments dipped in the back was the first thing to strike the critical eye of the feminine observer. It marred an otherwise finest military ensemble.

But to return to our muttons—the opening day. Imagine the confusion—200 perfectly untrained girls let loose in camp under the command of officers whose executive ability and talent for administration might be all right, but whose knowledge of military discipline was, to say the least, elementary; nevertheless they managed somehow to bring order out of chaos; and when the President and Mrs. Wilson arrived for the opening ceremonies everything went off beautifully.

You ought to see our camp now! Everything is in apple-pie order. The girls drill excellently—the "noncom" officers of the Marine Corps who are their drill masters say that they have already reached the degree of perfection it takes the average rookie three months to attain; that they are brighter and quicker than their brothers at Plattsburg, and that they go about the incidental business of being a soldier, tidying camp, policing, serving as orderlies, etc., with dignity and dispatch.

Rather different from one's boudoir—but a hydrant and a toothbrush make an efficient combination.

The camp itself? Well, let me see. It's right on the road which runs from Washington past the Chevy Chase Club. Senator Newlands lent the site, a stretch of meadow leading to a bit of woodland, where the dogwood is all abloom. There are nearly 70 tents, all of regulation army khaki except for the big assembly tent, which seats 600 persons and is used for lectures. That's white, a bit battered, and looks like a circus tent gone wrong. A road bisects the camp, and one side is given over to this circus tent, to the administration tents, where classes are held, to the Red Cross tents, also used for instruction, and to the wireless apparatus.

Over the way is the camp proper, where the day students—there are 300 of them—are allowed at visiting hours. There, in addition to the offices, the big cook tent and dining tent, both splendidly screened, are nearly 50 sleeping tents.

And we live just as army men do, five in a tent. If I didn't know my tentmates well and wasn't fond of them I'd throw my boots at them. We're in such close quarters that our bunks almost touch. Of course, we have electric lights, but out they go at "taps"—9:30 p. m. The floors are of unpainted boards and the beds are canvas cots. For the rest we have a stool or two and sufficient tin basins to make washing possible if not luxurious, a pail and a 12-inch mirror fastened to the center pole.

One mirror for five girls and we have to dress in 15 minutes!

We've been called "Catsburg," and, of course, we've stood all manner of joshing for every jar of cold cream or pair of pink boudoir slippers which found their way into camp. But I protest we have no pink tea existence; and we've done more early rising in two weeks than many of us have ever done in our lives before. Incidentally, we've done more hurried dressing, with divil a maid to help us, but fortunately our campaign hats cover a multitude of sins in the way of hairdressing.

Reveille, 6:30 o'clock! Think of it! Then at 6:40 the guard, a squad of five girls under command of the officer of the day, raises the flag. The O. D. and the guard are changed each day and they are known by the bright red sashes and the authority which clothe them. Breakfast is at 7:30, and in between there's a half-hour of setting up exercises, by companies. Then comes "redding up" time—that's a scandalous departure from camp parlance. You've never seen such busy housekeepers. Girls who've never done a lick of work in their lives turn to and sweep their tents, polish their boots and do all manner of odd jobs. You know, we have to make our own beds and keep our tents clean, not to mention straightening up the company street in front of us. The quarters are too small for all of us to be moving about at once, so each of us in turn is appointed orderly for one day and has the responsibility for keeping things in order on her shoulders. Inspection of tents is at 8:30, so there isn't much time to lose.

From 9 to 9:20, more drill. Then classes until 12:30; dinner, and more classes from 1:30 until 3:30, with talks on preparedness, American history, the Swiss military system and other light and frivolous subjects to keep the afternoon hours from hanging heavy on our hands. From 5 to 6 is recreation, with retreat and supper immediately afterward. In the evening we have singing or illustrated lectures. "Tattoo" at 9 o'clock, which sends us to our tents. At 9:30 "taps" and the lights go out.

The signal works, Morse code, semaphoring—the marines are teaching that—and wireless are about the most interesting things we're taking up in class.

"First aid," with a nice man from the Red Cross for a teacher and our comrades to practice upon; surgical dressing, also under Red Cross instruction, and lessons in elementary hygiene—all these are part of the curriculum. In addition there's a trained seamstress to teach us how to make the supplies that are needed in the Red Cross work; and a nurse who gives instructions in making soups and jellies for the sick. She has a little stove and a wee refrigerator in her tent.

The regulations about visitors are strict. No guests except between 5 and 6 o'clock. Then we may receive our beaux as well as feminine callers; but not even then are they allowed to "quarters." Indeed, all the regulations are strict, and no one can plead ignorance of the law in extenuation of an infringe-

The Ladies of the Lake

the water was shattered as with a subterranean explosion; a geyser of scintillating spray shot upward flashing, foaming, towering a hundred feet into the air. And through it I seemed to catch a glimpse of a vast, quivering, twisting mass of silver falling back with a crash into the lake, while the huge fountain rained spray on every side and the little lake rocked and heaved from shore to shore, sending great sheets of surf up over the rocks so high that the very tree tops dripped.

Petrified, dumb, our senses almost paralyzed by the shock, our ears still deafened by the watery crash of that gigantic something that had fallen into the lake, and our eyes starting from their sockets, we stared at the darkness.

Slap—slash—slush went the waves, hitting the shore with a clashing sound almost metallic. Vision and hearing told us that the water in the lake was rocking like the contents of a bathtub.

"G-g-good Lord!" whispered Brown. "Is there a v-volcano under that lake?"

"Did you see that huge, glistening shape that seemed to fall into the water?" I gasped.

"Yes. What was it? A meteor?"

"No. It was something that first came out of the lake and fell back—the way a trout leaps. Heavens! It couldn't have been alive, could it?"

"Wh-wh-what do you mean?" stammered Brown.

"It couldn't have been a f-f-fish, could it?" I asked with chattering teeth.

"No! No! It was as big as a Pullman car! It must have been a falling star. Did you ever hear of a fish as big as a sleeping car?"

I was too thoroughly unnerved to reply. The roaring of the surf had subsided somewhat, enough for another sound to reach our ears—a raucous, gallinacious, squawking sound.

I sprang up and looked at the row of tents. White-robed figures loomed in front of them. The heavy artillery was evidently frightened.

We went over to them, and when we got nearer they chastely scuttled into their tents and thrust out a row of heads—heads hideous with curl papers.

"What was that awful noise? An earthquake?" shrilled the Rev. Dr. Jones. "I think I'll go home."

"Was it an avalanche?" demanded Mrs. Batt, in a deep and shaky voice. "Are we in any immediate danger, young man?"

I said it was probably a flying star which had happened to strike the lake and explode.

"What an awful region!" wailed Miss Dingleheimer. "I've had my money's worth. I wish to go back to New York at once. I'll begin to dress immediately"——

"It might be a million years before another meteor falls in this latitude," I said soothingly

"Or it might be 10 minutes," sobbed Miss Dingleheimer. "What do you know about it, anyway! I want to go home. I'm putting on my stockings now. I'm getting dressed as fast as I can"——

Her voice was blotted out in a mighty crash from the lake. Appalled, I whirled on my heel, just in time to see another huge jet of water rise high in the starlight, another, another, until the entire lake was but a cluster of gigantic geysers exploding a hundred feet in the air, while through them, falling back into the smother of furious foam, great silvery bulks dropped crashing, one after another.

I don't know how long the incredible vision lasted; the woods roared with the infernal pandemonium, echoed and re-echoed from mountain to mountain; the tree tops fairly stormed spray, driving it in sheets through the leaves; and the shores of the lake spouted surf long after the last vast, silvery shape had fallen back again into the water.

As my senses gradually recovered, I found myself supporting Mrs. Batt on one arm and the Rev. Dr. Jones upon my bosom. Both had fainted. I released them with a shudder and turned to look for Brown.

Somebody had swooned in his arms, too.

He was not noticing me, and as I approached him I heard him say something resembling the word "kitten."

In spite of my demoralization, another fear seized me, and I drew nearer and peered closely at what he was holding so nobly in his arms. It was, as I supposed, Angelica White.

I don't know whether my arrival occultly revived her, for as I stumbled over a tent peg she opened her blue eyes, and then disengaged herself from Brown's arms.

"Oh, I am so frightened," she murmured. She looked at me sideways when she said it.

"Come," said I coldly to Brown, "let Miss White retire and lie down. This meteoric shower is over and so is the danger."

He evinced a desire to further soothe and minister to Miss White, but she said, with considerable composure, that she was feeling better; and Brown came unwillingly with me to inspect the heavy artillery lines.

That formidable battery was wrecked, the pieces dismounted and lying tumbled about in their emplacements.

But a vigorous course of cold water in dippers revived them, and we herded them into one tent and quieted them with some soothing prevarication, the details of which I have forgotten; but it was something about a flock of meteors which hit the earth every twelve billion years, and that it was now all over for another such interim, and everybody could sleep soundly with the consciousness of having assisted at a spectacle never before beheld except by a primordial protoplasmic cell.

Which flattered them, I think, for, seated once more at the base of our tree, presently we heard weird noises from the reconcentrados, like the moaning of the harbor bar.

They slept, the heavy guns, like unawakened engines of destruction all a-row in battery. But Brown and I, fearfully excited, still dazed and bewildered, sat with our fascinated eyes fixed on the lake, asking each other what in the name of miracles it was that we had witnessed and heard.

On one thing we were agreed. A scientific discovery of the most enormous importance awaited our investigation.

This was no time for temporizing, for deception, for any species of polite shilly-shallying. We must, on the morrow, tear off our masks and appear before these misguided and feminine victims of our duplicity in our own characters as scientists. We must boldly avow our identities and flatly refuse to stir from this spot until the mystery of this astounding lake had been thoroughly investigated.

And so, discussing our policy, our plans for the morrow, and mutually reassuring each other concerning our common ability to successfully defy the heavy artillery, we finally fell asleep.

III.

DAWN awoke me, and I sat up in my blanket and aroused Brown.

No birds were singing. It seemed unusual, and I spoke of it to Brown. Never have I witnessed such a still, strange daybreak. Mountains, woods and water were curiously silent. There was not a sound to be heard, nothing stirred except the thin veil of vapor over the water, shreds of which were now parting from the shore and steaming slowly upward.

There was, it seemed to me, something slightly uncanny about this lake, even in repose. The water seemed as translucent as a dark crystal and as motionless as the surface of a mirror. Nothing stirred its placid surface, not a ripple, not an insect, not a leaf floating.

Brown had lugged the pneumatic raft down to the shore, where he was now pumping it full. I followed with the paddles, pole and hydroscope. When the raft had been pumped up and was afloat, we carried the reel of gossamer piano wire aboard, followed it, pushed off and paddled quietly through the level cobwebs of mist toward the center of the lake. From the shore I heard a grewsome noise. It originated under one of the row of tents of the heavy artillery. Medusa, snoring, was an awesome sound in that wilderness and solitude of dawn.

I was unscrewing the center plug from the raft and screwing into the empty socket the lens of the hydroscope and attaching the battery, while Brown started his sounding; and I was still busy when an exclamation from my companion startled me.

"We're breaking some records! Do you know it, Smith?"

"Where is the lead?"

"Three hundred fathoms and still running!"

"Nonsense!"

"Look at it yourself! It goes on unreeling. I've put the drag on. Hurry and adjust the hydroscope!"

I sighted the powerful instrument for 2000 feet, altering it from minute to minute as Brown excitedly announced the amazing depth of the lake. When he called out 4000 feet, I stared at him.

"There's something wrong," I began.

"There's nothing wrong!" he interrupted. "Four thousand five hundred! Five thousand! Five thousand five hundred"——

"Are you squatting there and trying to tell me that this lake is over a mile deep!"

"Look for yourself!" he said in an unsteady voice. "Here is the tape! You can read, can't you? Six thousand feet—and running evenly. Six thousand five hundred! * * * Seven thousand! Seven thousand five"——

"It can't be!" I protested.

But it was true. Astounded, I continued to adjust the hydroscope to a range incredible, turning the screw to focus at a mile and a half, at two miles, at two and a quarter, a half, three quarters, three miles, three miles and a quarter—click!

"Good heavens!" he whispered. "This lake is three miles and a quarter deep!"

Mechanically I set the lachet, screwed the hood firm, drew out the black eye mask, locked it, then kneeling on the raft I rested my face in the mask, felt for the lever and switched on the electric light.

Quicker than thought the solid lance of dazzling light plunged down through profundity, and the vast abyss of water was revealed along its pathway.

Nothing moved in those tremendous depths except, nearly two miles below, a few spots of tinsel glittered and drifted like flakes of mica.

At first I scarcely noticed them, supposing them to be vast beds of silvery bottom sand glittering under the electric pencil of the hydroscope. But presently it occurred to me that these brilliant specks in motion were not on the bottom—were a little less than two miles deep, and therefore suspended.

To be seen at all, at two miles' depth, whatever they were, they must have considerable bulk.

"Do you see anything?" demanded Brown.

"Some silvery specks at a depth of two miles."

"What do they look like?"

"Specks."

"Are they in motion?"

"They seem to be."

"Do they come any nearer?"

After a while I answered:

"One of the specks seems to be growing larger * * * I believe it is in motion and is floating slowly upward. * * * It's certainly getting bigger. * * * It's getting longer."

"Is it a fish?"

"It can't be."

"Why not?"

"It's impossible. Fish don't attain the size of whales in mountain ponds."

There was a silence. After an interval I said:

"Brown, I don't know what to make of that thing."

"Is it coming any nearer?"

"Yes."

"What does it look like now?"

"It looks like a fish. But it can't be. It looks like a tiny, silver minnow. But it can't be. Why, if it resembles a minnow in size at this distance—what can be its actual dimensions?"

"Let me look," he said.

Unwillingly I raised my head from the mask and yielded him my place.

A long silence followed. The western mountain tops reddened under the rising sun; the sky grew faintly bluer. Yet, there was not a bird-note in that still place, not a flash of wings, nothing stirring.

Here and there along the lake shore I noticed unusual-looking trees—very odd-looking trees indeed, for their trunks seemed bleached and dead, and as though no bark covered them, yet every stark limb was covered with foliage—a thick foliage so dark in color that it seemed black to me.

I glanced at my motionless companion where he knelt with his face in the mask, then I unslung my field glasses and focused them on the nearest of the curious trees.

At first I could not quite make out what I was looking at; then, to my astonishment, I saw that these stark, gray trees were indeed lifeless, and that what I had mistaken for dark foliage were velvety clusters of bats hanging there asleep—thousands of them thickly infesting and clotting the dead branches with a somber and horrid effect of foliage

I don't mind bats in ordinary numbers. But in such soft, motionless masses they slightly sickened me. There must have been literally tons of them hanging to the dead trees.

"This is pleasant," I said. "Look at those bats, Brown."

When Brown spoke without lifting his head, his voice was so shaken, so altered, that the mere sound of it scared me.

"Smith," he said, "there is a fish in here, shaped exactly like a brook minnow. And I should judge, by the depth it is swimming in, that it is about as long as an ordinary Pullman car."

His voice shook, but his words were calm to the point of commonplace. Which made the effect of his statement all the more terrific.

"A—a minnow—as big as a Pullman car?" I repeated, dazed.

"Larger I think. * * * It looks to me through the hydroscope, at this distance, exactly like a tiny, silvery minnow. It's half a mile down. * * * Swimming about. * * * I can see its eyes; they must be about ten feet in diameter. I can see its fins moving. And there are about a dozen others, much deeper, swimming around. * * * This is easily the most overwhelming contribution made to science since the discovery of the purple-spotted dingle-bock, Bukkus dinglii, * * * We've got to catch one of those gigantic fish!"

"How?" I gasped. "How are we going to catch a minnow as large as a sleeping car?"

"I don't know, but we've got to do it. We've got to manage it, somehow."

"It would require a steel cable to hold such a fish and a donkey engine to reel him in! And what about a hook? And if we had hook, line, steam winch and everything else, what about bait?"

He knelt for some time longer, watching the fish, before he resigned the hydroscope to me. Then I watched it; but it came no nearer, seeming contented to swim about at the depth of a little more than half a mile. Deep under this fish I could see others glittering as they sailed or darted to and fro.

Presently I raised my head and sat thinking. The sun now gilded the water; a little breeze ruffled it here and there where dainty cat's paws played over the surface.

"What on earth do you suppose those gigantic fish feed on?" asked Brown under his breath.

I thought a moment longer, then it came to me in a flash of understanding, and I pointed at the dead trees.

"Bats!" I muttered. "They feed on bats as other fish feed on the little, gauzy-winged flies which dance over ponds! You saw those bats flying over the pond last night, didn't you? That explains the whole thing! Don't you understand? Why, what we saw were these gigantic fish leaping like trout after the bats. It was their feeding time!"

I do not imagine that two more excited scientists ever existed than Brown and I. The joy of discovery transfigured us. Here we had discovered a lake in the Thunder Mountains which was the deepest lake in the world; and it was inhabited by a few gigantic fish of the minnow species, the existence of which, hitherto, had never even been dreamed of by science.

"Kitten," I said, my voice broken by emotion, "which will you have named after you, the lake or the fish? Shall it be Lake Kitten Brown, or shall it be Minnius kittenii? Speak!"

"What about that old party whose name you said had already been given to the lake?" he asked piteously.

"Who? Mrs. Batt? Do you think I'd name such an important lake after her? Anyway, she has declined the honor."

"Very well," he said, "I'll accept it. And the fish shall be known as Minnius Smithii!"

Too deeply moved to speak, we bent over and shook hands with each other. In that solemn and holy moment, surcharged with ecstatic emotion, a deep, distant reverberation came across the water to our ears. It was the heavy artillery, snoring.

Never can I forget that scene; sunshine glittering on the pond, the silent forests and towering peaks, the blue sky overhead, the dead trees where thousands of bats hung in nauseating clusters, thicker than the leaves in Valembrosa—and Kitten Brown and I, cross-legged upon our pneumatic raft, hands clasped in pledge of deathless devotion to science and a fraternity unending.

"And how about that girl?" he asked.

"What girl?"

"Angelica White!"

"Well," said I, "what about her?"

"Does she go with the lake or with the fish?"

"What do you mean?" I asked coldly, withdrawing my hand from his clasp.

"I mean, which of us gets the first chance to win her?" he said, blushing. "There's no use denying that we both have been bowled over by her; is there?"

I pondered for several moments.

"She is an extremely intelligent girl," I said stalling.

"Yes, and then some."

After a few minutes' further thought, I said:

"Possibly I am in error, but at moments it has seemed to me that my marked attentions to Miss White are not wholly displeasing to her. I may be mistaken"——

"I think you are, Smith."

"Why?"

"Because—well, because I seem to think so."

I said coldly:

"Because she happened to faint away in your arms last night is no symptom that she prefers you, is it?"

"No."

"Then why do you seem to think that tactful, delicate and assiduous attentions on my part may prove not entirely unwelcome to this unusually intelligent"——

"Smith!"

"What?"

"Miss White is not only a trained nurse, but she also is about to receive her diploma as a physician."

"How do you know?"

"She told me."

"When?"

"When you were building the fire last night. Also, she informed me that she had relentlessly dedicated herself to a eugenic marriage."

"When did she tell you that?"

"While you were bringing in a bucket of water from

THE POST-DISPATCH SUNDAY MAGAZINE begins herewith the publication of a series of six diverting short stories by Robert W. Chambers, the most popular and the highest priced of American writers of fiction. They all deal with the adventures of Prof. Percy Smith, B. S., D. F., etc., curator of the Department of Anthropology of the Bronx Zoo; but each story is complete in itself.

"THE LADIES OF THE LAKE," with which the series begins, will be found to assay one or more laughs to every sentence. The hero, Prof. Smith, is one of the most delectable characters in recent fiction; wedded faithfully though he is to that stern mistress, Science, he still invariably experiences seismic convulsions of the heart in the presence of every pretty girl. With such a character as the central figure, the whimsical humor of the author builds up comic situations which grow into a carnival of fun.

THE LADIES OF THE LAKE

Number One of a Series of Short Stories by

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

AT the suggestion of several hundred thousand ladies desiring to revel and possibly riot in the saturnalia of equal franchise, the unnamed lakes in that vast and little known region in Alaska bounded by the Ylanqui River and the Thunder Mountains were now being inexorably named after women.

It was a beautiful thought. Already several exquisite, lonely bits of water, gem-set among the eternal peaks, mirrors for cloud and soaring eagle, a glass for the moon as keystone to the towering arch of stars, had been irrevocably labeled.

Already there was Lake Amelia Jones, Lake Sadie Dingleheimer, Lake Maggie McFadden and Lake Mrs. Gladys Doolittle Batt.

I longed to see these lakes under the glamour of their newly added beauty.

Imagine, therefore, my surprise and happiness when I received the following communication from my revered and beloved chief, Prof. Farrago, dated from the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, whither he had been summoned in haste to examine and pronounce upon the identity of a very small bird, supposed to be a specimen of that rare and almost extinct creature, the two-toed titmouse, Musititta doutotus, to be scientifically exact, as I invariably strive to be.

The important letter in question was as follows:

To Percy Smith, B. S., D. F., etc., etc., Curator, Department of Anthropology, Administration Building, Bronx Park, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Smith: Several very important and determined ladies, recently honored by the Government in having a number of lakes in Alaska named after them, have decided to make a pilgrimage to that region, inspired by a characteristic desire to gaze upon the lakes named after them individually.

They request information upon the following points:

1st. Are the waters of the lakes in that locality sufficiently clear for a lady to do her hair by? In that event, the expedition will not burden itself with looking glasses.

2nd. Are there any hotels? (You need merely say, no. I have tried to explain to them that it is, for the most part, an unexplored wilderness, but they insist upon further information from you.)

3rd. If there are hotels, is there also running water to be had? (You may tell them there is plenty of running water.)

4th. What are the summer outdoor amusements? (You may inform them that there is plenty of bathing, boating, fishing and an abundance of shade trees. Also, excellent mountain climbing to be had in the vicinity. You need not mention the pastimes of "Hunt the Flea" or "Dodge the Skeeter.")

I am not by nature cruel, Mr. Smith, but when these ladies informed me that they had decided to penetrate that howling and unexplored wilderness without being burdened or interfered with by any member of my sex, for one horrid and criminal moment I hoped they would. Because in that event none of them would ever come back.

However, in my heart milder and more humane sentiments prevailed. I pointed out to them the peril of their undertaking, the dangers of an unexplored region, the necessity of masculine guidance and support.

My earnestness and solicitude were, I admit, prompted partly by a desire to utilize this expensively projected expedition as a vehicle for the accumulation of scientific data.

As soon as I heard of it I conceived the plan of attaching two members of our Bronx Park scientific staff to the expedition—you and Mr. Brown.

But no sooner did these determined ladies hear of it than they repelled the suggestion with indignation.

Now, the matter stands as follows: These ladies don't want any man in the expedition; but they have at last realized that they've got to take a guide or two. And there are no feminine guides in Alaska.

Therefore, considering the immense and vital importance of such an opportunity to explore and report upon this unknown region at somebody else's expense, I suggest that you and Brown meet these ladies at Lake Mrs. Susan W. Pillsbury, which lies on the edge of the region to be explored; that you, without actually perjuring yourselves too horribly, convey to them the misleading impression that you are the promised guides provided for them by a cowed and avuncular Government; and that you take these fearsome ladies about and let them gaze at their reflections in the various lakes named after them; and that, while the expedition lasts, you secretly make such observations, notes, reports and collections of the flora and fauna of the region as your opportunities may permit.

No time is to be lost. If, at Lake Susan B. Pillsbury, you find regular guides awaiting these ladies, you will bribe these guides to go away and you yourselves will then impersonate the guides. I know of no other way for you to explore this region, as all our available resources at Bronx Park have already been spent in painting appropriate scenery to line the cages of the mammalia, and also in the present exceedingly expensive expedition in search of the polka-dotted boom-bock, which is supposed to inhabit the jungle beyond Lake Niggerplug.

My most solemn and sincere wishes accompany you. Bless you! FARRAGO.

II

THIS, then, is how it came about that "Kitten" Brown and I were seated, one midgeful morning in July, by the pellucid waters of Lake Susan W. Pillsbury, gnawing sections from a greasily fried trout, upon which I had attempted culinary operations.

Brown's baptismal name was William; but the unfortunate young man was once discovered indiscreetly embracing a pretty assistant in the Administration Building at Bronx, and, furthermore, was overheard to address her as "Kitten."

So Kitten Brown it was for him in future. After he had fought all the younger members of the scientific staff in turn, he gradually became resigned to this annoying nom d'amour.

Lightly but thoroughly equipped for scientific field research, we had arrived at the rendezvous in time to bribe the two guides engaged by the Government to go back to their own firesides.

A week later the formidable expedition of representative ladies arrived; and now they were sitting on the shore of Lake Susan W. Pillsbury, at a little distance from us, trying to keep the midges from their features and attempting to eat the fare provided for them by me.

I myself couldn't eat it. No wonder they murmured. But hunger goaded them to attack the greasy mess of trout and fried cornmeal.

Kitten was saying to me:

"Our medicine chest isn't very extensive. I hope they brought their own. If they didn't some among us will never again see New York."

I stole a furtive glance at the unfortunate women. There was one among them—but let me first enumerate their heavy artillery:

There was the Rev. Dr. Amelia Jones, blonde, adipose and close to the four-score mark. She stepped high in the equal franchise ranks. Nobody had ever had the temerity to answer her back.

There was Miss Sadie Dingleheimer, 50, emaciated, anemic and gauntly glittering with thick-lensed eyeglasses. She was the president of the National Prophylactic Club, whatever that may be.

There was Miss Margaret McFadden, a Titian, profusely toothed, muscular and president of the Hair Dressers' Union of the United States.

There was Mrs. Gladys Doolittle Batt, a grass one—Batt being represented as a vanishing point—president of the National Eugenic and Purity League; tall, gnarled, sinuously powerful and prone to emotional attacks. The attacks were directed toward others.

These, then, composed the heavy artillery. The artillery of the light brigade consisted only of a single piece. Her name was Angelica White, a delegate from the Trained Nurses' Association of America. The nurses had been too busy with their business to attend such picnics, so one had been selected by lot to represent the busy association on this expedition.

Angelica White was a tall, fair, yellow-haired girl of twenty-two or three, with violet-blue eyes and red lips, and a way of smiling a little when spoken to—but let that pass. I mean only to be scientifically minute. A passion for fact has ever obsessed me. I have little literary ability and less desire to sully my pen with that degraded form of letters known as fiction. Once in my life my mania for accuracy involved me lyrically. It was a short poem, but an earnest one:

Truth is mighty and must prevail.
Otherwise it were inadvisable to tell the tale.

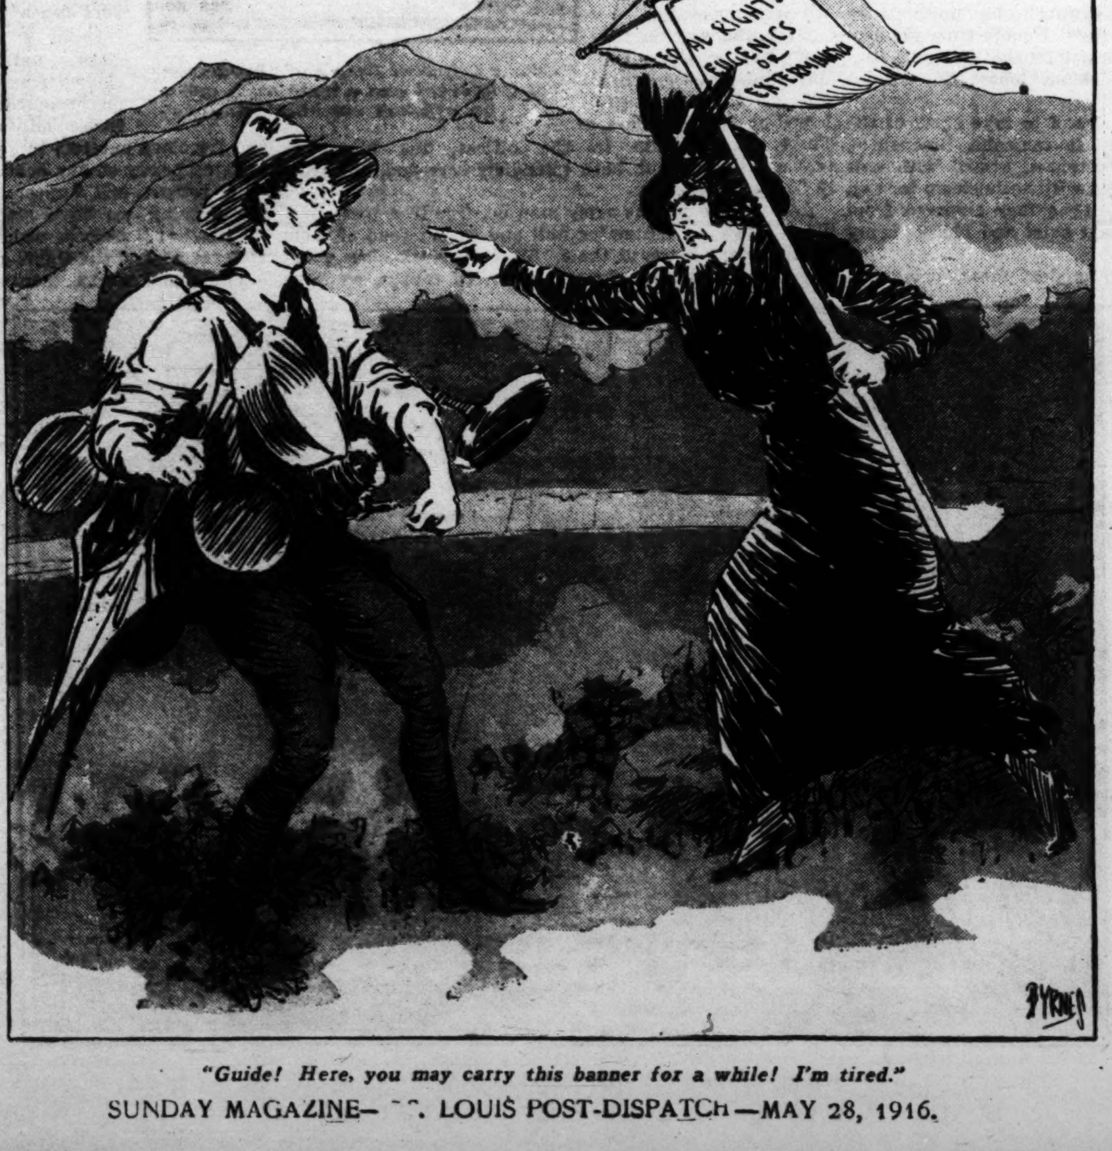
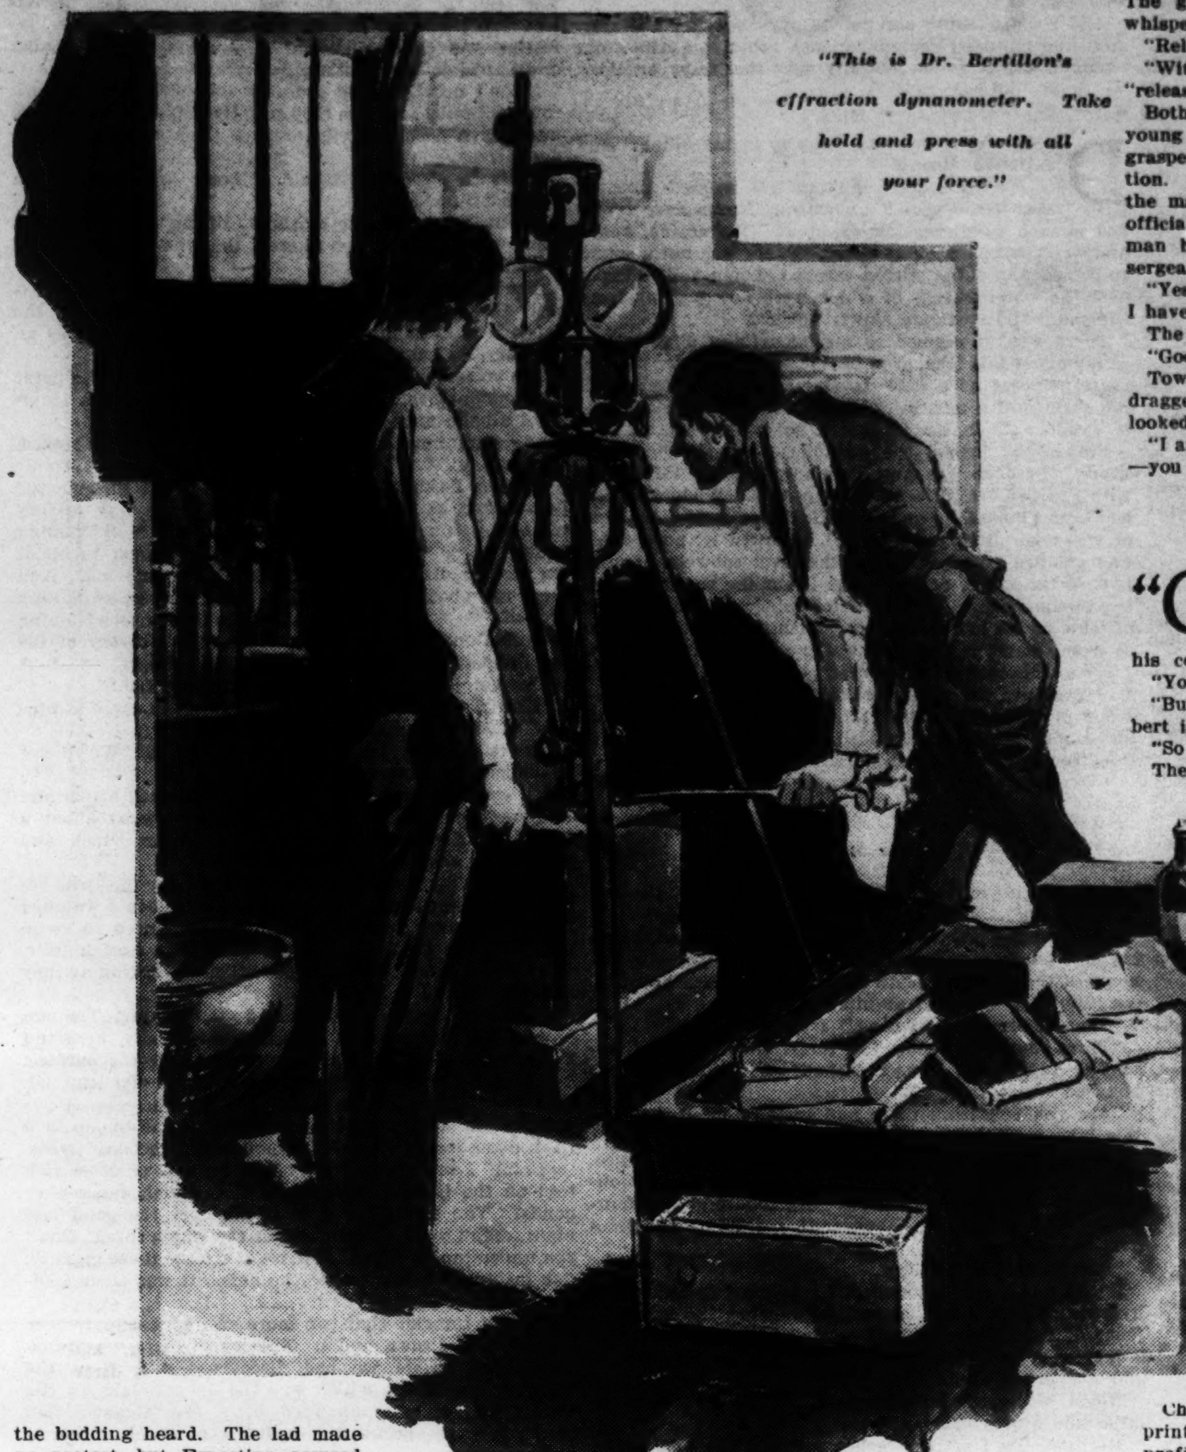
I bestowed it upon the New York Evening Post, but declined remuneration. My message belonged to



"Guide! Here, you may carry this banner for a while! I'm tired."



"This is Dr. Bertillon's effraction dynanometer. Take hold and press with all your force."

the budding heard. The lad made no protest, but Ernestine assured him she would look after him.

"All right, sonny," she said, and took his head between her two hands, ignoring Benoit's angry protests. "What's your name?"

The boy blushed.

"Paul," he murmured.

Francois Bonbonne, the proprietor, arrived just then. Behind Bonbonne came Bouzille.

Benoit caught sight of "Hogshead" Geoffroy and immediately offered to clink glasses with him; he pushed a glass toward him, inviting him to dip it with the rest into the steaming bowl; but Geoffroy was warming up under the influence of alcohol, and offered Benoit, no whit more sober, the gross affront of refusing to clink glasses.

"Why, it's you!" exclaimed Bouzille. Everybody turned round to see whom he was addressing Julot and Berthe with the rest.

"It's the green man of just now," said the nurse to her companion.

"I've seen you before, I know," Bouzille went on; "where have I met you?"

The green man affected to be engrossed in conversation with the friend he had brought to the supper, a shabby individual who carried a guitar. But Bouzille was not to be put off and suddenly exclaimed:

"I know; you are the tramp who was arrested with me, the day of the murder of the Marquise de Langrune!"

The green man growled angrily.

"Well, what about it?"

When he got rid of Bouzille the green man resumed his conversation with his friend with the guitar.

"He hasn't a trace of accent," the latter remarked.

"Oh, it's nothing for a fellow like Gurn to speak French like a Frenchman," said the green man in a low tone. Another duologue rose audibly in another part of the room.

"If the gentleman would like to show his strength there's someone ready to take him on."

"Hogshead" Geoffroy had thrown down his glove!

Silence fell upon the room. It was Mealy Benoit's turn to answer. He turned his huge head toward the corner where Geoffroy was hunched up, saying: "Will the gentleman kindly repeat his last remark?"

Ernestine moved furtively to Julot's side and said, without looking at him:

"The pale man, with the greenish complexion, said to the man with the guitar: 'It's he, all right, because of the burn in the palm of his hand.'"

Julot choked back an oath, and instinctively clenched his fist. Marie, the waitress, was passing.

"Say, Marie," he said, nodding toward the window behind him, "what does that open onto?"

"Onto the cellar," the girl said; "this hall is in the basement."

"And the cellar," Julot went on; "how do you get out of that?"

"You can't," the servant answered; "you have to come through here."

Julot scrutinized the tunnel of a room at the end of which he was sitting; there was only one egress, up the narrow corkscrew stairs leading to the ground floor. At the very foot of that staircase was the table occupied by the green man and the man with the guitar.

"Hogshead" Geoffroy and Mealy Benoit stood confronting one another, "Hogshead" brandishing a chair, Benoit trying to wrench the marble top from a table. A shot rang out. The green man and the man with the guitar had seen who fired it. For the last few minutes these two had never taken their eyes off Julot.

Julot was undoubtedly a wonderful shot. The room was lighted by a current supplied by two wires running along the cornice; Julot had taken aim at the wires and cut them clean in two!

The room was plunged into absolute darkness. Incredible uproar ensued. Above the din a cry of pain rang out, and simultaneously Berthe, lost among the mob, felt two hands groping over her as if trying to identify her. Someone whispered in a vinuous voice: "You are not to help No. 25, the Rambert woman, to escape. Fantomas forbids you! If you disobey, you die!"

The row grew worse. Three men were fighting, the green man being at grips with two at once. The green man, with a strength far beyond the ordinary, gripped an arm and slid his hands along the sleeve, never letting go of the arm, until he reached the wrist and slipped his finger onto the palm of the hand. The owner of the hand uttered an exclamation of pain, for the green man's fingers had touched a still raw wound upon the hollow of the palm.

But at that instant the green man was forced to let go; he fell to the ground. But at the same moment a third combatant joined in the fray and separated the first two, devoting himself to a furious assault upon the man whom the green man had tried to capture. The green man passed a hand over the individual who had rescued him and identified the young man with the budding beard; he collared him firmly by the neck and did not let him go.

In the crush of combatants toward the staircase, bodies were being trampled underfoot and piercing screams rent the air. Francois Bonbonne knew the proper procedure when trouble of this sort broke out, and had sent to the nearest police station for help. Directly the gendarmes arrived, Bonbonne showed them the fire hose; with a skill acquired by practice they proceeded to drench everybody in the supper room.

The sousing drove the mob back to the far end of the room, and when the customers of the Saint Anthony's Pig were quieted down the sergeant threw the light of a lantern over the room and ordered the company to come out, one by one.

As they emerged, the gendarmes slipped handcuffs on them and sent them off in couples to the station. But the room was not quite empty. One unfortunate man was lying on the floor, bathed in his blood. It was the man with the guitar, and a knife had been driven through his breast!

The couple, consisting of the green man and the young man with the budding beard, were taken to the station. The green man produced an identification card and whispered a few words:

"Release that gentleman at once," said the clerk.

"With regard to the other," the green man broke in, "release him, too. I want to keep him with me."

Both men were released from their handcuffs. The young man stared in astonishment, but the other grasped him by the wrist and led him out of the station. In the street they met the sergeant bringing in the man with the guitar, just breathing, in whom the officials had recognized a detective inspector. The green man had a brief but animated conversation with the sergeant.

"Yes, sir, that's all," the sergeant said respectfully; I haven't anyone else."

The green man stamped his foot in wrath.

"Good Lord! Gurn has got away!"

Toward the Rue Montmartre the green man rapidly dragged his companion, then suddenly halted and looked him full in the eyes.

"I am Juve," he said. "And you, Madamoiselle Jeanne—you are Charles Rambert!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Prisoner and a Witness.

"COME now, answer! You are Charles Rambert, and you were Madamoiselle Jeanne?" Juve hailed a passing cab. "Get in," he ordered, gave an address to the driver and turned to his companion.

"You think it is clever to deny it?"

"But you are wrong," Paul insisted. "Charles Rambert is dead."

"So you know that, do you?"

The lad began to tremble. Juve smiled gently, then he went on in a friendly tone. "It's stupid to deny what can't be denied. Therefore"——

"Well," Paul acknowledged, "I am Charles Rambert. Where are you taking me now—to prison?"

Juve shrugged his shoulders.

"You want to know too much. We are on the quays, near the Law Courts, and the police station. You will gain nothing my attempting to get away. That is really good advice."

The cab stopped at the Tour Pointue. Juve made his companion alight, paid the driver, and walked up to the first floor of the building. It was daylight and men were coming on duty. Juve went down a long passage and opened a door.

"Go in," he ordered.

Charles Rambert found himself in the measuring room of the anthropometric service. The detective called out: "Hector, please!" and one of the men on duty came hurrying in.

"I don't want you to look up my companion's record," Juve said. "Take his measurements carefully."

Charles Rambert submitted to having his fingerprints taken, to being photographed, full face and in profile, and to having the width of his head measured with caliper compasses.

Then Juve left the armchair in which he had been resting, and laid his hand upon his shoulder with a certain gentleness.

"Come, there are other points I wish to examine you on." He led him along a dark corridor, opened a door and pushed the lad in before him. "This is where we make the dynamometer tests," he said.

A layman might have supposed it was some carpenter's shop. Pieces of wood, of various shapes and sizes and sorts, were arranged along the wall; in glass cases were strips of metal, five or six inches long, and of varying thickness.

"For pity's sake, M. Juve, tell me what you are going to do with me," Charles Rambert implored.

The detective smiled.

"What am I going to do with you, eh? That depends upon a good many things."

Juve drew into the middle of the room an article composed of a metal body screwed on to a strong tripod, with a lower tray that moved backwards and forwards, and two dynamometers worked by an ingenious piece of mechanism. Juve explained.

"This is Dr. Bertillon's effraction dynamometer. I am going to find out whether you are deserving of some interest." Juve slipped into a notch a thin strip of wood, and from a chest took a tool which Charles Rambert recognized as a jimmy. "Take hold of that," said Juve. "Put the jimmy into this groove, and press with all your force. If you can move that needle to a point which I know, and which it is difficult but not impossible to reach, you may congratulate yourself on being in luck."

Charles Rambert exerted all his force upon the lever. Juve stopped him soon.

"That's all right," he said, and, substituting a strip of sheet iron for the strip of wood, handed another tool to the lad. "Try again."

A few seconds later Juve examined both the strip of metal and the strip of wood, gave a click with his tongue, and seemed to be pleased.

"Charles Rambert," he remarked, "Dr. Bertillon's new apparatus is an uncommonly useful invention."

An attendant came into the room.

"Ah, there you are, M. Juve: I have been looking for you everywhere. There is someone asking for you who says you have given him an appointment."

Juve took the card.

"That's all right," he said. "Tell him I will be with him in a minute." Juve looked at Charles Rambert with a smile. "You are played out," he said; "I will take you to a room where you can sleep for a good hour while I go and see this visitor." He led the lad into a small waiting room.

Juve hurried downstairs to the parlor.

The visitor rose as the door opened and Juve made a formal bow.

"M. Gervais Aventin?" he said.

"Sir," Juve began, "I sent you that pressing invitation to come to Paris, because from inquiries I had made I was sure you were a man who would not resent the world. I don't mean to the newspaper.

Her eyes, then, were tinted with that indefinable and agreeable nuance which modifies blue to a lilac or violet hue.

Watching her askance, I was deeply sorry that my cooking seemed to pain her.

"Guide!" said Mrs. Doolittle Batt, in that remarkable, booming voice of her.

"Ma'am!" said Kitten Brown and I with spontaneous alacrity, leaping from the ground as though shot at.

"This cooking," she said, with an ominous stare at us, "is atrocious. Don't you know how to cook?"

I said, with a smiling attempt at ease:

"There are various ways of cooking food for the several species of mammalia which an all-wise Providence"——

"Do you think you're cooking for wild cats?" she demanded.

Our smiles faded.

"It's my opinion that you're incompetent," remarked the Rev. Dr. Jones, slapping at midges with a hand that might have rocked all the cradles of the nation, but had not rocked any.

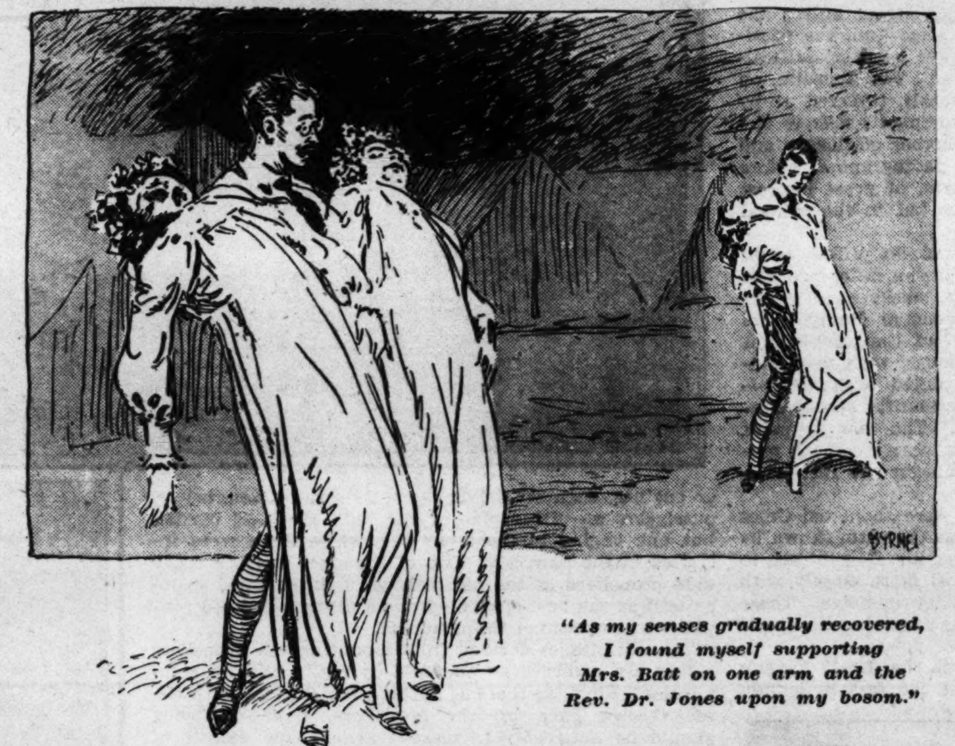
"We're not getting our money's worth," said Miss Dingleheimer, "even if the Government does pay your salaries."

I looked appealingly from one stony face to another. In Miss McFadden's eye there was the somber glint of battle. She said:

"If you can guide us no better than you cook, God save us all this day week!" And she hurled the contents of her tin plate into Lake Susan W. Pillsbury.

Mrs. Doolittle Batt arose:

"Come," she said; "it is time we started. What is the name of the first lake we may hope to encounter?"



"As my senses gradually recovered, I found myself supporting Mrs. Batt on one arm and the Rev. Dr. Jones upon my bosom."

We knew no more than did they, but I said that Lake Gladys Doolittle Batt was the first, hoping to placate that fearsome woman.

"Come on, then!" she cried, picking up her carved and varnished mountain staff.

Miss Dingleheimer had brought one, too, from the Catskills.

So Kitten Brown and I loaded our mule, set him in motion and drove him forward into the unknown.

Where we were going we had not the slightest idea; the margin of the lake was easy traveling, so easy that we never noticed that we had already gone around the lake three times, until Mrs. Batt recognized the fact and turned on us furiously.

I didn't know how to explain it, except to say feebly that I was doing it as a sort of preliminary canter to harden and inure the ladies.

"We don't need hardening!" she snarled. "Do you understand that!"

I comprehended that at once. But I forced a sickly smile and skipped forward in the wake of my mule, with something of the same abandon which characterizes the flight of an unwelcome dog.

In the terrified ear of Kitten I voiced my doubts concerning the prospects of a pleasant journey.

We marched in the following order: Arthur, the heavily laden mule, led; then came Kitten Brown and myself, all hung over with stewpans, shotguns, rifles, cartridge belts, ponchos and the toilet reticules of the ladies; then marched the Rev. Dr. Jones, and, in order, filing behind her, Miss Dingleheimer, Mrs. Batt, Miss McFadden and Miss White—the latter in her trained nurse's costume and wearing a red cross on her sleeve—an idea of Mrs. Batt, who believed in emergency methods.

Mrs. Batt also bore a banner, much interfered with by the foliage, bearing the inscription:

EQUAL RIGHTS!
EUGENICS OR EXTERMINATION!

After a while she shouted:

"Guide! Here, you may carry this banner for a while! I'm tired."

Kitten and I took turns with it after that. It was hard work, particularly as one by one in turn they came up and hung their parasols and shopping reticules all over us. We plodded forward like a pair of moving department stores, not daring to shift our burdens to Arthur, because we had already stuffed into the panniers of that simple and dignified animal all our collecting boxes, cyanide jars, butterfly nets, notebooks, reels of piano wire, thermometers, barometers, hydrometers, stereometers, aeronoids, adnoids—everything, in fact, that guides are not supposed to pack into the woods, but which we had smuggled unbeknown to those misguided ones we guided.

And to make room for our scientific paraphernalia, we had been obliged to do a thing so mean, so inexpressibly low, that I blush to relate it. But facts are facts; we discarded nearly a ton of feminine impedimenta. There was fancy work of all sorts in the making or in the raw—materials for knitting, embroidering, tatting, sewing, hemming, stitching, drawn work, lacemaking, crocheting.

Also, we disposed of almost half a ton of toilet necessities—powder, perfumery, cosmetics, hot-water bags, slippers, negligees, novels, magazines, bonbons, chewing gum, hat boxes, gloves, stockings, underwear.

We left enough apparel for each lady to change once. They'd have to do some scrubbing now. Science cannot be halted by hatpins; cosmos cannot be sidetracked by cosmetics.

Toward sunset we came upon a small, crystal-clear pond, set between the bases of several lofty mountains. I was ready to drop with fatigue, but I nerved myself, drew a deep, exultant breath, and with one of those fine, sweeping gestures, I cried:

"Lake Mrs. Gladys Doolittle Batt! Eureka! At last! Excelsior!"

There was a profound silence behind me. I turned, striving to mask my apprehension with a smile. The ladies were regarding the pond in surprise. I admit that it was a pond, not a lake.

Injecting into my voice the last remnants of glee which I could summon, I shouted, "Eureka!" and began to caper about as though the size and beauty of the pond had affected me with irrepressible enthusiasm, hoping by my emotion to stampede the convention.

The cold voice of Mrs. Doolittle Batt checked my transports:

"Is that puddle named after me?" she demanded.

"M-ma'am?" I stammered.

"If that wretched frog pond has been christened with my name, somebody is going to get into trouble," she said, ominously.

A profound silence ensued. Arthur patiently switched at flies. As for me, I looked up at the majestic pines, gazed upon the lofty and eternal hills, then ventured a sneaking glance all around me. But I could discover no avenue of escape in case Mrs. Batt should charge me.

"I had been informed," she began dangerously, "that the majestic body of water, which I understood had been honored with my name, was 12 miles long and three miles wide. This appears to be a puddle!"

"B-b-but it's very p-pretty," I protested feebly. "It's quite round and clear, and it's nearly a quarter of a mile in d-diameter"——

"Mind your business!" retorted Mrs. Doolittle Batt. "I've been swindled!"

Kitten Brown knew more about women than did I. He said in a fairly steady voice:

"Madame, it is an outrage! The women of this mighty nation should make the Government answerable for its duplicity! Your lake should have been at least 20 miles long!"

Everybody turned and looked at Kitten. He was a handsome dog.

"This young man appears to have some trace of common sense," said Mrs. Batt. "I shall see to it that the Government is held responsible for this odious act of insulting duplicity. I—I won't have my name given to this—this wallow!" She advanced toward me, her small eye blazing. I retreated to leeward of Arthur.

"Guide!" she said, in a voice still trembling with passion. "Are you certain that you have made no mistake? You appear to be unusually ignorant."

"I am afraid there can be no room for doubt," I said, almost scared out of my senses.

"And on top of this outrage, am I to eat your cooking?" she demanded passionately. "Did I come here to look at this frog pond and choke on your cooking? Did I?"

"I can cook," said a clear, pleasant voice at my elbow. And Miss White came forward, cool, clean, fresh as a posy in her uniform and cap. I immediately got behind her.

"I can cook very nicely," she said smilingly. "It is part of my profession, you know. So if you two guides will be kind enough to build the fire and help me"——

She let her violet eyes linger on me for an instant, then on Brown. A moment later he and I were jostling each other in our eagerness to obey her slightest suggestion. It is that way with men.

So we built her a fire and unpacked our provisions, and we waited very politely on the ladies when dinner was ready.

It was a fine dinner—coffee, bacon, flapjacks, soup, ash bread, stewed chicken.

The heavy artillery, made ravenous by their journey, required vast quantities of ammunition. They banqueted largely. I gazed in amazement at Mrs. Doolittle Batt as she swallowed one flapjack after another, while her eyes bulged larger and larger.

Nor was the capacity of Miss Dingleheimer and the Rev. Dr. Jones to be mocked at by pachyderms.

Brown and I left them eating while we erected the row of little tents. Every lady had demanded a separate tent.

So we cut saplings, set up the silk, drove pegs and brought armfuls of balsam boughs.

I was afraid they'd demand their knitting and other utensils, but they had eaten to repletion, and were sleepy; and as each toilet case or reticule contained also a nightgown, they drew the flaps of their several tents without insisting that we unpack Arthur's panniers.

They all disappeared within their tents except Miss White, who insisted on cooking something for us, although we protested that the scraps of the banquet were all right for mere guides.

She stood beside us for a few minutes, watching us busy with our delicious dinner.

"You poor fellows," she said gently. "You are nearly starved."

It is agreeable to be sympathized with by a tall, fair, fresh young girl. We looked up, simpering gratefully.

"This is really a most lovely little lake," she said, gazing out across the still, crystalline water which was all rose and gold in the sunset, save where the somber shapes of the towering mountains were mirrored in glassy depths.

"It's odd," I said, "that no trout are jumping. There ought to be lots of them there, and this is their jumping hour."

We all looked at the quiet, oval bit of water. Not a circle, not the slightest ripple disturbed it.

"It must be deep," remarked Brown.

We gazed up at the three lofty peaks, the bases of which were the shores of this tiny gem among lakes. Deep, deep, plunging down into dusty profundity, the rocks fell away sheer into limpid depths.

"That little lake may be a thousand feet deep," I said. "In 1903 Prof. Farrago of Bronx Park measured a lake in the Thunder Mountains, which was 2769 feet deep."

Miss White looked at me curiously.

Into a patch of late sunshine flitted a small butterfly—one of the Grapta species. It settled on a chip of wood, uncoiled its delicate proboscis and spread its fulvous and deeply indented wings.

"Grapta californía," remarked Brown to me.

"Vanessa asteriska," I corrected him. "Note the anal angle of the secondaries and the argentiferous discal area bordering the subcostal nervule."

"The characteristic stripes on the primaries are wanting," he demurred.

"It is double brooded. The summer form lacks the three darker bands."

A few moments' silence was broken by the voice of Miss White.

"I had no idea," she remarked, "that Alaskan guides were so familiar with entomological terms and nomenclature."

We both turned very red.

Brown mumbled something about having picked up a smattering. I added that Brown had taught me.

Perhaps she believed us; her blue eyes rested on us curiously, musingly. Also, at moments, I fancied there was the faintest glint of amusement in them.

She said:

"Two scientific gentlemen from New York requested permission to join this expedition, but Mrs. Batt refused them." She gazed thoughtfully upon the waters of Lake Gladys Doolittle Batt. "I wonder," she murmured, "what became of those two gentlemen."

It was evident that we had betrayed ourselves to this young girl.

She glanced at us again, and perhaps she noticed in our fascinated gaze an expression akin to terror, for suddenly she laughed—such a clear, sweet, silvery little laugh!

"For my part," she said, "I wish they had come with us. I like—men."

With that she bade us goodnight very politely and went off to her tent, leaving us with our hats pressed against our stomachs, attempting by the profundity of our bows to indicate the depth of our gratitude.

"There's a girl!" exclaimed Brown, as soon as she had disappeared behind her tent flaps. "She'll never let on to Medusa, Xantippe, Cassandra and Company. I like that girl, Smith."

"You're not the only one imbued by such sentiments," said I.

He smiled a fatuous and reminiscent smile. He certainly was good looking. Presently he said:

"She has the most delightful way of gazing at a man"——

"I've noticed," I said pleasantly.

"Oh. Did she happen to glance at you that way?" he inquired. I wanted to beat him.

All I said was:

"She's certainly some kitten." Which bottled that young man for a while.

We lay on the bank of the tiny lake, our backs against a huge pine tree, watching the last traces of color fading from peak and tree top.

"Isn't it queer," I said, "that not a trout has splashed? It can't be that there are no fish in the lake."

"There are such lakes."

"Yes, very deep ones. I wonder how deep this is."

"We'll be out at sunrise with our reel of piano wire and take soundings," he said. "The heavy artillery won't wake until they're ready to be loaded with flapjacks."

I shuddered:

"They're fearsome creatures, Brown. Somehow, that resolute and bony one has inspired me with a terror unutterable."

"Mrs. Batt?"

"Yes."

He said seriously:

"She'll make a horrid outcry when she asks for her knitting. What are you going to tell her?"

"I shall say that Indians ambuscaded [illegible] while she was asleep and carried off all those things."

"You lie very nicely, don't you?" he remarked admiringly.

"In vitium ducit culpae fuga," said I. "Besides, they don't really need those articles."

He laughed. He didn't seem to be very much afraid of Mrs. Batt.

It had grown deliciously dusky, and myriads of stars were coming out. Little by little the lake lost its shape in the darkness, until only an irregular star-set area of quiet water indicated that there was any lake there at all.

I remember that Brown and I, reclining at the foot of the tree, were looking at the still and starry surface of the lake, over which numbers of bats were darting after insects; and I recollect that I was just about to speak, when, of a sudden, the silent and luminous surface of

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

THE Marquise de Langrune has been murdered in her home, the Chateau of Beaulieu. Her guests at the time were: President Bonnet, a retired Magistrate; Abbe Sicot, the local priest; the Baronne Vibray, a wealthy young widow; Mlle. Therese Auvernois, the Marquise's granddaughter, and Charles Rambert, aged 18, son of M. Etienne Rambert. The last named, an old friend of the murdered Marquise, arrives at Beaulieu the morning after the tragedy, and accuses his son of the crime. Some weeks later a body found in the river is identified as that of young Rambert. The father is charged with his son's murder, tried and acquitted.

Inspector Juve, the famous Paris detective, holds to his own theory that the murder of the Marquise was one of many crimes committed by FANTOMAS, whose very existence some authorities profess to doubt. Meanwhile the Princess Sonia Danidoff has been robbed—another "Fantomas" transaction.

Suddenly Etienne Rambert is confronted by his supposedly dead son Charles, who has been disguised as a girl. Detective Juve has already made this discovery. The elder Rambert persists in believing his son a criminal, declaring that Charles inherited the taint of insanity from his mother, Mme. Alice Rambert. This unfortunate lady is kept in Dr. Biron's private asylum, notwithstanding her seemingly restored reason. She plans escape, with the help of her attendant, Berthe.

The Mad Woman's Plot.

MME. RAMBERT, reclining on a sofa, in her room, watching her attendant, Berthe, tidying up the slight disorder, made a little gesture of despair.

"Poor Berthe!" she said, "if you knew how sorry I am for having given way to panic!"

"That was nothing," said the attendant.

"You know they have written to your home to say you are cured?"

Mme. Rambert smiled bitterly.

"It is true that my health is better. But what is your opinion about my madness? Have you ever known me to do, or say, anything utterly devoid of reason?"

The attendant, in spite of herself, was obliged to confess:

"No, I never have—that is"——

"That is," Mme. Rambert finished for her, "I have sometimes protested to you that I was shut up here because someone wanted me to be shut up. Why, if I leave this sanatorium, if the doctor sends me back to my family, I shall certainly be put in some other sanatorium before two days are past! Once I was quite glad to be in this place! I felt safe here. But now I must be free, to go to those who will help me escape from the horrible trap in which I have spent the last few years of my life!"

Mme. Rambert's earnest tone convinced the attendant in spite of her own instinct.

"Yes?" she said inquiringly.

"I suppose you know that I am rich, Berthe?" Mme. Rambert went on. "Would you like to make sure of your future forever, and quite easily? You might lose your situation, but if you trust me I will make it up to you a hundredfold, if you will help me to escape from this place! And I have not a minute to lose! A thousand pounds? Two thousand pounds?" and as the attendant was silent, Mme. Rambert slipped a diamond ring off her finger and held it out to the young woman. "Take that as proof of my sincerity," she said, "and the very night that I am free I swear you shall be a rich woman!"

Over the girl's face there suddenly crept a horrible expression of cupidity and desire.

CHAPTER XVI.

Among the Market Porters.

"BOULEVARD ROCHECHOUART," said Berthe, the young asylum nurse, to the conductor as she sprang into the tram. Berthe had elaborated a plan to enable the supposed lunatic to escape.

At the Boulevard Rochechouart she got out and stood looking at a wine shop, the first of many in the street.

Berthe pushed the door a little way open and in a clear voice asked: "Is M. Geoffroy here?" No definite answer forthcoming, she quickly closed the door and went on her way.

She did not desist from her search, and at the sixth shop her question was answered by a deep bass voice from the far end of a smoke-clouded den. "Hogshead Geoffroy? Here!" Berthe went inside.

When you want to see M. "Hogshead" Geoffroy, your procedure is simplicity. Start at the bottom of the Rue Clignancourt, look into every wineshop, and ask whether Hogshead Geoffroy is there. At one or other of the bars you will hear the answer: "Hogshead Geoffroy? Here."

The "Hogshead" is an artist; he hires himself out to public halls to announce in his powerful voice the items on the program. He harangues the crowd on behalf of showmen, and between whiles rolls hogsheads down into cellars, or bottles wine, and even drinks it when he is among friends who have money.

At sight of Berthe, "Hogshead" Geoffroy rose and unceremoniously embraced her.

"Ah-ha! little sister, there you are! Why, I was just that moment thinking of you!" He drew her to the back of the shop, toward a bunch of sturdy, square-shouldered fellows drinking there, to whom he introduced her. "Now, then, mates, try to behave yourselves; I'm bringing a charming young lady to see you, my sister Berthe, little Bob—Bobinette, as we called her when we lived with the old folks."

The men made room and after she had accepted a glass of white wine, Geoffroy bent forward and spoke in a lower tone.

"Well, what do you want with me?"

"To talk to you about something which will interest you," Berthe answered.

"Anything to be got out of it?" was the giant's next inquiry. "Things aren't any too bright, though I think there's going to be an alteration in that respect," and at interminable length he explained that he was a candate for an appointment as market porter, and that morning had sat in the Hotel de Ville wrestling with nothing less than a problem in arithmetic. "To sit for an hour, writing at a table in the great hall of the Hotel de Ville! It made me sweat more than carrying four hundredweight!"

But the company was preparing to make a move. At 6 o'clock the second part of the examination, the physical test, was to be held in the fish market.

The annual competition for appointment as market porter, held at the end of September, is a great event. From many candidates, only two or three of the best are picked. The posts are good, for the number of porters is limited. In the physical test the candidates have to carry a sack of meal weighing three hundredweight a distance of 200 yards in the shortest time.

At 6 o'clock punctually the 200-yard course was carefully cleared and swept of pieces of orange peel, lettuce leaves and bits of vegetable matter which might cause a competitor to slip.

The crowd of onlookers was odd and eclectic. Berthe noticed one extraordinary individual who, though in the last row of all, overtopped the rest by half of his body, being perched on an antiquated tricycle, which provoked the hilarity of the mob.

"What ho, Bouzille!" somebody called out, for the man was a well-known and popular figure, and everybody knew his name.

Someone spoke softly. Berthe turned and saw a sturdy fellow about 25, wearing a blue blouse, a red handkerchief round his neck and a drover's cap; he was well built, powerful, and in spite of his humble dress, had an intelligent face and an almost distinguished manner. A few commonplace remarks were exchanged.

"My name's Julot," said the man.

Berthe replied frankly.

"And I am 'Hogshead' Geoffroy's sister."

A murmur ran round the crowd. Mealy Benoit, going through his trial, came along with rapid, rhythmical step. Surely balanced on his broad shoulders was an enormous sack of meal, three hundredweight. Reaching the goal fresh and fit, he stood displaying the mighty muscles of his chest. The applause was enthusiastic but silence quickly fell again. It was "Hogshead" Geoffroy's turn.

The giant was a splendid sight. The crowd yelled their delight. It seemed that he must beat his rival's time, but all at once Geoffroy almost stopped. He had slipped on a piece of orange peel. He managed to restore the equilibrium of the sack, and finished the course.

As a result of the competition, "Hogshead" Geoffroy and Mealy Benoit were bracketed equal. While Berthe was vehemently discussing the mishap that had befallen Geoffroy, a man in a shabby black overcoat, wearing a jockey cap on his greasy hair, was watching her intently. Julot, her faithful squire for the last two hours, got her away.

"Come," he said, "your brother is waiting," and as she yielded he whispered, "that chap's a dirty-looking rascal."

CHAPTER XVII.

At the Saint Anthony's Pig.

"PAY for a drink, and I'll listen," said "Hogshead" Geoffroy to his sister.

They had gone for a late supper into Saint Anthony's Pig, the most popular tavern in the neighborhood.

A new attraction had been stationed outside the Saint Anthony's Pig for the last few days. Bouzille had come to Paris and on entering the capital his extraordinary equipage had caused a sensation. He had very soon been run in, but as there was nothing really to be objected against the tramp, he had merely been requested not to do it again.

Bouzille had fallen in with the editor of the Auto, and a sensational article about the globe-trotting tramp appeared in the next number. Bouzille woke to find himself famous, and Francois Bonbonne, proprietor of the Saint Anthony's Pig, engaged him to station himself outside the establishment from 11 to 3 every night, in return for his board and lodging and a salary of 5 francs a day, which he generously returned every night in exchange for potations.

The time was about 1:45. The "swells" had withdrawn, and in another 10 minutes the supper room would resume its natural appearance and everybody would be at home. Francois Bonbonne stood, his stout person entirely filling the exit, suggesting that somebody would like to give an order for a hot wine salad.

Berthe, in a corner beside her brother, began to explain.

"There's nothing much, but I want a strong man."

"Any barrels to roll?" he inquired.

Berthe shook her head, her glance resting on a small young man with a budding beard and pale face, who had just taken a seat opposite her.

"I want some bars removed from a window."

"Then I will help you. It will be worth something, won't it?" He broke off short, for a man sitting close by seemed to be listening. Berthe turned with a smile to her brother.

"That's all right; I know that man," and she held out a friendly hand to the individual who seemed to be spying. "Good evening again, M. Julot. I did not notice you were here."

Julot shook hands and went on talking with his own companion, a clean-shaven fellow.

"Go on, Billy Tom," he said in low tones. "Tell me what happened."

"Well, there has been the devil to pay at the Royal Palace. Muller was suddenly kicked out, owing to the door having been opened for the chap who worked the robbery."

"Muller?" said Julot. "Who is Muller?"

"The watchman on the second floor."

"And who turned him out?"

"I think his name is Juve."

"Oh—ho!" Julot muttered. "I thought as much!"

There was a noise at the entrance, and down the corkscrew stairs came Ernestine, a well-known figure, and Mealy Benoit, very drunk.

Benoit reached an empty seat on a lounge, into which he crushed, half squashing the pale young man with

If We Could See the Newest Z

Improved type of German air raiders, as shown by L-15, shot down in the Thames, is monster fighting machine 540 feet long, with lift of 33 tons—Has new streamline stern, simplified steering gear and radical rearrangement of motors and propellers—Carries crew of 18, six machine guns and two tons of bombs and ammunition

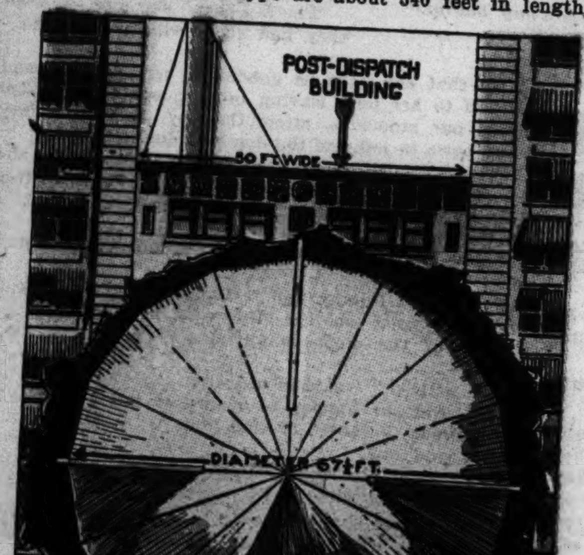
THESE pictures illustrate what a looming portent of the skies a visiting airship of the newest Zeppelin type would form should it hover above downtown St. Louis. Its length would extend above Olive street from Seventh street to Broadway, and its width would more than fill Olive street from building line to building line. Such are the huge foes which Germany is launching across the North Sea, with a bird's contempt of England's ocean bulwarks, to harass the British Isles with their bombs.

The destruction of the Zeppelin L-15, which was shot down by British gunners in the mouth of the Thames a few days ago, proves that the lighter-than-air flying cruiser is still in the experimental stage, unlike the aeroplane, the submarine and the siege gun, the possibilities and limitations of which have been scientifically established in the practice of war. The Zeppelin, on the other hand, is being industriously tinkered at by the Germans, in the hope of remedying its defects and turning it into a military arm of higher efficiency; and the L-15, closely inspected and photographed before it sank, showed many novel features, of great interest not only to students of aeronautics but to the general public.

The most striking innovation was its difference in shape of hull from previous Zeppelins—a difference also shown in the LZ-77, which a few weeks earlier was brought down by French motor guns at Revigny, its crew of 15 being killed. The hull of the ante-bellum Zeppelin was in the form of a cylinder, with two symmetrical ogival (shaped like a pointed arch) ends—which, from the point of view of scientific aerodynamics, was a highly inefficient form. The new Zeppelin has a blunter nose, but her stern is nearly conical, giving a stream-line effect greatly reducing the resistance of the air.

Moreover, the original Zeppelins were about ten times the length of their diameter, whereas the ratio shown by experiment to afford the smoothest air flow is six to one. The L-15 approached the ideal more closely with a hull only eight times as long as its diameter. These improvements cannot but endow the aircraft with greater speed at the same expenditure of power.

An examination of the wreck of the LZ-77 reveals that vessels of this type are about 540 feet in length, and that they have a displacement of more than 1,100,000 cubic feet, which means the astonishing lifting power of about 33 tons—a load which it would require 11 three-ton trucks to carry on the ground.



The L-15, in diameter, would overlap the width of the Post-Dispatch building several feet on either side, the figures being 67 1-2 and 54 feet, respectively.

The photograph of the L-15, taken before she broke up, showed clearly that her steering apparatus had been vastly simplified over that of her forerunners. Instead of the former intricacy of ailerons, of small and parallel rudders and elevators, the vertical and horizontal rudders of the new Zeppelin are mere flaps, attached to the vertical and horizontal stabilizing fins. These are said to make for greater simplicity and economized power of operation. In addition, the conical shape of the stern has enabled the builders to increase the surface area of the rudders, so that the efficiency of the steering organs should be still farther enhanced.

The distribution of power has been very radically redesigned in the latest Zeppelins, the present system being one that follows marine practice more closely than was previously customary. While the 1914-15 type of Zeppelin was propelled by two sets of two 200-horsepower engines, each set driving two air screws mounted on outriggers on either side of the hull, the L-15 carried but one engine in the front car, while three were installed in the rear car. Two of the stern engines drove side propellers in the old fashion; but the third one—as well as the bow engine—drove a directly-coupled propeller at the rear of the gondolas.

The advantages derived from mounting the propellers astern are regarded as manifold by authorities on aeronautics. First, as there is nothing to interfere with the air thrown back by the propellers, their efficiency should be noticeably increased; second, the danger of sparks from the exhaust igniting the hydrogen of the gasbag should become remote; and, third, the mounting of the engine in the stern car affords more room in the forward gondola for the navigating personnel.

It is assumed that, following out this idea, the stern car will ultimately become the sole engine room, while the bow car will become the navigating bridge and nothing else. That this has not yet been carried out is assumed to be attributable to the lack of higher-powered engines, rather than to some obscure reason for keeping one engine and propeller forward.

The armament of the new vessels is in some respects different from that of their prototypes. The bomb room has remained in the middle of the gangway; but the crude method of dropping the bombs by hand has been superseded by a scientific appliance whereby the bombs are electrically released. In addition to the two machine guns in each car, two more have been provided for arming the lookout post, atop the hull, and connected with the bomb room by means of a stairway encased in a chimney inside the gasbag.

Most important of all is the fact, as computed by experts, that vessels of the type of the L-15 and LZ-77 are able to lift more than double the useful load which the previous type was capable of raising. Some economy of weight was achieved in the engines, which, with equal power, were each 880 pounds as against 985 pounds in weight. The saving of 105 pounds on each of the four motors represents a total economy of 420 pounds—meaning another fifth of a ton of fuel or ammunition. But the greatest saving lies in the fact that the newest Zeppelins, on account of their increased size, displace nearly ten tons more than the vessels of the previous type.

It is estimated that the L-15 could lift, out of its total weight of 33 tons, a useful load of 11 1-2 tons, as against a little more than five out of 23 for the older craft. According to a statement emanating from Count Zeppelin's secretary, the load of ammunition amounts to two tons—this would leave 9½ tons available for crew, ballast and fuel. Another advantage of the greater displacement is shown in the estimation that the climbing power of the new vessels is two-fifths more than that of the previous ones.

Of the super-Zeppelins lately destroyed, the LZ-77 carried 15 men and the L-15, whose crew was captured, two officers and 16 men. Assuming the latter figure to represent the war complement of the latest Zeppelins, they would probably be distributed as follows: The commander, three helmsmen, chief engineer and five mechanics, six gunners and a bomb crew of two. A complement of 18 men represents a load of about one and a half tons; there would then remain eight tons for ballast and fuel.

It is not very well known that Zeppelins, like steamships, carry water ballast, but vessels of the older type carried one and one-half tons of water ballast, and the newer type carries twice as much or more—three tons or more probably four. This would leave four tons available for fuel.

The quantity of ballast carried has a decisive influence upon the height at which a Zeppelin can navigate and consequently upon its relative immunity from anti-aircraft guns. The older Zeppelins sailed usually at a height of 5000 feet, and rarely reached the 9000-foot mark, except in trials; the new Zeppelins often reach an altitude of 10,000 feet, and currently are seen operating on the 7000-foot level.

When a Zeppelin leaves her garage, her buoyancy is adjusted so that she can just keep floating at a low level. Altitude can be attained in two ways—by dynamic life, or the expenditure of engine power, and static lift, obtained by jettisoning ballast, burning fuel or, in extreme cases, by an enforced dropping of bombs.

As the greater the saving of fuel the greater the cruising radius of the vessel, it is preferred to attain altitude by means of static as well as of dynamic lift—through the sacrifice of ballast as well as of fuel. Thus the quantity of ballast which the craft can carry becomes a matter of critical moment.

As the fuel consumption of the four-engine unit amounts to about 450 pounds per hour, four tons of fuel would keep the engines running for about 18 hours at a full speed of 55 knots an hour, and thus insure a cruising radius of 990 nautical miles. The latter figure may be perhaps reduced 10 per cent, if allowance is made for fuel burnt while climbing.

But if it were feasible to run the vessels on the homeward journey, after she had been lightened through the expenditure of fuel, ballast and bombs, with two engines only, the radius would be considerably increased. With two engines the ship would develop a speed of 38.8 knots, which would mean a saving of 225 pounds of fuel per hour. This would give her a radius as follows: Nine hours at 55 knots, 495 nautical miles; 18 hours at
